

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. ## PREFACE TO NINTH EDITION

Since the issue of the eighth edition of this work, in 1880, the accumulation of important rulings bearing on it has required its careful revision. In carrying out this revision I have condensed the text as far as I could, but I have found it necessary, nevertheless, materially to increase the bulk of the volume. In the notes will be found references to more than three thousand cases not included in the prior edition.

F. W.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1889.

PREFACE TO TENTH EDITION

In preparing a new edition of this work, in addition to the collection and insertion of later authorities and illustrative notes, it was deemed advisable to extend the scope of the work in some regards, and especially by including a full treatment of the requisites and sufficiency of indictments and informations for the various specific crimes and offenses. In carrying out this plan the chapters comprised within the work have been necessarily increased from twenty-one to one hundred, and almost one thousand new sections have been added. The number of cases cited has been more than quadrupled.

The new matter on Specific Crimes,—which ends with page 1708,—is thought in and of itself to justify this new edition. While it has been sought to bring out every point that has been adjudicated, and collect the cases, it must be borne in mind that most of the rulings cited, and a large proportion of the conflict pointed out, are due to statutory provisions in the various jurisdictions. The statute under which any particular decision was made should be carefully collated with the statute under which it is sought to be applied.

Warrant must be strictly followed.....	57
6. Constitutionality of Search-Warrants.
Search-warrants limited by constitution.....	58
7. Illegality of Apprehension as Ground for Release.
That arrest was illegal is irrelevant on the issue of guilt.....	59

CHAPTER IX.

EXTRADITION—AS BETWEEN THE SEVERAL UNITED STATES.

In general.....	60
Under federal constitution and statute fugitives may be apprehended when fleeing from state to state.....	61
Apprehension may be had in anticipation of requisition.....	62
Sufficient if offense is penal in demanding state.....	63
Requisition must be duly proved, and lies for fugitives only.....	64
Federal courts can not compel governor to surrender.....	65
No objection that fugitive is amenable to asylum state.....	66
Governor of asylum state can not impeach requisition.....	67
— Ordinarily issues warrant of apprehension.....	68
Habeas corpus can not go behind warrant.....	69
Bail not to be taken.....	70
Indictment or affidavit must set forth a crime, and must be in course of judicial proceedings.....	71
Fugitive may be tried for other than requisition offense.....	72
Officers executing such process protected by federal courts.....	73
For federal offenses warrants may be issued in all districts.....	74
State has no power of international extradition.....	75

CHAPTER X.

EXTRADITION—AS BETWEEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND FOREIGN STATES.

Limited to treaty.....	76
------------------------	----

	Section
Offense must be one recognized by asylum state.....	77
Treaties are retrospective.....	78
Extradition refused when there can be no fair trial.....	79
— And so for political offenses.....	80
— And so for persons escaping from military service.....	81
— But not because the person demanded is a subject of the asylum state .....	82
— Where asylum state has jurisdiction there should be no surrender.....	83
Conflict of opinion as to whether a foreign state can claim a subject who has committed a crime in a third state.....	84
Extradition does not lie for a case not included in a treaty.....	85
— Nor where the defendant is in custody for another offense.....	86
Trial for offense different from that for which extradited.....	87
Courts may hear case before mandate.....	88
Complaint and warrant should be special.....	89
Warrant may be returnable to commissioner.....	90
Evidence should be duly authenticated.....	91
Terms to be construed as in asylum state.....	92
Evidence must show probable cause.....	93
Evidence may be heard from defense.....	94
Circuit court has power of review.....	95
Final surrender by executive—Discretion of executive.....	96

CHAPTER XI.

TAKING MONEY AND PROPERTY FROM PRISONER.

In general.....	97
Proofs of crime may be taken from person.....	98
— But not money, unless connected with the offense.....	99

CHAPTER XII.

TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS AND MEASUREMENTS—HANDCUFFING.

Taking photographs and Bertillon measurements.....	100
— Arrest on suspicion of crime, or indictment for crime.....	101
Right to handcuff prisoner.....	102

CHAPTER XIII.

DISPOSITION OF PERSON APPREHENDED.

In general.....	103
Apprehension on warrant.....	104
Apprehension without warrant.....	105
Officer before whom prisoner may be taken.....	106

CHAPTER XIV.

APPREHENSION AND SURRENDER BY BAIL.

Section

Bail may apprehend and surrender principal—At common law.....	107
— Under statute.....	108
— When and where right may be exercised.....	109
— How right of apprehension may be exercised.....	110

HEARING BEFORE MAGISTRATE.

1. Commitment for Future Hearing.

Waiver—Hearing may be adjourned from time to time.....	111
--	-----

2. Evidence Requisites.

Practice not usually to hear witnesses for defense.....	112
Exception in case of identity, or of one-sidedness in prosecutor's case..	113
Probable cause, only, need be shown.....	114

3. Final Commitment and Binding Over.

At common law, bail to be taken in all but capital cases.....	115
Excessive bail not to be required.....	116
Proper course to require such bail as will secure attendance.....	117
After continuance, bail may be granted.....	118
— And so in case of sickness.....	119 <sup>a</sup>
Bail to keep the peace may be required.....	120

Criminals.

4. Vagrants, Disorderly Persons, and Professional Criminals.

In exceptional cases, bail may be permitted after verdict.....	123
After quashing, bail may be refused.....	124

Courts.

7. Summary Trial and Punishment by Military Courts.

Authority of "military courts" to try and punish.....	125

FORM OF INDICTMENT—GENERALLY.

I. INDICTMENT AS DISTINGUISHED FROM INFORMATION.

Under federal constitution, trials for capital or infamous crimes must be by indictment.....	126
--	-----

Presentment is an accusation by grand jury, on which indictment may be based.....	127
Information is ex-officio procedure by attorney-general.....	128
— Is not usually permitted as to infamous crimes.....	129
“Infamous” crimes are such as involve disgrace or expose to penitentiary .....	130

II. STATUTES OF JEOPAILS AND AMENDMENT.

By statutes, formal mistakes may be amended, and formal averments made unnecessary.....	131
— Various particulars as to amendments.....	132

III. CAPTION AND COMMENCEMENT.

Caption is no part of the indictment, being an explanatory prefix.....	133
Substantial accuracy only required.....	134
Caption may be amended.....	135
Commencement must aver office and place of grand jurors, and also their oath.....	136
Each count must contain averment of oath.....	137

IV. NAME AND ADDITION OF DEFENDANT AND NAME OF PROSECUTOR AND THIRD PARTY.

1. As to Defendant.

Name of defendant should be specifically given.....	138
Omission of surname is fatal.....	139
Mistake as to either surname or Christian name may be met in abatement .....	140
Surname may be laid as an alias.....	141
Inhabitants of parish and corporation.....	142
Middle name to be given when essential.....	143
Initials sufficient when used by party himself.....	144
Party can not dispute a name accepted by him.....	145
Unknown party may be approximately described.....	146
At common law addition is necessary.....	147
Wrong addition to be met by plea in abatement.....	148
Defendant's residence must be given.....	149
“Junior” must be alleged when party is known as such.....	150

2. Description of Parties Injured and Third Parties.

Name only of third person may be given.....	151
Corporate title must be special.....	152
Third persons may be described as “unknown”.....	153
— But this allegation may be traversed.....	154
— The test is whether the name was unknown to the grand jury....	155
Immaterial misnomer may be rejected as surplusage.....	156
Sufficient if description be substantially correct.....	157
Variance in third party's name is fatal.....	158
Name may be given by initials.....	159

CONSPECTUS.

XI

Section

Representative name is sufficient.....	160
Idem sonans is sufficient.....	161

V. TIME: NECESSITY FOR ALLEGING AND HOW AVERRED.

Time must be averred, but not generally material.....	162
When "Sunday" is the essence of the offense, the day must be specified .....	163
"Videlicet" may introduce a date tentatively.....	164
Blank as to date is fatal.....	165
Substantial accuracy is enough.....	166
Double or obscure dates are inadequate.....	167
Date can not be laid between two distinct periods.....	168
Negligences should have time averred.....	169
Time may be designated by historical epoch.....	170
Recitals of time need not be accurate.....	171
Hour not necessary, unless required by statute.....	172
Repetition may be by "then and there".....	173
— Other terms insufficient.....	174
"Then and there" can not cure ambiguity.....	175
Repugnant, future, or impossible dates are bad.....	176
Record dates must be accurate.....	177
Dates of documents must be correctly given.....	178
Time should be within limitation.....	179
In homicide, death should occur within a year and a day.....	180

VI. PLACE.

Enough to lay venue within jurisdiction of court.....	181
When act is by agent, principal to be charged as of place of such act..	182
When county is divided, jurisdiction to be laid in court of locus delicti.	183
When county includes several jurisdictions, particular jurisdiction must be specified.....	184
Name of state not necessary in indictment.....	185
Sub-description in transitory offenses immaterial.....	186
— But not as to matters of local description.....	187
"County aforesaid" generally enough—"Then and there".....	188
Title, when changed by legislature, must be followed.....	189
Venue need not follow fine.....	190
In larceny, venue may be placed where goods are taken.....	191
Omission of venue is fatal.....	192
Offense must be set forth with reasonable certainty.....	193

VII. STATEMENT OF OFFENSE.

Omission of essential incidents is fatal.....	194
Terms must be technically exact.....	195
— Not enough to charge conclusion of law.....	196
— Exceptions in case of "common barrators." "common scolds," and certain nuisances.....	197

	Section
Matters unknown may be proximately described.....	198
Bill of particulars may be required.....	199
Surplusage need not be stated; and if stated may be disregarded.....	200
Videlicet is the pointing out of an averment of probable specification..	201
Assault may be sustained without specification of object.....	202
Attempt to commit an impossible crime.....	203
Act of one confederate may be averred as act of the other.....	204
Descriptive averment must be proved.....	205
Alternative statements are inadmissible.....	206
Disjunctive offenses in statute may be conjunctively stated.....	207
— Otherwise as to distinct and substantive offenses.....	208
Intent, when necessary, must be averred.....	209
— And so of guilty knowledge.....	210
Inducement and aggravation need not be detailed.....	211
Particularity required for identification and protection.....	212

VIII. WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS.

1. Where the Instrument, as in Forgery, and Libel, Must Be Set Out in Full.

When words of document are material they should be set forth.....	213
— In such case the indictment should claim to set forth the words...	214
"Purport" means effect; "tenor" means contents.....	215
"Manner and form," "purport and effect," "substance," do not imply verbal accuracy.....	216
Attaching original paper is not adequate.....	217
When exact copy is required, mere variance of a letter is immaterial...	218
Unnecessary documents need not be set forth.....	219
Quotation marks are not sufficient.....	220
Document lost, or in defendant's hands, need not be set forth.....	221
— And so of obscene libel.....	222
— Prosecutor's negligence does not alter the case.....	223
Production of document alleged to be "destroyed" is a fatal variance.	224
Extraneous parts of document need not be set forth.....	225
Foreign or insensible document must be explained by averments.....	226
Innuendo can interpret but not enlarge.....	227

2. Where the Instrument, as in Larceny, etc., May Be Described Merely by General Designation.

Statutory designations must be followed.....	228
Though general designation is sufficient, yet if indictment purports to give words, variance is fatal.....	229

3. What General Legal Designation Will Suffice.

If designation be erroneous, variance is fatal—"Purporting to be"...	230
"Receipt" includes all signed admissions of payment.....	231
"Acquittance" includes discharges from duty.....	232
"Bill of exchange" to be used in its technical sense.....	233
"Promissory note" used in a larger sense.....	234

CONSPECTUS.

XIII

	Section
"Bank note" includes notes issued by banks.....	235
Treasury note and United States currency.....	236
"Money" is convertible with currency.....	237
"Goods and chattels" includes personalty, exclusive of choses in action	238
"Warrant" is an instrument calling for payment or delivery.....	239
"Order" implies mandatory power.....	240
"Request" includes mere invitation.....	241
Terms may be used cumulatively.....	242
Defects may be explained by averments.....	243
A "deed" must be in writing under seal passing a right—"Bonds".....	244
"Obligation" is an unilateral engagement.....	245
— And so is "undertaking".....	246
A "guarantee" and an I. O. U. are undertakings.....	247
"Property" is whatever may be appropriated.....	248
"Piece of paper" is subject of larceny.....	249
"Challenges" to fight need not be set forth.....	250

IX. WORDS SPOKEN.

Words spoken must be set forth exactly, though substantial proof is enough .....	251
— In treason enough to set forth substance.....	252

X. PERSONAL CHATTELS.

1. In General.

Scope of treatment.....	253
-------------------------	-----

2. Indefinite, Insensible, or Lumping Descriptions.

Personal chattels, when subject to an offense, must be specifically described .....	254
When notes are stolen in a bunch, denominations may be proximately given .....	255
Certainty must be such as to individuate offense.....	256
"Dead" animals must be averred to be such—"Living" animals must be intelligently described.....	257
When certain articles only of a class are subjects of indictment, then individuals must be described.....	258
Minerals and vegetables must be averred to be severed from realty....	259
Variance in number or value immaterial.....	260
Instrument of injury may be approximately stated.....	261

3. Value.

Value must be assigned when larceny is charged.....	262
Larceny of "piece of paper" may be prosecuted.....	263
Value essential to restitution, and also to mark grades.....	264
Legal currency need not be valued.....	265
When there is lumping valuation, conviction can not be had for stealing fraction .....	266

4. Money and Coin.	Section
Money must be specifically described.....	267
When money is given to change, and change is kept, indictment can not aver stealing change.....	268
XI. OFFENSES CREATED BY STATUTE.
Usually sufficient and necessary to use words of statute.....	269
Conclusion of law not enough.....	270
Variance, if indictment proposes but fails to set forth statutory words..	271
Special limitations to be given.....	272
Private statute must be given in full.....	273
Offense must be averred to be within limitation.....	274
Section or designation of statute need not be stated.....	275
Where statute requires two defendants one is not sufficient.....	276
When statute states object in plural, it may be pleaded in singular....	277
Disjunctive statutory statements to be averred conjunctively.....	278
At common law defects in statutory indictments are not cured by verdict .....	279
Statutes creating an offense are to be closely followed.....	280
When common-law offense is made penal by title, details of offense must be given.....	281
When statute is cumulative, common law may be pursued.....	282
When statute assigns no penalty, punishment is at common law.....	283
Exhaustive statute absorbs common law.....	284
Statutory technical averments to be introduced.....	285
— But equivalent terms may be given.....	286
Where a statute describes a class of animals by a general term, it is enough to use this term for the whole class; otherwise not.....	287
Provisos and exceptions not part of definition need not be stated.....	288
— Otherwise when proviso is in same clause.....	289
Exceptions in enacting clause to be negatived.....	290
— Question in such cases is whether statute creates a general or a limited offense.....	291
XII. DUPLICITY.
Generally, joinder in one count of two distinct offenses is bad.....	292
— Exception in cases where larceny is included in burglary or embez- zlement .....	293
— And so where fornication is included in major offense.....	294
When major crime includes minor, conviction may be for either.....	295
“Assault” is included under “assault with intent”.....	296
On indictment for minor offense there can be conviction of minor, only.	297
May be conviction of misdemeanor on indictment for felony.....	298
— But minor offense must be accurately stated.....	299
Not duplicity to couple successive statutory phases.....	300
Several articles can be joined in larceny.....	301
— And so of cumulative overt acts and intents and agencies.....	302

Section

— And so of double batteries, libels, or sales.....	303
Duplicity is usually cured by verdict.....	304

XIII. REPUGNANCY.

Where material averments are repugnant, indictment is bad.....	305

XIV. TECHNICAL AVERMENTS.

In treason, "traitorously" must be used.....	306
"Malice aforethought" essential to murder.....	307
"Struck" usually essential to wound.....	308
"Feloniously" essential to felony.....	309
— Word "feloniously" can be rejected as surplusage.....	310
— In such case conviction may be had of attempt.....	311
"Ravish" and "forcibly" are essential to rape.....	312
"Falsely" essential to perjury.....	313
"Burglariously" essential to burglary.....	314
"Take and carry away" essential to larceny.....	315
"Violently and against the will" essential to robbery.....	316
"Piratical" essential to piracy.....	317
"Unlawfully," and other aggravating terms, not essential.....	318
"Forcibly" and "with a strong hand," essential to forcible entry... ..	319
— "Vi et armis" not essential.....	320
"Knowingly" always prudent.....	321

XV. CLERICAL ERRORS.

Verbal inaccuracies not affecting sense, not fatal.....	322
Questions as to abbreviations.....	323
Omission of formal words may not be fatal.....	324
Signs can not be substituted for words.....	325
Erasures and interlineations are not fatal.....	326
Tearing or defacing not necessarily fatal.....	327
Pencil writing may be sufficient.....	328

XVI. CONCLUSION OF INDICTMENTS.

Conclusion must conform to constitution or statute.....	329
Where statute creates or modifies an offense, conclusion should be statu- tory .....	330
— Otherwise when statute does not modify offense.....	331
— Such conclusion does not cure defect.....	332
Conclusion need not be in plural.....	333
Statutory conclusion may be rejected as surplusage.....	334

XVII. JOINDER OF OFFENSES.

Counts for offenses of the same character and the same mode of trial, may be joined.....	335
Assaults on two persons can be joined.....	336
— So in conspiracy and assault.....	337
Common law and statutory offenses may be joined.....	338

	Section
— And so of felony and misdemeanor.....	339
Cognate felonies may be joined.....	340
Successive grades may be joined.....	341
Joinder of different offenses no ground for error.....	342
Election will not be compelled where offenses are connected.....	343
— Object of election is to reduce to a single issue.....	344
Election at discretion of court.....	345
Election may be any time before verdict.....	346
Counts should be varied to suit case.....	347

CHAPTER I.

APPREHENSION—IN GENERAL.

- § 1. Introductory—"Apprehension" and "arrest."
- § 2. Same—Distinction sanctioned by good usage.
- § 3. Same—Doctrine of the decisions.
- § 4. Same—Law text-writers.
- § 5. Derivation of the words—Etymological distinctions.
- § 6. Same—Apprehend.
- § 7. Same—Arrest.
- § 8. Same—Another ground of distinction.
- § 9. Same—Difference of ultimate meaning, similarity of use.

§ 1. INTRODUCTORY—"APPREHENSION" AND "ARREST."
In speaking regarding the securing of the person and restraining of liberty, or holding to bail to appear in court to answer to a charge or charges of a violation or violations of persons alleged or supposed to have committed offenses against the criminal or penal laws of the state, nation or municipality, the physical act of thus taking into custody and detaining of liberty is indifferently and interchangeably spoken of as "apprehension" and as "arrest," as though the two words were exact synonyms;<sup>1</sup> but it is thought that a discriminating and scholarly use of these terms applies the words "apprehend" and "apprehension" to the taking and detention of persons on a charge, or on well-grounded suspicion, that they have violated a criminal or penal law—that is, the taking and detaining of persons in criminal cases; and

applies the words "arrest" and "arrested" to the taking and detention of persons on process in civil cases.<sup>2</sup> That is to say, correctly and strictly speaking, a person is apprehended on a complaint issued by a magistrate, or a warrant issuing out of a criminal court of record, charging the commission, or the attempt to commit, rape or robbery or riot, or any other infraction of the criminal or penal laws, whether a felony or a misdemeanor; and is arrested under a capias ad respondendum, or other writ or process issuing out of a civil court, of whatever jurisdiction, requiring the taking and detaining of the person.<sup>3</sup>

§ 2. SAME—DISTINCTION SANCTIONED BY GOOD USAGE. The distinction contended for in the use of the words "apprehend" and "arrest" is sanctioned by the best usage and discerning scholarship among writers and speakers of recognized distinction. In the King James translation of the Holy Scriptures, the word "apprehend" is used three times, in the sense above contended for,<sup>1</sup> and the word "arrest" not at all, I believe. Oliver Goldsmith, in his "Story of Alcander and Septimus," says "the robber who had been really guilty" of the murder with which Alcander had been accused, "was apprehended selling his plunder."<sup>2</sup> Edward Everett, one of the finest word-artists edition) under "Lawsuit," par. 969, and Feranold's English Synonyms and Antonyms, tit. "Arrest," p. 57—both of which works give the words as synonyms.

<sup>2</sup> See Bacon's Abridgment, tit. "Apprehension." Black says that the term "apprehension" is applied exclusively to criminal cases, and "arrest" is applied to both civil and criminal cases—Law Dict., tit. "Apprehension." Bouvier declares that the word "arrest" is said to be more properly used in civil cases, and the word "apprehension" in criminal cases.—Law Dict.

(Rawle's revision), tits. "Apprehension" and "Arrest."

<sup>3</sup> "Apprehend is used in speaking of arrests on criminal charges, while arrest is used in speaking of civil offenses, not criminal in nature. In other words, one may make an arrest on civil process, while one can be apprehended on a criminal warrant."—White's Law in Shakespeare, § 283.

<sup>4</sup> Should we say Bacon! in meek deference to Judge Tuthill's solemn though unlearned and Dogberry "decision," as preposterous and as asinine as was the famous bull of Pope Alexander VI, in which he assumed to declare that all the Americas belonged to Spain!—but the pontifical "face" was saved by Pope Paul V, who undid the bull of his predecessor, and made a similar unauthorized disposition of the northern end of the North American continent.—See Parkham's "Pioneers of France in the New World" (Frontenac ed.), vol. II, p. 213.

Judge Tuthill's decision, it is to be noted, attempted to dispose in a summary manner of a dispute of many decades' standing, and over which the court had no jurisdiction whatever, for the point is not judicable in a court of law or equity.

§ 4. SAME—LAW TEXT-WRITERS. Among those who have written text books on the criminal branch of the law, or treated of that branch in other works, very little or no attention has been paid to the distinction between the word "apprehend" and the word "arrest" as above pointed out, and they seem generally<sup>1</sup> to use the word "arrest" to designate the act of apprehending a person on a charge of an offense committed, or attempted, against the criminal or penal laws, as well as the taking into custody of a person on a civil process.<sup>2</sup> And it is to be

A recent misapprehension of the true import and nice shade in the meaning of the word apprehend, and of its proper application, is to be found in the third revised edition of Bouvier's Law Dictionary (vol. I, p. 241), where the editor, under the head of "arrest," in the subdivision "in civil practice," says that arrest is "the apprehension of a person by virtue of a legal authority to answer to the demands against him in a civil action," citing Gentry v. Griffith, 27 Tex. 461, 462, which case nowhere furnishes any support to the text, the point involved being the matter of a legislator's privilege from "arrest," which was held not to include citation or notice to appear. The editor might with propriety have cited Town of Hamden v. Collins, 85 Conn. 327, 82 Atl. 636, 638, in which the court uses the language: "Apprehension of a person under a mesne process to answer in a civil action is an 'arrest'."

noted further that this indiscriminating use of the words "apprehend" and "arrest" has been carried into many, if not most, of the state constitutions,<sup>3</sup> statutes and codes.<sup>4</sup>

§ 5. DERIVATION OF THE WORDS—ETYMOLOGICAL DISTINCTIONS. The derivation of the words "apprehend" and "arrest," and the nice etymological distinctions in the shades of meaning of the root-words, justify the distinction above contended for in the use of those words; but to those who do not look beneath the general import and meaning of the root-words it also seems to lend justification for the vernacular use of the words interchangeably as synonyms.

§ 6. SAME—APPREHEND. The word "apprehend" represents words in the French<sup>1</sup> and Latin<sup>2</sup> meaning, ultimately, "to lay hold upon, seize," and from its earliest use in English this word has the "lay hold upon, seize" idea, being applied with reference to literal laying hold, legal laying hold; and applied, in law, means to seize, seize upon, to take hold of, to take into custody of the law, to make a prisoner of a person—especially seizing a criminal, or one reasonably presumed to have committed an offense against the criminal law, and bringing him to justice.<sup>3</sup>

prehendo; Webster's Dict.: Apprehendere—to lay hold of, seize.

<sup>3</sup> "The term apprehension is more often applied to criminal cases, and arrest to civil cases; as, one having authority, may arrest on civil process, and apprehend on a criminal warrant," 1 Bouvier's L. Dict. (3rd ed.), pp. 217, 243.

Dedenger, 20 Ky. (4 T. B. Mon.) 539.

Old examples are also on record, of arrest being used in the literal sense of "laying hold upon, seize"—as in 1481, beasts are spoken of as arresting with their claws all that they can hold.

<sup>5</sup> Jacobs says: "Arrest (arrestum) cometh from the French word arrester, to stop or stay. It is a restraint of a man's person, obliging him to be obedient to the law, and is defined to be the execution of a command of some court of record or officer of justice."—Jacobs' Law Dict., tit. "Arrest."

Tomlinson says: "An arrest is the beginning of an imprisonment, where a man is first taken and restrained of his liberty, by power or color of a lawful warrant; also it signifies the decree of a court by which a person is arrested."—Tomlinson's L. Dict., tit. "Arrest."

by some officer or agent of the law armed with lawful process authorizing and requiring the arrest to be made"—which is strictly true in a civil action, but is not correct when applied to those cases where a person is alleged or supposed to have committed an offense against the criminal or penal laws, for in such a case, in many instances, an apprehension may be made either by an officer of the law or by a private person, and with or without a warrant or process issuing out of some court, or a direction of some officer of justice "authorizing and requiring" the act to be done.<sup>7</sup> This is one of the technical distinctions between an apprehension and an arrest.

§ 8. SAME—ANOTHER GROUND OF DISTINCTION. A distinction better drawn than between criminal charges and civil cases would be one that recognizes in "apprehend" a mere act of seizing, or taking into custody, and "arrest" a placing under certain (prolonged) legal restraints—a difference of intention rather than of effect. The ground for such a distinction is more apparent in considering the nouns "apprehension" and "arrest," the legal apprehension of a man being a single act and also the legal arrest of him, whereas he might be said to be under arrest, but can hardly be said to be under apprehension.

<sup>7</sup> At common law private persons are justified, without a warrant, in apprehending and detaining until they can be carried before a magistrate, all persons found committing or attempting to commit a felony (R. v. Hunt, 1 Moo. C. C. 93); but it was otherwise as to crimes less than a felony.—Foster P. C. 318.

Private persons may make arrest, at common law, for a breach of the peace or a misdemeanor committed in their actual presence, as well as may an officer of the law.—Rich v. Bailey, 123 Ky. 827, 97 S. W. 787.

—Kentucky Criminal Code, § 35, has changed the common-law rule, providing arrests may be made by a peace officer or private person, declaring a private person may arrest when he has reasonable grounds to believe the person has committed a felony.—Rich v. Bailey, 123 Ky. 827, 97 S. W. 747.

Peace officers may, without a warrant, apprehend and detain persons on a reasonable suspicion that they have been guilty of the commission of a felony.—1 East. P. C. 301; 2 Hale P. C. 83, 84, 89.

§ 9. SAME—DIFFERENCE OF ULTIMATE MEANING, SIMILARITY IN USE. From what has been said it will be seen that though the ultimate meanings of the two words are somewhat different, and though “apprehend” might be taken to represent more markedly a seizure idea naturally associated with criminal charges, both words seem to have been used in English during the sixteenth century, without distinction, to represent the idea of “seize” and “lay hold upon by legal authority”; and the distinction of “apprehend” with reference to criminal charges and “arrest” with reference to civil cases, is apparently modern. It would seem, though, as if this distinction were based on an appreciation of the ultimate etymological sense of the two words, “apprehend” being given more to the original “seizing” idea of the word, “arrest” being given more to the original “stop, restrain” and “check or hinder the motion of” idea.

So far as the practical application is concerned in law, aside from the etymological and nice technical distinction between the two words, which has been pointed out, and the protection vouchsafed to “officers of the law” taking persons into custody in the shape of immunity from damages for the apprehension or arrest are concerned—with which this chapter has nothing to do—an apprehension and an arrest, in the popular understanding, describe the same overt act, namely, the act of seizing the person and detaining of his liberty and holding to answer to the court, by putting hands upon his body or clothing, or by any other act manifesting an intention and showing an ability to take him into custody, to the end that he may be forthcoming to answer in a court of justice, implies force, and applies not only to the original taking, but also to the continued detention of the person in custody.<sup>1</sup> To this extent, only, are the words synonymous and interchangeable.

APPREHENSION—PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST.

- § 10. Generally.
- § 11. Parties and witnesses—Resident.
- § 12. Same—Nonresident.
- § 13. Judges, attorneys and jurors in case.
- § 14. Attendance on federal court.

- § 17. Consuls.
- § 18. Members of congress and of legislatures.
- § 19. Officers and employees of the government.
- § 20. Defendants and witnesses in criminal cases.

§ 10. GENERALLY. As a general proposition, no person is privileged from apprehension for treason or felony in any form, or for a misdemeanor, but there are certain privileges from arrest in civil actions, or even from the service of civil process requiring the taking of the person, in some cases.<sup>1</sup> The question of this privilege, while quite an important one and not without serious conflict in cases of the various jurisdictions, does not fall within the scope of this treatise, except in so far as it may have a bearing upon the question of immunity from arrest of parties or witnesses in a criminal proceeding while they are in necessary attendance upon the business of the trial and disposition of the case, going to and returning therefrom, and the extent of their privilege.

Privilege from arrest is confined to parties in civil proceedings, unless it appears that the apprehension upon a criminal charge was merely a subterfuge to get defendant into custody in a civil suit.—

A person indicted and brought into the jurisdiction by extradition, waives his privilege from arrest in a civil action by filing a motion for bail, which raises an issue of fact, not only as to his right to bail, but also as to a complete defense to the action.—*White v. ## CHAPTER III.

APPREHENSION—ACTS AND FACTS CONSTITUTING.

§ 21. Introductory.

§ 22. Corporal control and notice are essential.

§ 23. Notice may be given by implication.

§ 21. INTRODUCTORY. It has already been pointed out<sup>1</sup> that in order to constitute a legal apprehension there must be a touching or putting the hands upon the body or clothing<sup>2</sup> of the person apprehended, or the doing of some other act manifesting an intention to apprehend; and there must also be a show of present ability to take the person into custody to answer in a court of justice;<sup>3</sup> and, also, that the word and act imply a certain degree of force and restraint,<sup>4</sup> or the present ability to exercise or exert it.

<sup>2</sup> A touching or corporal seizing is requisite to a valid arrest, under the doctrine of some of the old and some of the modern cases.—See Horner v. Batten, Bull. N. P. 62; Genner v. Sparks, 6 Mod. 173, 87 Eng. Repr. 928; Genner v. Sparkes, 1 Salk. 79, 91 Eng. Repr. 74; United States v. Benner, 1 Bald. 234, 239, Fed. Cas. No. 14568; Lawson v. Bunzines, 3 Harr. (Del.) 416. But see authorities, post note 4, this section.

However slight the touch, has been held to be sufficient to constitute a valid arrest. "If he had touched the defendant, even with the end of his finger, it would have been an arrest" (Genner v. Sparks, 6 Mod. 173, 87 Eng. Repr. 928, 929), "although he did not succeed in stopping or holding him."—Whitehead v. Keyes, 85 Mass. (3 Allen) 495, 81 Am. Dec. 672.

<sup>4</sup> Actual force or manual touching of the body is not necessary to constitute either an apprehension or an arrest, it being sufficient that the party be within the power of the officer or person making the arrest, and submits to be taken into custody. ALA.—Collins v. Fowler, 10 Ala. 858; Field v. Ireland, 21 Ala. 240. GA.—Courtroy v. Dozler, 20 Ga. 369. IND.—Cooper v. Adams, 2 Blackf. 294. KY.—Hart v. Flynn's Exr., 38 Ky. (8 Dana) 190. Mere words will not suffice to constitute a valid apprehension where the party resists, flees, or refuses to submit.<sup>5</sup> The rule is otherwise in those cases in which the party accompanies the officer or otherwise submits to his power,<sup>6</sup> actual submission to and being within the power of the officer being sufficient.<sup>7</sup>

"If balliff who has a process against one says to him when he is on horseback or in a coach, 'you are my prisoner, I have a warrant for you,' upon which he submits, turns back, or goes with him, though the balliff never touched him, this is an arrest" (Genner v. Sparkes, 1 Salk. 79, 91 Eng. Repr. 74); but the officer must exercise a controlling authority over the person, and have in his hands the process to enforce.—Lansing v. Case, 4 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 221.

Contra: A line of cases, following the views of Lord Mansfield, as expressed in Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 Bos. & P., N. R. 211, 127 Eng. Repr. 605, 9 Rev. Rep. 642, that if a warrant be shown by the officer charged with its execution to the person accused with the commission of an offense, and the latter, without compulsion, attends the officer to the magistrate or court, and is dismissed on hearing, this does not constitute such an arrest as will support trespass and false imprisonment.—See Bisten v. Barridge, 3 Campb. 139; McClaughan v. Clayton, Holt N. P. 478.

Restraint of the person and of the right of locomotion, actual or potential, are absolutely essential to a valid apprehension.<sup>8</sup>

§ 22. CORPORAL CONTROL AND NOTICE ARE ESSENTIAL. To constitute an apprehension so as to make the defendant guilty of escape in case he does not submit and follow,<sup>1</sup> it is enough that there should be some degree, however slight, of corporal control.<sup>2</sup> Thus to inform a defendant that he is apprehended, and to lock the door,<sup>3</sup> or to touch him with only a finger,<sup>4</sup> provided he be informed at the time that he is apprehended,<sup>5</sup> constitutes a valid apprehension. And corporal touch is not necessary, provided it be waived by the defendant, which can be done by his

§ 23. NOTICE MAY BE GIVEN BY IMPLICATION. Where an officer<sup>1</sup> is seeking to apprehend for a felony or a misdemeanor, it is his duty to give to the party he is seeking to apprehend clear and distinct notice of his purpose and authority, and of the fact that he is legally qualified;<sup>2</sup> because if the person sought to be apprehended has no notice that the attempted apprehension is by lawful authority, he has the right to resist the attempt to take

As to the right to resist officers, see Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 849-856.

<sup>1</sup> A person other than an officer, seeking to apprehend for felony without a warrant in his possession, should make known on demand, that a warrant exists, stating where it is, and that he claims to be acting under its authority, or by command of the officer who has it in his possession; but the omission so to do will not justify the party apprehended, or sought to be apprehended, in resisting the apprehension, where he in fact already knows, or on reasonable and probable grounds believes that he is under charge of felony, that a warrant is out for his apprehension, and that the apprehension attempted is really in consequence of the substance of the warrant and its attempted execution.—Robinson v. State, 93 Ga. 77, 44 Am. St. Rep. 127, 9 Am. Cr. R. 570, 18 S. E. 1018.

Demand for authority by person sought to be apprehended, made under real ignorance of the true state of affairs and in good faith for the purpose of enlisting what him into custody, and the apprehension, if made under such circumstances, is illegal.<sup>3</sup>

But this notice may be given by implication.<sup>4</sup> If, as has been seen, a constable command the peace,<sup>5</sup> or show his badge or staff of office,<sup>6</sup> this is a sufficient intimation of his authority. In such a case it is not necessary to prove the officer's appointment as constable; proof that he was accustomed to act as constable is sufficient.<sup>7</sup> Where he shows his warrant,<sup>8</sup> or where it appears that he is known to the defendant to be an officer;<sup>9</sup> as, for instance, was actually wanted and needed, on failure to comply with the demand, he will be justified in resisting to any reasonable and proper extent.—Robinson v. State, 93 Ga. 77, 44 Am. St. Rep. 127, 9 Am. Cr. R. 570, 18 S. E. 1018.

Arrest in commission of act or upon fresh pursuit afterwards, officer not required to give notice of his official character, because the person arrested must know why he is arrested.—*People v. As to what is sufficient notice, it has been said that the command: "You are my prisoners—surrender," constitutes a sufficient notice of the character of the officer.—People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 572. See Mackalley's Case, 9 Coke 68b, 69a.

"I arrest you by authority of the state of Vermont," also held to be sufficient notice of the official character of the person seeking to make the arrest.—State v. Taylor, 70 Vt. 1, 67 Am. St. Rep. 648, 42 L. R. A. 673, 39 Atl. 447.

As to information a person is entitled to on arrest. See 43 L. R. A. 673.

Where an offender is openly engaged in breaking the law, it will be sufficient if the officer announces his official position and demands his surrender; if this is refused, the officer may use such force as may be necessary to secure his prisoner.—*Shovlin v. ### APPREHENSION—WARRANTS FOR.

- § 24. Criminal procedure usually commences with oath before magistrate.
- § 25. Officer may be described by office.
- § 26. Form and sufficiency of warrant.
- § 27. Same—Blank warrants.
- § 28. Same—"John Doe" warrants.
- § 29. Same—Defective warrants.
- § 30. Manner of executing warrant.

<sup>1</sup> Affidavit by any one who is competent to make oath to it, is sufficient.—IOWA—Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165, 63 Am. Dec. 487. KAN.—Prell v. McDonald, 7 Kan. 426, 12 Am. Rep. 423. LA.—State v. Touchet, 46 La. Ann. 827, 15 So. 390 (justice of the peace authorized to issue warrant on oath of one or more "credible" witnesses, not required to accept affidavit of any person who may offer to make it). MAINE—Campbell v. Thompson, 16 Maine 117. MASS.—Com. v. Tobias, 141 Mass. 129, 6 N. E. 217; Com. v. Alden, 143 Mass. 113, 9 N. E. 15; Com. v. Carroll, 145 Mass. 403, 14 N. E. 618; Com. v. Murphy, 147 Mass. 577, 18 N. E. 418; Com. v. Gay, 153 Mass. 211, 26 N. E. 571, 852. MICH.—People v. Lynch, 23 Mich. 274; Pardee v. Smith, 27 Mich. 33. MONT.—State v. Clancy, 20 Mont. 498, 52 Pac. 267 (information by county attorney, who has to make an oath to perform the duties imposed on him by law). N. H.—State v. Howard, 69 N. H. 507, 43 Atl. 592. N. Y.—People v. Stokes, Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 200, 24 N. Y. Supp. 727 (person convicted of felony, who is by statute made competent witness in any cause or proceedings; where affidavit was by felon convict whose testimony incompetent at trial, court refused to quash proceedings. State v. Killet, 2 Ball, S. C. 289). OHIO—Kaubach v. State, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 488 (affidavit need not be followed by the filing of an information). R. I.—State v. Woodmansee, 19 R. I. 651, 35 Atl. 961. TEX.—Rivers v. State, 10 Tex. App. 177 (convict pardoned and competent to testify; but see Perez v. State, 20 Tex. App. 327). FED.—United States v. Skinner, 1 Brun. Col. Cas. 446, Fed. Cas. No. 16309.

trate,<sup>2</sup> upon which, if it appear on the face of such oath that a criminal offense has been committed by the defendant<sup>3</sup> within the magistrate's jurisdiction, a warrant of tent to do so.—Foster v. Clinton Co., 51 Iowa 541, 2 N. W. 207.

Contra: State v. Howard, 69 N. H. 507, 43 Atl. 529.

Wife may make complaint against husband for assault with intent to do great bodily harm.—People v. Sebring, 66 Mich. 705, 35 N. W. 808 (less than the crime of murder); Goodwin v. State, 114 Wis. 318, 90 N. W. 170 (with intent to kill).

Can not make complaint against him for indecent assault on his daughter.—People v. Westbrook, 94 Mich. 629, 54 N. W. 486.

Affidavit filed after warrant issues, comes too late; it can not be made to relate back so as to confer jurisdiction on the justice to issue the warrant.—Smith v. Clausmeier, 136 Ind. 105, 43 Am. St. Rep. 311, 35 N. E. 904.

Affidavit of complaining party not sufficient in Missouri, except under contingencies provided for in the statute; prosecuting attorney must act.—McCaslay v. Garrett, 31 Mo. App. 354.

Affidavit of complaint not necessary where statute does not require it, though it does require examination of complaint on oath.—State v. Price, 111 N. C. 703, 16 S. E. 414.

Complaint not under oath, nor in writing, that a crime has been committed, is all that is necessary to authorize magistrate to issue warrant.—People v. Hicks, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 153; State v. Killet, 2 Ball. L. (S. C.) 290.

Contra: Myers v. People, 67 Ill. 503; Carey v. State, 5 Tex. App. 462.

Verification of information is neither an oath nor an affirmation within a constitutional provision that "no warrant shall issue but on probable cause supported by oath or affirmation."—City of Atchison v. Bartholow, 4 Kan. 124, 139, 140; Thompson v. Higginbotham, 18 Kan. 42, 44; State v. Gleason, 32 Kan. 245, 4 Pac. 363.

Clerk of court has no power to take affidavit on which warrant for apprehension may issue.—Lloyd v. State, 70 Ala. 32.

Contra: State v. Louner, 26 Neb. 757, 42 N. W. 762.

Offense on high seas, complaint must be sworn to before the court or judge, or clerk of the court, or some commissioner authorized to act in absence of the judge; affidavit before a deputy clerk of the court acting as a notary public and not as clerk, is insufficient.—United States v. Smith, 17 Fed. 510.

<sup>3</sup> Affidavit before notary that affiant bought liquor of defendant "at his saloon on one Sunday in the month of May, 1888," does not meet the requirements under N. Y. Code Cr. Proc., §§ 145-148, and fails to state the commission of an offense.—People v. Nowak, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 613, 7 N. Y. Cr. R. 69, 5 N. Y. Supp. 239.

apprehension issues.<sup>4</sup> The affidavit must be specific,<sup>5</sup> and must aver personal knowledge<sup>6</sup> on the part of the affiant.

<sup>4</sup> Woodall v. McMillan, 38 Ala. 622; Pierson v. State, 129 Ala. 120, 29 So. 843; Ormond v. Ball, 120 Ga. 916, 48 S. E. 383; Housh v. People, 75 Ill. 487; State v. Graffmuller, 26 Minn. 6, 46 N. W. 445; Blodgett v. Race, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 132; People v. Pratt, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 200.

A second warrant on same affidavit, after apprehension and hearing by other justices under first warrant, is unauthorized; the justice becomes functus officio as to all matters in the affidavit.—State v. Sneed, 84 N. C. 816.

Assistant of justice of the peace may issue warrants in criminal cases, where the justice is absent or unable to serve, where by law may act through assistant.—State v. Chappell, 26 R. I. 375, 58 Atl. 1009.

Complaint before magistrate the prescribed procedure, court will not relieve against an indictment by grand jury, where it is necessary for that body to act to prevent the statute of limitations from attaching. People v. Strong, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 244.

Commission of offense in another county, justice of the peace has no jurisdiction to issue warrant for apprehension.—Hill v. Taylor, 50 Mich. 549, 15 N. W. 899.

—In another jurisdiction within same county, justice can not make warrant returnable before himself.—McCrag v. Burr, 106 App. Div. (N. Y.) 275, 17 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 96, 94 N. Y. Supp. 675, affirmed 186 N. Y. 467, 79 N. E. 715.

Commission of offense within county justice may send his warrant into any other county in the state.—Garner v. Smith, 40 Tex. 505.

Under statute providing for the apprehension and punishment of men who desert their wives or children, it seems that a justice may issue a warrant to another county.—Keller v. Com., 71 Pa. St. 413.

Magistrate having no jurisdiction of crime charged, he may make the warrant returnable to the proper criminal court having jurisdiction.—Pierson v. State, 129 Ala. 120, 29 So. 843.

Offense an indictable one, no objection to justice issuing warrant for apprehension of offender.—Ex parte Bishop, 4 Mo. 219.

Punishment inflicted a fine only, the defendant may be arrested and required to find bail.—Jackson, ex parte, 14 Blatch. 245, Fed. Cas. No. 7124.

Under North Carolina statute a mayor pro tem may issue warrant in criminal cases. State v. Thomas, 141 N. C. 791, 53 S. E. 522.

Warrant being required by law apprehension without warrant is not due process of law, "and arbitrary or despotic power no man possesses under our system of government."—Board v. Schroever, 58 Ill. 353; State v. James, 78 N. C. 455; Muscoe v. Com., 86 Va. 443, 8 Am. Cr. R. 602, 10 S. E. 534.

Mere belief is not sufficient.<sup>7</sup> If the affiant can not testify to knowledge of the facts, other witnesses should be brought forward to supply the defect; but without affidavit to the inculpatory facts a warrant should not issue.<sup>8</sup>

§ 25. OFFICER MAY BE DESCRIBED BY OFFICE. The affidavit being thus specific and direct, a warrant issues for the defendant's apprehension. Under the common-law practice, this warrant is addressed to a constable, or officer, or other person whose name is specified;<sup>1</sup> the usual and best sion of defendant.—State v. Clark, 34 Kan. 289, 8 Pac. 528; Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443, 5 N. W. 635; People v. Heffron, 53 Mich. 527, 19 N. W. 170 (affiant alleging he "has good reason to believe, and does believe"); Blodgett v. Race, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 132; In re Blum, 9 Misc. (N. Y.) 571, 30 N. Y. Supp. 396; Charge to Grand Jury, 9 Pittsb. R. 174; State v. Good, 77 Tenn. (9. Lea) 240 (affiant told justice he knew nothing of the facts, but got his information from others).

Contra: State v. Carey, 56 Kan. 84, 42 Pac. 371; Daniels v. State, 2 Tex. App. 353 (county attorney can make on information and belief); Clark v. State, 23 Tex. App. 260, 5 S. W. 115 (affiant alleging he "has good reason to believe, and does believe" defendant committed the crime charged); Hall v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 594, 25 S. W. 292; Andrews v. State (Tex. Cr. R.), 25 S. W. 425, 1894; Staley v. State (Tex. Cr. R.), 29 S. W. 272, 1895; Anderson v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. R. 69, 29 S. W. 384.

Affidavit should be obtained from person communicating the facts.—Daniels v. State, 2 Tex. App. 353.

1. Crim. Proc.—4

Complaint insufficiently verified warrant should be quashed and accused discharged.—State v. Gleason, 32 Kan. 245, 4 Pac. 363.

Evidence of hearsay knowledge, only, on part of prosecuting witness, of the contents of the complaint sworn to by him positively, not admissible on motion to quash warrant.—State v. Carey, 56 Kan. 84, 42 Pac. 371; City of Holton v. Brimrod, 8 Kan. App. 265, 55 Pac. 505.

7 Best knowledge and belief sufficient to justify issuance of warrant.—State v. Hobbs, 39 Me. 212.

Good reason to believe is sufficient to justify issuance of warrant, under Texas Code Cr. Proc.—Dodson v. State, 35 Tex. Cr. R. 571, 34 S. W. 754.

8 Com. v. Lottery Tickets, 59 Mass. (5 Oush.) 369; Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 443, 5 N. W. 635; People v. Heffron, 53 Mich. 527, 19 N. W. 170; People v. Recorder, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 429.

Hearsay is not excluded when the object is information.—See State v. Good, 77 Tenn. (9 Lea) 240.

1 Meek v. Pierce, 19 Wis. 300; R. v. Whalley, 7 Car. & P. 245, 32 Eng. C. L. 594.

course being to name the constable of the ward or precinct. When addressed to the sheriff of the county, the latter may act by deputy. Whether a constable may act through deputy has been doubted; and in England the negative seems to be held.<sup>2</sup> In English practice a warrant may be directed to officers by the description of their office, and the same is true in most, if not all, the states of the Union.<sup>3</sup> When addressed by name, the officer named may execute the warrant anywhere within the jurisdiction of the magistrate granting the warrant. When addressed to officers designating them only by the description of their office, the officer acting can execute the warrant only within the precincts of his office.<sup>4</sup>

Indorsement of name of person on warrant for apprehension of an accused, appointing him a special constable "to execute the within process," is sufficient under a statute authorizing justices to appoint a constable for a particular occasion "specified in writing."—State v. Hallbeck, 40 S. C. 298, 18 S. C. 919.

Officer of county, warrant must be addressed to; where the name of the county is omitted, the warrant will be illegal.—Toliver v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 444, 24 S. W. 286.

Private person may not be designated, unless there exists a necessity therefor, which necessity must be expressed in the warrant.—Com. v. Foster, 1 Mass. 488.

Direction to private party should be in cases of great emergency, only, and should be written, at least when the precept is written.—State v. Call, 150 N. C. 805, 63 S. E. 95.

Where warrant, in the body, is directed "to the sheriff or any constable in the county," authority to serve the same by a private person can not be conferred by indorsement on the back.—Abbott v. Booth, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 546.

21 Chit. Crim. Law 48.

3 Johnson v. State, 73 Ala. 21 (any constable in the county); Wilson v. State, 99 Ala. 194, 13 So. 427 (to any lawful officer of the state); Tesh v. Com., 34 Ky. (4 Dana) 522; State v. McNally, 34 Me. 210, 56 Am. Dec. 650 (to any sheriff, city marshal or deputy); Abbott v. Booth, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 546.

Direction to private person only where necessary, and that necessity expressed in the body of the warrant.—Com. v. Foster, 1 Mass. 488.

41 Chit. Crim. L. 48, citing R. v. Weir, 1 Barn. S. C. 288, 107 Eng. Repr. 108, 8 Eng. C. L. 125; 2 Dow. & R. 44.

§ 26. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF WARRANT. Technical accuracy is not required.<sup>1</sup> If the language is such as to enable the court to gather from it, according to the ordinary acceptance of the language used therein, that an offense has been committed under provisions of statute,<sup>2</sup>

But as a justice can act in his own county, only, if name of county be omitted, the warrant will be illegal.—Toliver v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 444, 24 S. W. 286.

Complaint and warrant may be on same paper, and affidavit made part of warrant by reference thereto.—State v. Goyette, 11 R. I. 592.

May be in name of people, or of the magistrate.—Dickinson v. Rogers, 19 John. (N. Y.) 279.

<sup>2</sup> Spear v. State, 120 Ala. 351, 25 So. 46 ("offense of carrying a concealed pistol," sufficient); State v. Bryson, 84 N. C. 780.

Affidavit filed, not an essential part of warrant.—State v. Bryson, 84 N. C. 780.

Affidavit setting forth offense in full, it is sufficient for the warrant to state "to answer the above charge," where the affidavit is incorporated into and made part of the warrant.—State v. Sharp, 125 N. C. 628, 74 Am. St. Rep. 663, 34 S. E. 263. See State v. Sykes, 104 N. C. 694, 10 S. E. 101.

"Assault with intent to murder" sufficiently describes offense under a statute requiring a warrant to state the offense by name or in language from which it may clearly be inferred.—Spraggins v. State, 139 Ala. 93, 35 So. 1000.

Charging defacement of building on highway, charges a crime; because if the building be lawfully upon the highway it was as much a crime to deface it there as it would have been to deface it elsewhere.—State v. Yourex, 30 Wash. 611, 71 Pac. 203.

Designation by name of crime charged, is sufficient; technical averment of crime not required.—Spraggins v. State, 139 Ala. 93, 35 So. 1000; In re Stewart, 60 Kan. 781, 57 Pac. 976.

Fullness of statement required in an information, not necessary in a warrant.—State v. Baker, 57 Kan. 541, 46 Pac. 947.

"Gambling in a public place" does not describe the prohibited offense of gaming at certain places with cards, dice or similar devices, and is insufficient.—McGee v. State, 115 Ala. 135, 22 So. 113.

"Offense of breaking into storehouse of said J et al., in said county, has been committed," etc., held to sufficiently describe the offense, as it will be presumed that the breaking was with intent to steal.—Adams v. Coe, 123 Ala. 664, 26 So. 652.

Particulars of crime need not be stated where the warrant is in the form prescribed by statute and containing the statement of crime required.—Krausskopf v. Tallman, 38 App. Div. N. Y. 273, 56 N. Y.

it will be sufficient;<sup>3</sup> it need not state the circumstances which give the magistrate jurisdiction,<sup>4</sup> or recite that it is issued on a sworn complaint, when the statute merely requires that the justice examine complainant on oath.<sup>5</sup>

Name and description of the accused should be inserted in the body of the warrant; and where the name is unknown there must be such a description of the person accused as will enable the officer to identify him when found.<sup>6</sup>

Supp. 967, affirmed 170 N. Y. 560, 62 N. E. 264.

"Peddling goods by selling goods, wares, and merchandise consisting of," etc., "without a license, contrary to the form of statute," sufficiently describes the offense charged.—Wade v. Com., 3 Ky. L. Rep. 442.

Substance of offense charged is all warrant need recite.—Hawkins v. Ralston, 95 Mich. 63, 13 Am. St. Rep. 376, 37 N. W. 45.

Warrant must specify some particular offense.—Yaner v. People, 34 Mich. 286.

"With force and arms" did set fire to and burn specified mill, referring to act as a felony, held to be a sufficient description of the offense of burning charged.—People v. Pichette, 111 Mich. 461, 69 N. W. 739.

Warrant stating that A complained on oath that B and others named, violently assaulted him, and requiring the officer to apprehend them and bring them before a justice, is sufficient.—Flack v. Aukenev, 1 Ill. (Breese) 187.

Name written in body of warrant, and indorsed on back, without the formal signature of the justice, insufficient.—Davis v. Sanders, 40 S. C. 509, 19 S. E. 138.

Signature by judge, when warrant should have been signed by clerk of the court by order of the judge, does not render the warrant void.—Monroe v. Berry, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 602, 90 S. W. 38.

Signature by the clerk instead of the public judge of the court, is not for that reason invalid.—O'Brien v. City of Cleveland, 1 Clev. L. Rep. 100.

Signature in lead pencil, not a sufficient signature.—United States v. Thompson, 2 Cr. C. C. 407, Fed. Cas. No. 16484.

Signature without official character specified by the justice is a in order to give a warrant for the apprehension of a person validity,<sup>8</sup> and to justify an officer in apprehending thereunder,<sup>9</sup> except in those jurisdictions, and under those circumstances, where and in which warrants are expressly authorized by statute to be issued without seals.

§ 27. SAME—BLANK WARRANTS. At common law, a warrant for the apprehension of an offender must be sufficient signature. — Siller v. Ward, 4 N. C. 161, 1 Car. L. Repos. 584.

§ 29. SAME—DEFECTIVE WARRANTS. A warrant for the apprehension of an accused person, emanating from a magistrate who is not presumed to have acquired technical knowledge of the law (and if he has, is not required to use it) technical precision and sufficiency in the warrant are not required to the same extent as are required in an indictment or information, and want of technical precision will not be regarded if the warrant is in proper form and otherwise sufficient.<sup>1</sup> A mere clerical omission, which is apparent, and which does not mislead any one, or in any way prejudice the accused, will be disregarded.<sup>2</sup>

Indefinite description of offense<sup>3</sup> in the warrant for the apprehension of a person will not constitute a fatal defect, where from the warrant the defendant could know, and evidence at the preliminary examination showed that he did know, the nature of the offense charged.<sup>4</sup>

Aldrich, 50 Kan. 666, 23 Pac. 408 (directing officer to bring accused before magistrate issuing warrant instead of before "some magistrate of the county," as the statute provides, not void). MASS.—Com. v. Martin, 98 Mass. 4 (alleging commission of offense on "twenty-third" day of the month, the word "third" being written above the line and over a word crossed out in ink, apparently "second," sufficient). MICH.—

W. 473 (warrant issued in March charging crime committed in May of same year instead of May of preceding year, as charged in the affidavit, is a mere clerical error, not misleading and does not vitiate the warrant); Bookhout v. State, 66 Wis. 415, 28 N. W. 179 ("to answer such complaint," instead of "to be dealt with according to law," immaterial error).

Indefinite description of the person is fatal to the validity of the warrant in those cases where insufficient to enable the parties charged to be identified and apprehended. Thus, a warrant stating an offense to have been committed by "A B and Company," and requiring the officer to apprehend "said company," the description was held to be too uncertain to justify an apprehension.<sup>5</sup>

Two offenses charged will not avoid the warrant if the justice has jurisdiction of both offenses, and the officer must execute the writ.<sup>6</sup> While it is better for the warrant to specify a particular offense of which, under the statute, the accused is guilty, yet the warrant will not be fatally defective where it recites that the defendant, with others, is guilty of each and all of the several acts prohibited by a specified statute.<sup>7</sup>

Fatal defect in warrant, not to lay the venue properly,<sup>8</sup> or to fail to make the warrant returnable at any time, or before any person;<sup>9</sup> or if it fails to negative an exception in the statute defining the offense charged, where the justice has jurisdiction to try the case and pronounce judgment,<sup>10</sup> but it seems to be otherwise where his jurisdiction is limited to holding preliminary hearing.

Timely objections for defects in the affidavit or complaint, or in the warrant founded thereon, must be made; otherwise they will be presumed to have been waived, and will not be considered by the court.<sup>11</sup> Thus, voluntarily

§ 30. MANNER OF EXECUTING WARRANT. It has been said that it is the duty of an officer, who executes a warrant of apprehension, to state the nature and substance of the process which gives him the authority he professes to exercise and, if it is demanded, to exhibit his warrant, in order that the party to be apprehended may have no excuse for resistance.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, it is said that the accused is required to submit to apprehension, to yield himself immediately and peaceably into the custody of the officer, who can have no opportunity, until he has brought his prisoner into safe custody, to make him acquainted with the cause of his apprehension, or the nature, substance and contents of the warrant under which it is made; that these are obviously successive steps, and that they can not all occur at the same instance of time; that the explanation must follow his apprehension, and exhibition for perusal of the warrant must come after the authority of the officer has been acknowledged and the power under which the apprehension is made has been acquiesced in.<sup>2</sup>

APPREHENSION BY OFFICER—WITH WARRANT.

- § 31. Officer not protected by illegal warrant.
- § 32. Warrant omitting essentials is illegal.
- § 33. Not necessary for officer to show warrant.

<sup>3</sup> Arrest, out of the jurisdiction of the magistrate issuing the warrant, is illegal.—State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; State v. Shelton, 79 N. C. 605.

Warrant regular upon face may be executed by officer, although he has knowledge that it is void for want of jurisdiction of officer issuing same.—People v. Warren, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 440. Otherwise where warrant irregular upon face.—Conner v. Com., 3 Bin. (Pa.) 38.

<sup>4</sup> State v. Wimbush, 9 S. C. 309. Warrant void upon its face, defendant under no legal obligation to submit to its execution.—Howard v. State, 121 Ala. 21, 25 So. 1000.

Warrant against M. Reynolds does not warrant arrest of Milton McReynolds, even though writ was intended for the latter.—Harris v. McReynolds, 10 Colo. App. 532, 51 Pac. 1016. Same doctrine in West v. Cabell, 153 U. S. 78, 38 L. Ed. 643, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752.

No reasonable ground appearing for apprehending the defendant, to an action of trespass, the officer is liable; and if the defendant kill the officer, there being no such reasonable ground, this is manslaughter, only.<sup>8</sup>

the terms of the statute will not suffice, for if a magistrate merely states the facts of the offense, in the words of the act, when the evidence does not warrant the conclusion, he subjects himself to a criminal prosecution.—R. v. § 33. NOT NECESSARY FOR OFFICER TO SHOW WARRANT. The manner of executing a writ for the apprehension of a person charged with an offense has already been discussed at some length,<sup>1</sup> and it remains to add here only that it is not necessary at common law for a bailiff or constable to show his warrant in making an arrest, even though it be demanded, provided he state its substance to the party arrested.<sup>2</sup> And, indeed, to show and read such warrant before apprehending might make an apprehension impossible. The defendant, knowing the apprehending party to be an officer, is bound to submit to the apprehension, reserving the right of action against the officer in case the latter be in the wrong.<sup>3</sup> But in Massa-

APPREHENSION BY OFFICER—WITHOUT WARRANT.

- § 34. When peace officer may act without warrant.
- § 35. Offenses in presence of officer.
- § 36. Apprehension for past offenses.
- § 37. Apprehension for past misdemeanors.
- § 38. Reasonable suspicion convertible with probable cause.

<sup>1</sup> A constable, by virtue of his office, has the right, without a warrant, to enter a house in which there is a noise amounting to a breach of the peace, the door being unfastened, and there apprehend any person making such disturbance in his presence.—Com. v. Tobin, 108 Mass. 426, 11 Am. Rep. 375.

"A constable having knowledge that a warrant has been issued for the apprehension of a person charged with a felony, may lawfully apprehend him without having the warrant in his possession."—Drennan v. People, 10 Mich. 169.

Peace officers may, without warrant, enforce the ordinary laws of police by the apprehension of vagrants, drunken and disorderly persons, and detaining them for the action of the proper police magistrates.—Muscoe v. Com., 86 Va. 443, 8 Am. Cr. Rep. 602, 10 S. E. 534.

Georgia Pen. Code, 1895, § 896, on the subject of apprehensions, applies alike to state and municipal apprehending officer.—Porter v. State, 124 Ga. 297, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 730, 52 S. E. 283.

<sup>3</sup> Superintendent of a convict camp is not a "sheriff, coroner, constable, or officer of police or other peace officer entrusted with the care and preservation of the public peace," under the North Carolina Code (§ 1126), "and has no authority to apprehend without a warrant."—State v. Stancill, 128 N. C. 606, 13 Am. Cr. Rep. 39, 38 S. E. 926.

Where an officer apprehends without a warrant, he must, within a reasonable time thereafter, take the person before a magistrate to have his suspicions judicially disposed of; what is a reasonable time is a question of fact in each ground for suspicion.<sup>4</sup> The reason for this rule has been said by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts<sup>5</sup> to be that the public safety and the due apprehension of criminals charged with a heinous offense require that such an apprehension should be made without a warrant by officers of the law. As to the right appertaining to private persons<sup>6</sup> to arrest without a warrant, it is a much more restricted authority and is confined to cases of the actual guilt of the party apprehended; and the apprehension can be justified only by proving such guilt. But as to constables and other peace officers acting officially, the law clothes them with greater authority, and they are held to be justified, if they act in making apprehension upon probable and reasonable ground, and believe the party guilty of felony; this is all that is necessary for them to show in justification of an arrest for the purpose of detaining the party to await further proceedings under a complaint on oath and a warrant therein.

At common law where a felony has been committed and the officer or person making the apprehension has probable grounds to believe the person guilty, he may act without a warrant,<sup>7</sup> even though there may be no reason to fear the escape of such persons in consequence of the delay in procuring a warrant.<sup>8</sup> Some of the cases particular case.—Harris v. City of Atlanta, 62 Ga. 291; Cochran v. Toher, 14 Minn. 385.

Under statute, e. g., Minnesota Gen. Stats., 1894, § 7120, providing that an officer may apprehend without a warrant when a felony has been committed, although not in his presence, is an affirmation of the common-law rule in this regard.—*State ex rel. hold that an apprehension without a warrant is permissible in cases of felony or breach of the peace, only.<sup>9</sup>

Actual cause for apprehension is held to be a prerequisite in some cases; that is, a crime committed and reasonable ground to believe that the person sought to be apprehended committed the offense. When these conditions exist, the law clothes any person with power to apprehend and hold the party until a warrant can be obtained;<sup>10</sup> but the better opinion, supported by the weight of authority, is to the effect that an officer may apprehend without a warrant any person whom he has reasonable grounds to suspect has committed a felony, whether any felony has, in fact, been committed by the person apprehended, or by another, or not.<sup>11</sup>

Personal knowledge on the part of the apprehending officer of the actual commission of the offense, or as a ground for a reasonable belief that the person apprehended is the guilty party, is not requisite; the officer may act relying upon information received from one

States, should make capital or infamous by the punishment attached to them. See Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 423, 29 L. Ed. 86, 91, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 348, 351, 29 L. Ed. 909, 911, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

right to apprehend for offenses committed in the officer's presence<sup>5</sup> is limited to felonies, breaches of the peace,<sup>6</sup> and to such misdemeanors as can not be stopped or redressed, except by immediate apprehension.<sup>7</sup>

§ 36. APPREHENSION FOR PAST OFFENSES. In those cases where the offense is past, the rule is different and an officer may not apprehend the offender without a warrant,<sup>1</sup> except in outrageous crimes of the felony type.<sup>2</sup>

§ 37. APPREHENSION FOR PAST MISDEMEANORS. The general rule of law is that in case of past and completed misdemeanors, an officer may not, any more than a private person, lawfully apprehend the offender without a warrant.<sup>1</sup> Thus, for instance, in the case of a breach of the peace, committed in the absence of the marshal of an incorporated village or city, and he does not appear until after the affray has ended, public order been restored, and the guilty parties have departed from the vicinity, and all the information he has of the affray and of the parties participating in it, is the statements of bystanders who witnessed it, he has no authority in law to pursue the persons charged with the offense without first obtaining a legal warrant therefor;<sup>2</sup> or when a person who, during the early part or middle of the day was drunk and noisy, but who went home and slept off the effect of the liquor, he was held not to be liable to apprehension for the public offense when he appeared in the streets on the evening of the same day.<sup>3</sup>

Why, if the misdemeanor is completed, and the offender is not likely to escape, should the check and safeguard of a warrant be waived? Constables and other minor officials are apt enough to abuse their powers; and the policy of the law not only requires that they should be kept under strict control,<sup>4</sup> but that in prosecutions for private misdemeanors there should be responsible private prosecutors. In conformity with this view, it was rightly held in New York, in 1871, that neither a justice of the peace nor a constable can, at common law, arrest without warrant, a person committing an illegal act in his presence, unless such act be a felony or involve a breach of the peace; and that cruelty to an animal, though a statutory misdemeanor, is not such an offense as authorizes arrest without warrant.<sup>5</sup> Nor can a police officer who arrests without proper cause, and is resisted, treat this resistance as a substantive offense which will justify an arrest. It is, however, within the power of a municipal corporation to authorize its police officers to arrest without warrant for breach of health or police ordinances.<sup>6</sup> And when an arrest is made without warrant, it is not essential that the officer should inform the accused of the charge, and of the officer's official position, when both charge and officer are known to the accused.<sup>7</sup> arrest him, though without warrant.<sup>6</sup> But the question before us goes beyond this, and may be treated as convertible with that of probable cause, as laid down in civil actions of malicious prosecution. Has the officer good grounds to believe a felony has been, or is about to be committed? If so, it is his duty to arrest the offender, nor has the latter a cause of action against the officer, if the officer acted without malice, and upon such probable cause.<sup>7</sup> Thus in a remarkable English case, a constable was held not to be justified in shooting at a man whom he had seen stealing wood growing in a copse (which is, when a first offense, only a misdemeanor, though for a second offense, after conviction, a felony), although the constable had no means of arresting the culprit without firing, and although the latter had been previously convicted of the same offense, the constable not being aware of such prior conviction. The question here was whether the constable had to his own mind probable cause; and as he had not, the attempt to arrest without warrant was held illegal.<sup>8</sup> Mere manner in a party when accused of crime is not probable cause;<sup>9</sup> nor are the private suspicions of the arresting officer.<sup>10</sup>

§ 39. APPREHENSION FOR A MISDEMEANOR. The general rule of law, applicable to private persons as well as to officers, is that an apprehension for a misdemeanor can not be made without a warrant unless the offense for which the apprehension was made was committed in the presence of the apprehending person, or, having committed the offense the apprehended person was endeavoring to escape; or there was likely to be a failure of justice for want of an officer to issue a warrant.<sup>1</sup>

§ 40. APPREHENSION FOR A FELONY. A private citizen has the right to apprehend a felon whether he is present when the felony was committed or not;<sup>1</sup> when he is not present it devolves on him to show that the felony for which the apprehension was made had been committed,<sup>2</sup> for a private citizen can not justify an apprehension without warrant for the alleged commission of a felony, unless it appears that a felony was in fact committed.<sup>3</sup> Hence no felony having in fact been committed and a private person having no information that such an offense has been committed, is not authorized to apprehend without a warrant.<sup>4</sup>

In those cases where a felony has been committed so recently that it is yet fresh,<sup>5</sup> and there is good cause to believe<sup>6</sup> that it was committed by the particular party, a private person may apprehend such party and detain him until a warrant can be procured;<sup>7</sup> and if the offender is escaping or attempting to escape, a private person may apprehend upon reasonable and probable grounds of suspicion.<sup>8</sup>

Duty to make known purpose by a private person in attempting to apprehend a felon without a warrant; he must also state for what offense the apprehension is attempted. Unless both these requirements are complied with the accused person has the right to resist.<sup>9</sup>

2. Persons Called on by Officers, Pursuers, Etc.

§ 41. PEACE OFFICER MAY REQUIRE AID FROM PRIVATE PERSONS. At the outset it must be noticed that a constable, sheriff, or police officer<sup>1</sup> has the right to call in the aid of private individuals,<sup>2</sup> either to apprehend persons charged with past felony, or to prevent impending violation of the law. To refuse to render such assistance is an indictable offense.<sup>3</sup> And the warrant to the officer protects his assistants.<sup>4</sup>

§ 42. OFFICERS MAY HAVE SPECIAL ASSISTANTS. It has been said that private persons thus acting must be either actually or constructively under an officer's command.<sup>1</sup> But the officer may have special private assistants temporarily in charge, especially when he goes for further aid.<sup>2</sup>

§ 43. PURSUERS OF FELON ARE PROTECTED. By the common law, when a felony has been committed, apprehension may be attempted by pursuers, the country being raised, who start with hue and cry after the felon.. In such case, though there be no warrant of arrest, nor any constable in the pursuit, yet, the felony being proved, it is murder for one of the defendants to kill one of the pursuers.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Persons assisting police officer in making an arrest without a warrant out of his jurisdiction can not justify under his authority, since he has none.—Martin v. Houck, 141 N. C. 317, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 576, 54 S. E. 291.

3. Power of Private Persons as to Apprehensions.

§ 44. PRIVATE PERSON MAY INTERFERE ON PROBABLE CAUSE.

We have already seen<sup>1</sup> that a private person may arrest without warrant or official authority persons concerned, in his presence, in riot, or felony, or other heinous crime; and, in cases of crimes of the type of felony, if he has reasonable ground to suspect another of being a guilty party, he may, if acting without malice, and in good faith, arrest such other, in order to bring the case to a magistrate; and for such arrest he can not be made responsible, though the arrested person be shown to have been innocent.<sup>2</sup> It has been said, however, that in order to excuse such arrest, and to protect the arresting person, it must appear that the offense was in fact committed, and that there was reasonable ground to suspect the arrested person;<sup>3</sup> though if there be probable cause of the commission of the offense, this would seem enough. But when the question arises whether it is murder for an innocent person to kill the person arresting him on an untrue charge (though the person arresting have probable ground), we are to consider the hot blood naturally aroused in an innocent person believing himself to be unjustly arrested. In such case the killing would be but manslaughter.<sup>4</sup> But a private person so interfering should give notice of his object, lest his purpose be mistaken,<sup>5</sup> though this notice may be implied from the circumstances.<sup>6</sup>

§ 45. FORCE MAY BE USED SUCH AS IS NECESSARY TO PREVENT PERPETRATION OF FELONY. Certainly a person endeavoring to prevent the consummation of a felony by others may properly use all necessary force for that purpose,<sup>1</sup> and resist all attempts to inflict bodily injury upon himself, and may lawfully, according to the law, as expressed in New York in 1870, detain the felons and hand them over to the officers of the law. The law, it is said, will not be astute in searching for such line of demarcation in this respect as will take the innocent citizen, whose property and person are in danger, from its protection, and place his life at the mercy of the felon.<sup>2</sup> Hence the felon may be arrested after the commission of the offense, if he can be in no other way secured.<sup>3</sup> But an arrest can not be justified on the ground of conjecture.<sup>4</sup>

§ 46. MAY APPREHEND CONVICTED FELON AFTER ESCAPE. It is also ruled that a private person may apprehend a felon who, after conviction upon his plea of guilty, has, with-

4. Prevention of Offenses.

§ 47. MAY INTERFERE TO PREVENT RIOT. Is, however, a private person justified in interfering to prevent or suppress a misdemeanor? This question has been not infrequently considered in cases of riotous homicide; and the law undoubtedly is, that every good citizen, when a breach of the peace is threatened, is bound to intervene, and to render his assistance to the constituted authorities; and when the riot is raging he is justified in arresting any persons concerned in it, first notifying them that his object is the preservation of the peace.<sup>1</sup> When a magistrate or duly authorized public officer is on the spot, citizens engaged in the preservation of the peace should obey his orders; and a mere oral direction from him will authorize them to arrest without warrant.<sup>2</sup> When, however, the riot has ceased, and order is restored, the right of arrest without warrant by private individuals ceases.<sup>3</sup>

§ 48. — AND SO AS TO OTHER OFFENSES. In respect to other misdemeanors, the rule is that while it is not the duty of non-official persons to arrest offenders, yet a right so to arrest exists, when the act can not be otherwise stopped. Thus it has been held that a private person may without warrant arrest a notorious cheat, or persons using false weights or tokens.<sup>1</sup> But this is supposing there is no opportunity to obtain a warrant. If there be, the claim of a private person to arrest without warrant must be denied, as this claim is based exclusively on the failure of justice that would otherwise occur. ### APPREHENSION—BREAKING DOORS, AND SEARCH-WARRANTS.

1. Right to Search in General.

§ 49. House may be broken open to execute warrant in felony offenses, etc.

2. Its Exercise by Private Persons.

§ 50. In felonies this may be done by even private person without warrant.

3. Its Exercise by Constables or Peace Officers.

§ 51. Peace officer may on reasonable suspicion break open doors without warrant.

4. What Is "Suspicion."

§ 52. Private person requires stronger grounds for interference.

5. Search-Warrants—Their Issuance and Effect.

§ 53. Nature and function.

§ 54. Search-warrant to be issued on oath.

§ 55. House of third person may be broken open to secure offender or stolen goods.

§ 56. Keys ought to be first demanded.

6. Constitutionality of Search-Warrants.

§ 58. Search-warrants limited by constitution.

7. Illegality of Apprehension as Ground for Release.

§ 59. That arrest was illegal is irrelevant on the issue of guilt.

1. Right to Search in General.

§ 49. HOUSE MAY BE BROKEN OPEN TO EXECUTE WARRANT IN FELONIES, ETC. The first point to be here noticed is the right, when a warrant has duly issued for the apprehension of a person, to break open the door of his house.

The law in this respect is, that this may be done, if the offender can not otherwise be taken, in cases of felony, of imminent breach of the peace,<sup>1</sup> or of the reception of stolen goods; and in such cases a warrant is a justification, if there be no malice.<sup>2</sup>

Admittance into the house must, however, be first asked and refused;<sup>3</sup> but the officer can not be treated as a trespasser because he failed to notify the owner who the person to be arrested was, no inquiry having been made in relation thereto.<sup>4</sup>

Doctrine that a man's house is his castle, which can not be invaded in the service of process, has always been subject to the exception that the liberty or privilege of the house did not exist as against the king. It had no application, therefore, to the criminal process. Even in case of a misdemeanor, while it has been held in some cases that, before breaking open the outer door, the officer should demand admission, it is fully recognized in all the cases, that, after such demand and its refusal, the officer may lawfully enter by force and serve his process, even if it be against the occupant of the house.—Com. v. Reynolds, 120 Mass. 190, 21 Am. Rep. 510. See Kneas v. Fittler, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 263; Launock v. Brown, 2 Barn. & Ald. 592; Semayne's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 91, 77 Eng. Repr. 194; *Burdett v. Third person sought to be apprehended, officer may not break doors of house to apprehend such stranger, whom he believes to be secreted therein, but who is not therein.<sup>5</sup>

In cases of misdemeanors, unaccompanied with breach of the peace, this power, according to the old law, can not be exercised.<sup>6</sup>

Probable immediate danger of a felony, or breach of the peace, or other grave offense existing, the officer, giving notice of his character, may enter without warrant.<sup>7</sup>

2. Its Exercise by Private Persons.

§ 50. IN FELONIES THIS MAY BE DONE BY EVEN PRIVATE PERSON WITHOUT WARRANT. When a felony has been committed, or there is good reason to believe it to have been committed, then, if the offender take refuge in his own house, even a private individual may, without warrant, break into the house and apprehend the offender.<sup>1</sup> In case of the party apprehended proving innocent, however, an action of trespass may be sustained against the party so breaking open the doors without warrant, there being no probable cause.

Probability of the commission of a felony must be very strong to justify this extreme remedy being used by a private person. Mere suspicion will not justify its being employed by such.<sup>2</sup>

After indictment found, as will be seen later,<sup>3</sup> no place is a sanctuary for the offender.

3. Its Exercise by Constables or Peace Officers.

§ 51. PEACE OFFICER MAY ON REASONABLE SUSPICION BREAK OPEN DOORS WITHOUT WARRANT. A constable or peace officer may, on reasonable suspicion and without warrant, break open doors; and he has this additional protection, that it is his duty in the case of a felony being committed, so to act.<sup>1</sup> Certainly, if he has reason to believe a felony or an affray is impending, he has a right to break into a house to prevent it.<sup>2</sup>

Demanding admission in cases of felony as a prerequisite, has been doubted.<sup>3</sup> It is always best, however, to take this precaution; and in misdemeanors it has been considered requisite.

In case of escape, doors may be broken open to reapprehend a person who has escaped.<sup>4</sup> committed a felony in his presence.—Brooks v. Com., 61 Pa. St. 362, 100 Am. Dec. 645.

Upon mere suspicion of felony committed, a private person may not break open a house for the purpose of apprehending the supposed felon.—Brooks v. Com., 61 Pa. St. 352, 100 Am. Dec. 645. See Ryan v. Donnelly, 71 Ill. 100.

Upon fresh pursuit of a felon a private person may break doors of house in which he takes refuge (Brooks v. Com., 61 Pa. St. 632), but mere suspicion that person sought is concealed within a house will not justify a private person in breaking in the doors or otherwise forcing an entrance.—State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; Brooks v. Com., supra.

4. What is "Suspicion."

§ 52. PRIVATE PERSON REQUIRES STRONGER GROUNDS FOR INTERFERENCE. It should be kept in mind that a "bare suspicion" is to be distinguished from what is called by Blackstone a "probable suspicion."<sup>1</sup> To act officiously and intrusively on "bare suspicion" implies recklessness if not malice; and even a peace officer (a fortiori a private individual) can not shelter himself from the consequences if he break into the house of a private person on such bare suspicion. Here, again, we strike at the reason of the distinction between a peace officer and a private person in such respects. There are degrees of suspicion which would justify a peace officer in thus interfering which would by no means justify a private person. It is the duty of the former to ferret out crime; such duty is not assigned to the latter. What, therefore, in the peace officer is a meritorious though distasteful service, in the performance of which the law would save him harmless, may be in the private person an officious impertinence, for which damages in a civil action will be awarded.

5. Search-Warrants—Their Issuance and Effect.

§ 53. NATURE AND FUNCTION. A proceeding for a search-warrant may be a substantive criminal proceeding, but it is not necessarily so.<sup>1</sup> The police power of the state extends to the search for seizure, and the destruction of any and all property which is the subject of crime, or is the means of perpetrating a crime.<sup>2</sup>

Private residence can not be searched, or entered by an officer with a search warrant, unless it, or some part of it, be used as a store, shop, hotel, boarding house, or place of storage, or unless such

The function of a search-warrant is to cause a search to be made by an officer, at a particular place, for personal property stolen or embezzled, and to secure the production of the property, if found, before the magistrate.<sup>3</sup> Where the facts in the sworn application for the search-warrant also constitute a crime, the magistrate may issue a separate warrant of arrest.<sup>4</sup>

§ 54. SEARCH-WARRANT MAY BE ISSUED ON OATH. Search-warrants may be granted by justices of the peace on oath made before them that certain goods feloniously acquired are probably in the defendant's possession, or that certain articles, necessary to the course of public justice, are secreted in such a way as to make such a procedure essential to obtain them.<sup>1</sup> When legal in form, such warrant is a justification to the officer using it, though it was granted on evidence that subsequently appeared inadequate, and though there were other latent defects in its concoction. But a prosecutor who, maliciously and without probable cause, resorts to such instruments is liable for damages in an action of malicious prosecution.<sup>2</sup> And a warrant must accurately specify the building to be searched.<sup>3</sup>

§ 55. HOUSE OF THIRD PERSONS MAY BE BROKEN OPEN TO SECURE OFFENDER OR STOLEN GOODS. The general rule of law is that a search-warrant authorizing the search of one man's house will not authorize the officer to search the house of another person;<sup>1</sup> yet it has been held that the houses of third persons may be broken into, after the usual demand, to secure the offender, or his alleged spoils; though the probable cause necessary to justify such an invasion of private rights should be of a higher degree than that which is sufficient to justify a breaking into the offender's own house.

After indictment found, however, the defendant may be pursued and seized wherever he takes refuge; no house being a sanctuary to him.<sup>2</sup>

§ 56. KEYS OUGHT TO BE FIRST DEMANDED. In executing search-warrants, it is proper, before breaking open boxes or trunks, to demand the keys. Not until these have been refused is it lawful to force a lock.<sup>1</sup> But the right to such a preliminary demand, on the part of the owner or custodian, is considered as waived, when there is no person left in charge on whom the demand could be made.<sup>2</sup>

§ 57. WARRANT MUST BE STRICTLY FOLLOWED. The general rule is that the officer, in executing a search-warrant, must strictly follow the terms of the warrant under which he acts; yet in a case where the search-warrant directed the officer to search certain persons for lottery tickets, and if lottery tickets were found to bring the persons before the justice, after a search of the per-

7. Illegality of Apprehension as Ground for Release.

§ 59. THAT ARREST WAS ILLEGAL IS IRRELEVANT ON THE ISSUE OF GUILT. Where a party, who has been illegally apprehended is brought on habeas corpus before a judge, having the power of a committing magistrate, or when such a party sets up his illegal arrest as a defense, the question of the legality of the apprehension is not at issue, the only question being whether the party charged should be tried on the merits.<sup>1</sup>

Kidnapping. Nor is it any ground for relief that the party had been kidnapped in a foreign country (though he might be surrendered by the executive on demand of the sovereign of such country), the courts, on the question whether he should be held to trial, or, if tried, should be subjected to sentence, having nothing to do with the mode of his arrest.<sup>2</sup> Civil service, however, against a

EXTRADITION—AS BETWEEN THE SEVERAL UNITED STATES.

- § 60. In general.
- § 61. Under federal constitution and statute fugitives may be apprehended when fleeing from state to state.
- § 62. Apprehension may be had in anticipation of requisition.
- § 63. Sufficient if offense is penal in demanding state.
- § 64. Requisition must be duly proved, and lies for fugitives only.
- § 65. Federal courts can not compel governor to surrender.
- § 66. No objection that fugitive is amenable to asylum state.
- § 67. Governor of asylum state can not impeach requisition.
- § 68. — Ordinarily issues warrant of apprehension.
- § 69. Habeas corpus can not go behind warrant.
- § 70. Bail not to be taken.
- § 71. Indictment or affidavit must set forth a crime, and must be in course of judicial proceedings.
- § 72. Fugitive may be tried for other than requisition offense.
- § 73. Officers executing such process protected by federal courts.
- § 74. For federal offenses warrants may be issued in all districts.
- § 75. State has no power of international extradition.

§ 60. IN GENERAL. The federal authority is paramount in the matter of extradition of accused persons between the several states of the Union. The right of extradition, and the procedure therefor, are based entirely on the federal constitution and the acts of congress.<sup>1</sup> The power of congress to legislate on the subject is paramount, and the acts of congress are the paramount law on the subject,<sup>2</sup> upon which acts the governors of the various states and their agents must rely, and to which they must conform.<sup>3</sup>

Legislation by the states in aid of acts of congress on the subject is not objectionable, and such acts may very properly provide as to the means by which a fugitive from justice within the borders of a particular state may be apprehended, and may also provide proper and adequate facilities and means for accomplishing an extradition of a fugitive from justice;<sup>4</sup> and where a state has passed a statute prescribing the proceedings to be followed, the officer or person apprehending an alleged fugitive is bound thereby and must conform to the proceedings therein provided;<sup>5</sup> but the state law must be construed in connection with the act of congress, of which it is part.<sup>6</sup>

§ 61. UNDER FEDERAL CONSTITUTION AND STATUTE FUGITIVES MAY BE APPREHENDED WHEN FLEEING FROM STATE TO STATE. By the second section of the fourth article of the constitution of the United States, "a person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, and be removed to the state having jurisdiction."

By the act of February 12, 1793,<sup>1</sup> "Section 1, whenever the executive authority of any state in the Union, or of Demanding state must produce indictment, or a duly authenticated copy thereof, before the executive of the state from whom the fugitive is demanded; this requirement of the act of Congress is imperative, since it is expressed in terms of unmistakable import in the law.—State ex rel. either of the territories northwest or south of the river Ohio, shall demand any person as a fugitive from justice of the executive authority of any such state or territory to which such person shall have fled, and shall moreover produce the copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any state or territory as aforesaid, charging the person so demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime,<sup>2</sup> certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state or territory from which the person so charged fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the state or territory to which such person shall have fled, to cause him or her to be arrested and secured, and notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear; but if no such agent shall appear within six months from the time of the arrest, the prisoner may be discharged. And all costs or expenses incurred in the apprehending, securing, and transmitting such fugitive to the state or territory making such demand, shall be paid by such state or territory.

“Sec. 2. Any agent appointed as aforesaid, who shall receive the fugitive into his custody, shall be empowered to transport him or her to the state or territory from which he or she shall have fled. And if any person or persons shall by force set at liberty, or rescue the fugitive from such agent, while transporting as aforesaid, the person or persons so offending shall, on conviction, be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned not exceeding one year.”<sup>3</sup> By a subsequent statute, the act of Congress above set out.—Matter of Romaine, 23 Cal. 585; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. Ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148; Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 298.

Cherokee Nation, being neither a "state" nor a "territory" within the meaning of the federal Constitution or of the act of Congress above set out, a state Governor had no authority to issue a warrant and follow a fugitive from justice into that territory.—Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 298.

District of Columbia, not being a "state," does not come within the constitutional and statutory provisions above discussed; but is governed entirely by the act of March 3, 1801 (2 Stats. at L., ch. 24), and it has been held that although the statute does not specifically provide for a return to the district of fugitives from justice, yet they may be surrendered under Rev. Stats., § 1014 (2 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st Ed., p. 321). See Matter of Dana, 7 Ben. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 3554; In re Buell, 3 Dill. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 2102.

International extradition.—Rulings in cases of, not necessarily in point.—"The supposed analogy between a surrender under a treaty providing for extradition, and the surrender here in question, has been earnestly pressed upon our attention. There, the act is done by the authorities of the nation—in behalf of the nation—pursuant to a national obligation. That obligation rests alike upon the people of all the states. A national exigency might require prompt affirmative action. In making the order of surrender, all the states, through their constituted agent, the general government, are represented and concur, and it may well be said to be the act of each and all of them. Not so here."—Swayne, J., Taylor v. Taintor, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 366, 21 L. Ed. 287, affirming 36 Conn. 242, 4 Am. Rep. 58.

§ 62. APPREHENSION MAY BE HAD IN ANTICIPATION OF REQUISITION. In several states statutes have been passed authorizing the arrest of fugitives in advance of the reception of a requisition.<sup>1</sup> In other states the practice is to sustain, on grounds of comity, such arrests, although there be no local enabling statute.<sup>2</sup>

But in either case, where, instead of an indictment, an affidavit is taken as the basis of application, in proceedings in anticipation of demand, it must be as explicit and full as would justify a magistrate in issuing a warrant of arrest. It must specify the crime, aver its commission and indictability in the requiring state, and state that the party required is a fugitive.<sup>3</sup>

4 Botts v. Williams, 56 Ky. (17 B. Monr.) 687. The practice, however, of permitting extra-territorial arrests, and even of captures and removals, has been permitted in several states.

"It was formerly the practice," says Gibson, C. J., in Dow's Case, 18 Pa. St. 37, "of the executive of this state to act in the matter by the instrumentality of the judiciary; and though I have issued many warrants, none of them has ever been followed by an arrest. The consequence of the inefficiency of the constitutional provision has been, that extra-territorial arrests have been winked at in every state; but an arrest at sufferance would be useless if its illegality could be set up by the culprit." strued according to the rules of the demanding state, and is to be determined by the courts of such state.<sup>2</sup>)

§ 64. REQUISITION MUST BE DULY PROVED AND LIES FOR FUGITIVES ONLY. In the requisition the governor must certify that the copy of the indictment or affidavit required by the statute is true, and that the fugitive claimed is charged with the crime therein specified. (Either in the requisition or in a separate warrant the name is given of the person to whom the fugitive is to be delivered.) It is sometimes argued that unless the party demanded was in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the offense no requisition would lie. If this rule rests on the ground that the place of the commission of a crime is the place where the offender was at the time, it can not be sustained. Many crimes, as we have elsewhere seen, may be committed by a person at the time in another state; and such person may be made responsible in the state of commission.<sup>1</sup> (But the rule may be placed on another ground which is unassailable. The constitution provides only for the extradition of persons who "flee" from justice. None can be, therefore, demanded who has not "fled" from or left the demanding state "in flight."<sup>2</sup>)

To this effect is a Pennsylvania statute of 1878.

In Jones v. Leonard, 50 Iowa 106, 32 Am. Rep. 116, the court held that "a citizen and resident of one state charged in a requisition with constructive commission of crime in another state from which in fact he has never fled, is not a fugitive from justice, and the determination of the governor as to the sufficiency of the facts alleged is not conclusive."

The fact that accused had no belief that he had committed crime before he left the demanding state, does not prevent him from being an extraditable fugitive from justice.<sup>3</sup>

(Not corporeally present in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the offense for which he is sought to be extradited, it seems that he is not a fugitive and can not be extradited for such offense;<sup>4</sup> and where accused was merely constructively present in the demanding state at the time of the commission of the crime, he can not be deemed a fugitive from justice.<sup>5</sup>)

stitute an accused person a fugitive.<sup>6</sup> It is enough if the party left after the commission of the crime.<sup>7</sup> That he was at the time domiciled in the asylum state is no defense.<sup>8</sup> But the law is that he must have "fled," or left, the state after the crime. It is not enough if he was called away by public duty: e. g., attendance on congress.<sup>9</sup>

The inference to be drawn from a commission of a crime in one state and then a presence in another is not conclusive as to fleeing.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Having committed the crime and left the state for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution therefor anticipated or begun, is not necessary to constitute a person a fugitive within the meaning of the federal statute; the simple fact that he has within the state committed a criminal offense, has thereafter left the jurisdiction of the state, and when prosecution is begun he is found within another state, this is sufficient to make him subject to extradition.—Ex parte Deckson, 4 Ind. culty is obviated by statutes making the performance of the duty obligatory on the executive;<sup>2</sup> in other states it is accepted as one of those discretionary courtesies that it is usual for one sovereign to render to another. Were this not the uniform practice, it would be the duty of congress, as it is indubitably within its power, to provide a distinctively federal agency for the enforcing of the constitutional provision.<sup>3</sup>

§ 66. NO OBJECTION THAT FUGITIVE IS AMENABLE TO ASYLUM STATE. It has been said that the executive of the asylum state is not bound to deliver a person amenable to the penal law of such state.<sup>1</sup> But the better opinion is that the mere fact that the offender is so amenable (no proceedings against him having been commenced) is no bar to a requisition.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, if a prosecution has already commenced in the asylum state, then this state has jurisdiction of the person of the fugitive for this particular purpose, and the proceedings should go on until their judicial determination.<sup>3</sup> (If the offense is the same as that for which the requisition has issued, then the first state commencing proceedings, if both have jurisdiction, has precedence.<sup>4</sup>)

§ 67. GOVERNOR OF ASYLUM STATE CAN NOT IMPEACH REQUISITION. We have already observed that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to require a governor of a state to issue his warrant for the arrest of a fugitive; and that if he does so, it is either in obedience to local law or in the exercise of a discretion which the courts can not compel. It is otherwise, however, when the governor accepts the office proposed to him by the statute, for in this case he is bound to execute the commission he undertakes. It is, indeed, a prerequisite to his action, that it should be proved to his satisfaction that the person against whom he is asked to issue a warrant is the same as the one charged in the requisition, that such person is a fugitive from the demanding state, and that the affidavit was authenticated by the demanding governor.<sup>1</sup> But beyond this he can not go. If the requisition is duly backed by indictment or affidavit, a certified copy of which is attached, he has no right to inquire whether the person demanded was guilty of the offense charged,<sup>2</sup> or whether the object of the requisition was other than it apparently seemed. The only cases in which the requisition, if regular and duly backed, can be assailed, are those in which judgments of sister states, under an analogous provision of the Constitution, can be assailed. (It may be shown that the requisition fails from want of jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> or was fraudulently obtained, and hence void, or was of a character such as stripped it of conclusiveness. ~~But when once its genuineness and its technical conformity to law are ascertained, its averments can not be disputed.~~<sup>4</sup> A requisition can no more be impeached on the ground that improper collateral motives co-operated in obtaining it, than can a judgment of a sister state be impeached on the same grounds, supposing there was no fraudulent imposition on or by the executive issuing it.<sup>5</sup> If there was jurisdiction—if the governor in the one case, or the judgment court in the other, were not fraudulently imposed upon—then the averments of the record in either case can not be assailed in the state in which execution is sought.<sup>6</sup> But the requisition must be accompanied by <sup>6</sup> "Executive has no general power to issue warrants of arrest, and when he proceeds to do so in these cases, his whole authority comes from the Constitution and the act of Congress, and he must keep within it."—Judge Cooley, in Princeton Rev., Jan., 1879, p. 165.

It may be added, that if he accepts the commission he must hold to it. He can not accept it, and then, on the ground that he is the executive of a sovereign state (he undertaking at the time to act as a federal commissioner), dispute its facts.

In opposition to the text may be noticed Kimpton's Case, Aug. 1878 (18 Alb. L. J. 298; Spear on Ex. 434), in which the Governor of Massachusetts, on the advice of the Attorney-General, held that he was justified in refusing a warrant on the grounds that the prosecution had been long delayed, and that an offer had been made to the defendant to enter a nolle prosequi in case he would turn state's evidence. But this can not be sustained, as the Governor of Massachusetts could no more inquire into the motives of the Governor of South Carolina than can a state court when acting on a judgment of a sister state, under the parallel constitutional provision as to judgments of other states, hold that it is entitled to inquire what were the motives of the plaintiff in the judgment, or of the court by whom the decision was made.

As concurring in this conclusion, see reasoning of Mr. Chief Justice Cooley in Princeton Rev. for Jan. 1879; Cooley's Const. Lim. 16, n. 1; Walker's Am. Law, § 64, and article 13 Am. L. Rev. 181; In Matter of Romaine, 23 Cal. 585; Johnson v. Riley, 13 Ga. 97; Compton v. Williams, 3 Ohio L. J. 642, 40 Ohio St. 130, cited supra, § 28; Kentucky v. Dennison, 65 U. S. (24 How.) 66, 16 L. Ed. 717. See, however, In re Perry (D. C.), 2 Crim. L. Mag. 84, and note thereto.

Question in text distinguished.—The question in the text, it should be remembered, is very different from that which arises when it is attempted to use extradition process to enforce the collection of a debt. No doubt the courts will refuse their aid to such a perversion of justice, when the attempt is made to enforce such debt. See an indictment or affidavit, specifying the crime. A mere statement that the crime has been committed is not enough.<sup>7</sup>

§ 68. — ORDINARILY ISSUES WARRANT OF APPREHENSION. The requisition being in due form, and being presented to the governor of the asylum state, the practice is for him to issue a warrant of arrest containing the proper recitals and averments. In several states statutes have been passed prescribing the terms of such warrants; which statutes, so far as they are supplementary to federal legislation, are constitutional.<sup>1</sup> The warrant must set forth facts necessary to jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

§ 69. HABEAS CORPUS CAN NOT GO BEHIND WARRANT. To examine the grounds of imprisonment, in this, as well as in other cases of arrest, a writ of habeas corpus may be obtained; this writ being within the jurisdiction of state courts to issue.<sup>1</sup> The points which may be thus raised are as follows:

Arrest prior to requisition. If there be a local statute authorizing this, and if proper ground be laid, the prisoner will be remanded, and the same course will be taken supra, § 59. Rorer on Inter-State Law, 222.

But such collateral motive, extortionate as it may be, is no more a bar to extradition process than it would be a bar to ordinary proceedings of arrest for a crime.

It should be added that the position in the text is in no respect inconsistent with the position that a Governor may revoke his warrant after it has been issued. This he may undoubtedly do, for the reason that he is at liberty to decline to accept the agency in this respect that the federal government tenders him. See Wyeth v. Richardson, 76 Mass. (10 Gray)

240; Work v. Corrington, 34 Ohio St. 319. But if he undertakes the agency he must execute it according to the terms of the mandate.

when the arrest, under the local practice, is sustainable on grounds of comity.<sup>2</sup>

Defects in warrant. The first point is, is there a warrant on which the court can act? To the legality of the warrant there are the following prerequisites:

1. The prisoner must have been a fugitive.<sup>3</sup> If not, the governor had no jurisdiction, and on proof that the prisoner was not a "fugitive," and had not been in the state from which the requisition issues, there must be a discharge.<sup>4</sup> (But a probable case is enough to sustain the warrant in this relation.<sup>5</sup>)

2. (The identity of the prisoner as the party charged must appear;<sup>6</sup> and this is a matter of parol proof.<sup>7</sup>)

3. The warrant must be based on an indictment or affidavit, which is essential to the validity of the requisition.<sup>8</sup> But behind indictment or affidavit the court will not go, nor can their averments, except for the purpose of showing fraud or non-identity, be contradicted by parol.<sup>9</sup> And the warrant of the governor is prima facie evidence, at least, that all necessary legal prerequisites have been complied with, and, if previous proceedings appear to be regular, is conclusive evidence of the right to remove the prisoner to the state from which he fled.<sup>10</sup> It is enough, therefore, if the return to the writ of habeas corpus aver an indictment or affidavit to its legal effect without annexing a copy.<sup>11</sup> When, however, the indictment or affidavit is annexed, it may be examined on habeas corpus for the purpose of determining how far it sets forth a crime under the federal statute.<sup>12</sup>

§ 73. OFFICERS EXECUTING SUCH PROCESS PROTECTED BY FEDERAL COURTS. We have already noticed numerous cases in which the action of the officers of a state in arresting alleged fugitives from justice have been reviewed by the judiciary of such state.<sup>1</sup> While this jurisdiction can not be rightfully disputed, it being now settled that an agent appointed by state authority to receive or deliver a fugitive is not a federal officer,<sup>2</sup> it may also be maintained that an officer who is arrested by state authorities when bona fide employed in executing extradition process may be released by federal courts on a writ of habeas corpus.<sup>3</sup> But so far as concerns the arrested party,

Under the Revised Statutes of the United States, it is made the duty of judges, when offenses against the United States are charged, to issue, under certain conditions, warrants for the arrest and removal of the offender for trial before such United States court as has cognizance of the offense.<sup>1</sup> In such cases the practice is to bring the defendant before a judge or other committing magistrate in the district of arrest, subject to the action of such magistrate, who may discharge or surrender.<sup>2</sup> The order is an exercise of a judicial function, and the court in considering it can go behind the indictment or information, and decide the question on the merits.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER X.

EXTRADITION—AS BETWEEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND FOREIGN STATES.

- § 76. Limited to treaty.
- § 77. Offense must be one recognized by asylum state.
- § 78. Treaties are retrospective.
- § 79. Extradition refused when there can be no fair trial.
- § 80. — And so for political offenses.
- § 81. — And so for persons escaping from military service.
- § 82. — But not because the person demanded is a subject of the asylum state.
- § 83. — Where asylum state has jurisdiction there should be no surrender.
- § 84. Conflict of opinion as to whether a foreign state can claim a subject who has committed a crime in a third state.
- § 85. Extradition does not lie for a case not included in a treaty.
- § 86. — Nor where the defendant is in custody for another offense.
- § 87. Trial for offense different from that for which extradited.
- § 88. Courts may hear case before mandate.
- § 89. Complaint and warrant should be special.
- § 90. Warrant may be returnable to commissioner.
- § 91. Evidence should be duly authenticated.
- § 92. Terms to be construed as in asylum state.
- § 93. Evidence must show probable cause.
- § 94. Evidence may be heard from defense.
- § 95. Circuit court has power of review.
- § 96. Final surrender by executive—Discretion of executive.

§ 76. LIMITED TO TREATY. Extradition, as a general rule, as between foreign states, is limited to cases provided for by treaty;<sup>1</sup> nor, as will hereafter be seen, when there is a treaty, will a requisition be sustained for an offense which the treaty does not include.<sup>2</sup> It has, however, been held by eminent jurists, that, independently of the cases provided for by treaty, it is by the law of nations within the discretion of the executive to surrender a fugitive from another land when there is reasonable proof showing such fugitive to be guilty of any offense regarded jure gentium as a gross crime.<sup>3</sup> The opinion of Chancellor Kent has not gone unchallenged and has in more recent cases been disapproved by the United States Supreme Court,<sup>4</sup> holding that no state is bound by the law of nations to deliver up a person charged with a criminal offense in, or even where convicted of crime in, another country.<sup>5</sup>

Wheaton's International Law (§ 115) says: "The public jurists are divided upon the question, how far a sovereign state is obliged to deliver up persons, whether its own subjects or foreigners, charged with or convicted of crimes committed in another country, upon the demand of a foreign state, or of its officers of justice. Some of these writers maintain the doctrine, that according to the law and usage of nations, every sovereign state is obliged to refuse an asylum to individuals accused of crimes affecting the general peace and security of society, and whose extradition is demanded by the government of that country within whose jurisdiction the crime has been committed. Such is the opinion of Grotius, Heineccius, Burlamaqui, Vattel, Rutherford, Schmelzing, and Kent. According to Puffendorf, Voet, Martens, Klüber, Leyser, Kluntz, Saalsfeld, Schmaltz, Mittermeyer, and Heffter, on the other hand, the extradition of fugitives from justice is a matter of imperfect obligation only; and though it may be habitually practiced by certain states as the result of mutual comity and convenience, requires to be confirmed and regulated by special compact, in order to give it force of international law."

In Stupp's case, in 1873, the United States refused to surrender to Belgium on the ground of want of treaty stipulation. Infra, § 84.

As coinciding with this conclusion, see State v. Hawes, 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 697, 26 Am. Rep. 242; Adrian v. Lagrave, 59 N. Y. 110, 17 Am. Rep. 317; Dos Santos's Case, 2 Brock. 493, Fed. Cas. Mr. Jefferson in his correspondence with Mr. Genet, in 1793 (Am. St. Papers, I. 175) denied the right aside from treaty; and he took the same position in his letter to the President of Nov. 7, 1791. To the same effect is the opinion of Atty.-Gen. Lee, in 1797 (1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 68), of Atty.-Gen. Wirt (Ibid. 509), and of Atty.-Gen. Taney (2 Ibid. 559), and of Atty.-Gen. Legaré (3 Ibid. 661), and of Atty.-Gen. Cushing (6 Ibid. 431).

In England, by the third section of the extradition act, a fugitive criminal is not to be surrendered to a foreign state unless provision is made by the law of that state, or by arrangement, that the fugitive criminal shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to the King's dominions, be detained or tried in that foreign state for any offense committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crime proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded. A clause embodying this principle is contained in the English extradition treaties concluded since 1870 with Germany, Belgium, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Brazil, Switzerland, Honduras, and Hayti. The treaty of 1842 with the United States contains no such restriction. As to extradition treaty between Switzerland and Great Britain, see Reg. v. Wilson, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 42.

The diplomatic authorities on this topic are given in Whart. Dig. Int. Law, § 268.

§ 77. OFFENSE MUST BE ONE RECOGNIZED BY ASYLUM STATE. Even supposing that extradition is to be granted, irrespective of treaty, it only lies for offenses jure gentium, and which are therefore punishable alike in the country granting the arrest<sup>1</sup> and that making the requisition.<sup>2</sup> The extradition treaties executed by the United States contain generally the provision that the surrender "shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial, if the crime or offense had been there committed."<sup>3</sup> Under this provision it has been held that it is sufficient if the offense charged be a crime in the asylum state at the time of its commission, though it was not so at the time of the execution of the treaty.<sup>4</sup> The offense must also be indictable as such in the demanding state; and if the facts do not show such an offense, within the treaty, the defendant will be discharged in the asylum state on habeas corpus.<sup>5</sup>

§ 78. TREATIES ARE RETROSPECTIVE. An extradition treaty, it has been held, covers cases of crimes committed before its adoption, so that under it process may issue to arrest fugitives charged with such crimes.<sup>1</sup>

§ 79. EXTRADITION REFUSED WHEN THERE CAN BE NO FAIR TRIAL. The sole object of extradition being to secure the due and effective administration of justice, a surrender

A contrary view is taken by Bar, an eminent German jurist, in an article in the Revue de Droit International for 1877.

can not be rightfully made, apart from treaty obligation, to a state in which a fair trial can not be had; nor will treaties in this respect be executed when the demanding state proposes to subject the fugitive to an oppressive trial not within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the adoption of the treaty.<sup>1</sup>

Surrender will be refused also when the effect is to expose the fugitive to a barbarous punishment, or one revolting to a civilized jurisprudence.<sup>2</sup>

Surrendering sovereign may impose conditions as to the way in which the surrendered fugitive is to be tried.<sup>3</sup>

§ 80. — AND SO FOR POLITICAL OFFENSES. Notwithstanding the authority of Grotius,<sup>1</sup> there is a general consent of modern jurists to the effect that between independent sovereignties there should be no extradition for political offenses.<sup>2</sup>

It is important, however, to remember that there may be cases nominally political, which, nevertheless, are essentially distinguishable from those in which the gist of the offense is opposition to government, and as to which extradition is to be refused.

§ 81. — AND SO FOR PERSONS ESCAPING FROM MILITARY SERVICE. "The delivering up by one state," says Mr.

In the extradition treaties negotiated by the United States political offenses are either implicitly excluded, by non-specification among those for which extradition will be granted, or are excepted in express terms. Nor can an independent extraditable offense be used as a mask to cover a reserved political prosecution. No government, independent of treaty provisions, should surrender a fugitive without a guarantee that he is to be tried only for the offense specified in the demand. Infra, § 87.

Wheaton,<sup>1</sup> "of deserters from the military or naval service of another, also depends entirely upon mutual comity, or upon special compact between different nations"; but so far as concerns the extension of such surrender to any cases not provided for by convention, this may now be viewed as too broad a statement of the law.

With regard to the extradition of persons fleeing from threatened conscription, it is now conceded that no surrender should be made by the state of refuge.<sup>2</sup> So far as concerns deserters, no doubt cartel conventions for mutual extradition may, in some cases, be effective. But without such conventions, such surrenders are not now made; and under any circumstances there should be satisfactory proof that the deserter demanded was not led to enlist by wrong means, and will not be subjected, on his return, to a barbarous punishment. In the United States, conventions of this kind are rare.<sup>3</sup>

§ 82. — BUT NOT BECAUSE THE PERSON DEMANDED IS A SUBJECT OF THE ASYLUM STATE. The practice in the United States and in England has been not to refuse the extradition of a subject when demanded by the sovereign of a foreign state, for a crime committed in such state.<sup>1</sup> It is otherwise in Germany;<sup>2</sup> and an exception to this effect exists in our treaties with Prussia and the North German states, with Bavaria, with Baden, with Norway and Swe-

This subject is discussed by the commission on extradition, appointed by the British government in 1877, which concludes as follows:

"On the whole, the commission unanimously were of the opinion that it is inexpedient that the state should make any distinction in this respect between its own subjects and foreigners; and stipulations to the contrary should be omitted from all treaties."—Central Law Journal, 1878, 40; 19 Alb. den, with Mexico, and with Hayti. No such exception appears in the treaties with Great Britain, France, Hawaiian Islands, Italy, Nicaragua, or with the Dominican Republic. The true rule is, that wherever, by the jurisprudence of a particular country, it is capable of trying one of its subjects for an offense alleged to have been committed by such subject abroad, the extradition in such case may be refused; the asylum state then having the right of trying its own subject by its own laws. When, however, it does not assume jurisdiction of extra-territorial crimes committed by such subject, then extradition should be granted.

§ 83. — WHERE ASYLUM STATE HAS JURISDICTION THERE SHOULD BE NO SURRENDER. Supposing that the state in which the defendant has sought an asylum has, with the prosecuting state, admiralty jurisdiction of the offense, as where the offense was committed on the high seas, ought a surrender to be made? For several reasons, to pursue the argument of the last section, it should not.<sup>1</sup> In the first place, by refusing to surrender, a needless circuitry of process involving great cost is arrested. In the second place, a defendant's personal rights would be needlessly imperilled by his forcible removal to a foreign forum. And again, if a surrender could be made in one case of admiralty jurisdiction, it could be made in another; and if the rule be admitted at all, there would be few admiralty prosecutions that might not, at executive discretion, be removed to a foreign land under a foreign law. Even, therefore, should a surrender of such a party, in a case of admiralty jurisdiction, be granted, a court under the English common law, on a writ of habeas corpus, would direct his discharge.<sup>2</sup>

On the other hand, in the case of In re Sheazle, 1 Woodb. & M. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 12734, it was held that the extradition treaty with England required the surrender by

§ 84. CONFLICT OF OPINION AS TO WHETHER A FOREIGN STATE CAN CLAIM A SUBJECT WHO HAS COMMITTED A CRIME IN A THIRD STATE. A cognate question arises when the offense was committed by a subject of the demanding state in the territory of an independent foreign state. The only admissible interpretation, it has been argued, of the term "jurisdiction," is to treat it as convertible with country, so as to make it necessary for the offense, in order to sustain a requisition, to have been committed within the territory of the demanding state. Such is the view, as has been noticed, of Sir R. Phillimore, and so, also, was it held in England in 1858, by the eminent law officers of the crown, when consulted by the government as to whether the American government could be asked to surrender to England a British subject who had been guilty of homicide in France.<sup>1</sup> In 1873 the question arose in New York whether Prussia could demand the extradition of a prisoner for alleged crimes committed out of the territory of Prussia, but punishable by its laws. The prisoner was remanded by Judge Blatchford to the custody of the marshal, after an opinion by that learned judge in which it was elaborately argued that the term "jurisdiction" in the treaty covers cases such as that before the court.<sup>2</sup> When, however, the question of issuing a warrant the United States of a British subject who committed, on a British ship, on the high seas, piracy which was such by act of parliament, but not by the law of nations. Compare Bennett, In re, 11 Law T. R. 488.

In Reg. v. Nillins, 53 Law Journ. 157 (1858), it was held that extradition would be sustained in a case where the defendant, when in England, sent letters containing false pretenses to Hamburg, and then went to Hamburg, where the

of surrender came before the secretary of state, he called upon Attorney-General Williams for an opinion on the question as to whether the surrender could be lawfully made. The question was answered in the negative by the attorney-general, on the ground that, so far as concerns the extradition treaties, "jurisdiction" by the demanding state can not be held to exist over the territory of an independent civilized state.<sup>3</sup> Restricting the opinion of the attorney-general to this narrow statement, it may be accepted as a suitable rule for the guidance of the federal executive in the delicate question of determining to which of two foreign civilized states a fugitive, in case of conflict, is to be surrendered.<sup>4</sup> But so far as concerns the meaning of the term "jurisdiction," the reasoning of Judge Blatchford is unanswerable. "Jurisdiction" can not, in our international dealings with other states, be restricted to "territory," without abandonment, not only of our right to punish for offenses on the high seas, and in barbarous lands, but of that authority over American citizens in foreign lands which we have uniformly

<sup>3</sup> This is the only point necessarily involved, and it is just to the attorney-general to limit his argument to this point, though some expressions used by him have a wider scope.

<sup>4</sup> From the opinion we take the following: "Thomas Allsop, a British subject, was charged as an accessory before the facts to the murder of a Frenchman in Paris, in 1858, and escaped to the United States, and as he was punishable therefore by the laws of Great Britain, the question as to whether he could be demanded by Great Britain of the American government, under the extradition treaty of 1842, was submitted to Sir J. D. Harding, the queen's advocate, the attorney and solicitor general, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, since chief baron of the exchequer, and Sir Hugh Cairns, since lord chancellor, and they recorded their judgment as follows: 'We are of the opinion that Allsop is not a person charged with the crime of murder committed within the jurisdiction of the British crown, within the meaning of the treaty of 1842, and that his extradition can not properly be demanded of the United States under that treaty.' Forsyth's Case, p. 268." 11 Blatch. 128. See, also, opinion of Atty.-Gen. Cushing, 8 Opin. Atty.-Gen. 215.

claimed,<sup>5</sup> and which our imperial position as one of the leading powers of Christendom demands.<sup>6</sup>

§ 85. EXTRADITION DOES NOT LIE FOR A CASE NOT INCLUDED IN A TREATY. We have already noticed that, as a rule, there can be no extradition without treaty.<sup>1</sup> Where a treaty exists making certain offenses the subject of extradition, this must be regarded as declaring that only such offenses shall be the subject of extradition between the countries in question, and that consequently extradition is not to be granted for other offenses.<sup>2</sup> Thus in Vogt's case, which has just been discussed,<sup>3</sup> the attorney-general, after arguing that the case was not within the treaty with Prussia, properly held that if the claim was not within that treaty, it could not be based generally on the law of nations.<sup>4</sup>

Whether there can be extradition under a treaty without legislation has been much discussed. That there can be is plain when the treaty is not conditioned on future legislation.<sup>5</sup>

general said: "Able writers have contended that there was a reciprocal obligation upon nations to surrender fugitives from justice; though now it seems to be generally agreed that this is altogether a matter of courtesy. But it is to be presumed where there are treaties upon the subject that fugitives are to be surrendered only in cases and upon the terms specified in such treaties." Vogt, In re. See, supra, § 84, for the other questions arising in this case.

<sup>5</sup> Robbins's Case, Whart. St. Tr. 392; Bee's R. 266. This ruling was defended by Judge Marshall, when in the House of Representatives, on reasoning which Mr. Gallatin thought unassailable. Adams's Gallatin, 231-2. See, contra, Spear on Extrad. 53. But so far as concerns

§ 86. — NOR WHERE THE DEFENDANT IS IN CUSTODY FOR ANOTHER OFFENSE. Where the defendant is already in custody, or under recognizances for trial in the state on which the requisition is made, the requisition will be refused, at least until the defendant's discharge.<sup>1</sup>

§ 87. TRIAL FOR OFFENSE DIFFERENT FROM THAT FOR WHICH EXTRADITED. Whether, when a fugitive is demanded to meet a particular offense, included in the treaty under which the proceedings take place, he can be tried for another offense, has been the subject of much discussion.<sup>1</sup> It was held by Mr. Fish, when secretary of state, that the government of the United States could give no stipulation to that of Great Britain that a party extradited by the United States under the treaty then in force, would not be tried for any offense other than that for which he was extradited; and it was further maintained by him "that the treaty and the practice between the two countries would allow the prosecution for an offense distinct from that for which he (the fugitive) was surrendered." In December, 1886, the question came before the Supreme Court of the United States on a certificate of division from the circuit court of New York on a motion to arrest judgment on a conviction for inflicting cruel and unusual punishment on a sailor, this not being an extraditable defense, the offense for which the defendant was extradited being murder. It was held by the supreme court of the United States that the defendant could be tried, under the proceedings, for no other offense than murder, Waite, C. J., dissenting.<sup>2</sup> This ruling, therefore, decides that a party brought into the United States by extradition can not be convicted of any other crime than that for which he was extradited. This view is sustained by high independent authorities; and is right as a principle of international law. It is an abuse of this high process and an infringement of those rights of asylum which the law of nations rightly sanctions, to permit the charge of an offense for which extradition lies to be used to cover an offense for which extradition does not lie, or which it is not considered politic to introduce in the demand.<sup>3</sup> At the same time when the defendant is brought over on an extraditable offense which contains another extraditable offense (e. g., as murder contains manslaughter), there is no reason why the defendant, the proof failing of the higher crime, should not be convicted of the lower, both being extraditable.<sup>4</sup> But mere England.<sup>1</sup> The same court ruled in 1865 that "forgery," in the treaty with the United States, would not be construed to include embezzlement.<sup>2</sup> And it is admissible for the defense to show that the case is not one included in the treaty.<sup>3</sup> At the same time, if the offense is not one which in the demanding state would be held to be within the treaty, surrender may be refused.<sup>4</sup>

Judge Bee's decision to deliver Robbins to the British consul, this is not sustained by Judge Marshall's argument, which denies this right to the judiciary and asserts it for the president.

§ 93. EVIDENCE MUST SHOW PROBABLE CAUSE. court will not reverse the commissioner's action upon trifling grounds or matters of form; and only for substantial error in law, or for such manifest error in procedure as would warrant a court of appeals in reversing.<sup>2</sup> And as was subsequently ruled, it is not enough to charge a conclusion at law, e. g., "forgery." The time and place, and nature of the crime, and its subject-matter should be set out.<sup>3</sup> Nor will the court discharge absolutely on account of an error of the commissioner in admission or rejection of evidence.<sup>4</sup> The practice is, in such case, simply to discharge from the first commitment, leaving the examination to proceed anew.<sup>5</sup>

TAKING MONEY AND PROPERTY FROM PRISONER.

§ 97. In general.

§ 98. Proofs of crime may be taken from person.

§ 99. — But not money, unless connected with the offense.

§ 97. IN GENERAL. The general rule of law is that, in the absence of a statute, an officer has no right to take money or property from the person or possession of a prisoner, except such as may afford evidence of the crime charged,<sup>1</sup> which is a means of identifying the criminal,<sup>2</sup> or which may be helpful to the prisoner in effecting an escape.<sup>3</sup> (The officer has an undoubted right to make a search,<sup>4</sup>) and considering the nature of the accusation he

A statute not necessary to authorize apprehending officer to search prisoner. The power exists from the nature and objects of the public duty the officer is to perform. Such authority is given to committing magistrates in some states (e. g. Mass. Rev. Stats. 1889, § 4308); but unless the apprehending officer has the authority immediately, on making the apprehension, all evidence of the crime, and of identification of the criminal, might be destroyed before the prisoner could be taken before the magistrate.—Holker v. Hennessey, 141 Mo. 527, 64 Am. St. Rep. 524, 39 L. R. A. 165, 42 S. W. 1090.

Officer without warrant may not compel person apprehended on suspicion of having committed larceny, to be stripped and searched.—Hebrew v. Pullis, 73 N. J. L. 621, 118 Am. St. Rep. 716, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 580, 64 Atl. 121.

Person found in vicinity of crime who refuses to answer questions, may be searched for concealed weapons before being taken to prison.—Gisske v. Sanders, 9 Cal. App. 13, 98 Pac. 43.

Search of prisoner by apprehending officer is justifiable as an incident of a lawful arrest, only; but if the apprehension be unlawful, the search is not only unlawful, but is an aggravation of the illegal arrest.<sup>6</sup>

§ 98. PROOFS OF CRIME MAY BE TAKEN FROM PERSON. Those arresting a defendant are bound to take from his person any articles which may be of use as proof in the trial of the offense with which the defendant is charged.<sup>1</sup> These articles are properly to be deposited with the committing magistrate, to be retained by him with the other evidence in the case, until the time comes for their return to the prosecuting authorities of the state. Sometimes, however, they are by local usage given at once to the prosecuting authorities. However this may be, they should be carefully preserved for the purpose of the trial; and after its close returned to the person whose property they lawfully are.

§ 99. — (BUT NOT MONEY, UNLESS CONNECTED WITH OFFENSE. The right of the arresting officer to remove money from the defendant's person is limited to those cases in which the money is connected with the offense with which the defendant is charged.) Any wider license would not only be a violation of his personal rights, but would impair his means for preparing for his defense.<sup>1</sup>

1090; Classon v. Morrisson, 47 N. H. 482, 93 Am. Dec. 459.

Articles found upon person of one apprehended charged with crime, may be held to be used as evidence on the trial of the accused.—People for Use of Tamplin v. Beach, 49 Colo. 520, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 873, 113 Pa. 513.

Books and papers not relating to the matter in issue, seized on a bench warrant directing the apprehension of accused, are improperly taken, and it is within the non-reviewable discretion of the court to direct their return, and enforce the order against the district attorney by contempt proceedings.—Wise v. Mills, 110 C. C. A. 563, 189 Fed. 583.

CHAPTER XII.

TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS AND MEASUREMENTS—HANDCUFFING.

§ 100. Taking photographs and Bertillon measurements.

§ 101. — Arrest on suspicion of crime, or indictment for crime.

§ 102. Right to handcuff prisoner.

§ 100. TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS AND BERTILLON MEASUREMENTS. A sheriff or other officer apprehending on a warrant may exercise his discretion as to the means necessary to keep the prisoner safe and secure after the apprehension, and has the right to take such steps and adopt such measures as to him may appear to be necessary to the identification and recapture of the prisoner in his custody, should he escape or be rescued. If he deems it necessary to the safe-keeping, and to prevent the escape of the prisoner, the officer may take his photograph, a measurement of his height, ascertain his weight, name, residence, place of birth, occupation, color of his eyes, hair, beard, and the like.<sup>1</sup>

Photographing and measuring by Bertillon system of arrested persons is not unconstitutional, and violates no right of the prisoner where the photograph is not placed in the "rogues' gallery" before the accused is convicted.—Downs v. Swann, 111 Md. 62, 134 Am. St. Rep. 586, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 743, 73 Atl. 653.

"Unless discretion abused through wanton malice, or a reckless disregard for and a selfish indifference to the common dictates of humanity, the officer is not liable."—Monks, J., in State ex rel. Burns v. Clausmeier, 154 Ind. 599, 77 Am. St. Rep. 511, 50 L. R. A. 73, 57 N. E. 541. See Firestone v. Rice, 71 Mich. 377, 15 Am. St. Rep. 266, 38 N. W. 885; Diers v. Mallon, 46 Neb. 121, 50 Am. St. Rep. 598, 64 N. W. 722.

Unless to identify person or detect crime, picture can not be taken. Where a person is under arrest, or within the court's jurisdiction, no necessity arises for the exercise of the photography act before trial and conviction.—Schulman v. Whitaker, 117 La. 703, 8 Ann. Cas. 1176, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 274, 42 So. 227.

On the ground that one of the ways to prevent crime and to protect the rights of persons and property, is to know who are habitual criminals, the authorities may photograph, and place the picture in the "rogues' gallery," a person who has been frequently arrested,<sup>2</sup> who is an associate of criminals, and who has been convicted of crime.<sup>3</sup> A mandamus will not lie to prevent such photographing,<sup>4</sup> or to compel police commissioners or other officers to remove the picture from the "rogues' gallery."<sup>5</sup>

Records made under authority of law, that is, after a conviction has been had, unless the statute provides relief for one whose conviction has been subsequently reversed, mandamus to compel the removal or destruction of such records will not lie, the legislature alone being able to grant relief.<sup>6</sup>

"If the police commissioners have wronged the relator at all, that wrong is in the nature of a libel, for which he has an adequate remedy at law."—People ex rel. Joyce v. York, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 658, 59 N. Y. Supp. 418, approved in Owen v. Partridge, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 415, 82 N. Y. Supp. 248.

Injunction will lie to prevent taking of photograph of person accused of crime before his conviction, and from placing such photograph in the "rogues' gallery," unless it is necessary for identification, or for the detection of crime.—Itzkovitch v. Whitaker, 117 La. 708, 116 Am. St. Rep. 215, 42 So. 228.

Publication of innocent man's photograph in "rogues' gallery" sufficient ground to sustain injunction.—Itzkovitch v. Whitaker, 115 La. 479, 112 Am. St. Rep. 272, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1147, 39 So. 499.

§ 101. — ARREST ON SUSPICION OF CRIME, OR INDICTMENT FOR CRIME. There is no statute which gives the police the right to require one who is under suspicion of having committed crime, or who has been simply indicted on a charge of crime, but not yet convicted, to submit to having his photograph taken and being measured according to the Bertillon system, or impressions of the members of his body made for the purpose of preserving them in the criminal records of the police department; such acts are a gross outrage and lawless, and the persons connected therewith are liable both civilly and criminally.<sup>1</sup> Nevertheless mandamus will not lie<sup>2</sup> to compel the police to destroy the photographs, negatives, measurements and impressions; the reason being that mandamus will lie to compel one to do what ought to be done in the discharge of a public duty, only, and not to compel him to undo what has been improperly done, even when done under the color of the performance of a public duty.<sup>3</sup>

§ 102. RIGHT TO HANDCUFF PRISONER. An apprehending officer may exercise some discretion as to the best means of taking and securing the prisoner. To justify handcuffing it is not necessary that the prisoner should be unruly, should attempt to escape, or should do anything indicating a necessity for such a restraint, nor, in the absence of any of these, that he should be a notoriously bad character.<sup>1</sup> In other words, an apprehending officer

The mere fact that the arresting officer in a case of suspected felony put handcuffs on the prisoner is not such unnecessary violence as entitles the plaintiff to recover punitive damages.—Edger v. Burke, 96 Md. 715, 54 Atl. 986.

Where the officer had two prisoners who were strangers to him under arrest, and it was dark and he had a long distance to go with them, in the absence of wantonness or malice no additional damages can be assessed because the prisoners were handcuffed.—Mc- is authorized to take such precautions for the safety of his prisoner as in his judgment seems necessary, such as tying or handcuffing, provided he acts in good faith and without malice.<sup>2</sup> The right to handcuff or otherwise manacle a prisoner depends upon the circumstances in each particular case,<sup>3</sup> such as the nature of the charge and the conduct and temper of the prisoner; but an officer is not justified in handcuffing with a felon one charged with a misdemeanor and marching them thus through the streets.<sup>4</sup>

Where the apprehending officer meets with resistance on the part of the prisoner, he may tie him;<sup>5</sup> but where to effect the apprehension and safe delivery to jail it is neither necessary nor reasonable to handcuff the prisoner, the officer may not do so.<sup>6</sup>

sider, in determining that question, the threatening language used by the brother of the plaintiff, that there was no prison in which to confine the defendant, and that the irons were not placed upon him until after the threatening language referred to was used, together with other surrounding circumstances, and we see no reason for disturbing the verdict upon this ground."—Cochran v. ### DISPOSITION OF PERSON APPREHENDED.

§ 103. In general.

§ 104. Apprehension on warrant.

§ 105. Apprehension without warrant.

§ 106. Officer before whom prisoner may be taken.

§ 103. IN GENERAL. The officer, after having apprehended a person on a charge of, or on reasonable suspicion of, his having committed an offense, the person thus apprehended can not be discharged by such officer without taking him before a magistrate;<sup>1</sup> otherwise he is a trespasser ab initio and is liable for false imprisonment.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a man is seized by an officer because drunk and disorderly, and is afterward discharged without being taken before a magistrate, the officer is liable for

Officer apprehending, to justify himself, must show that he did all that the law required that he should do.—Boston & M. R. Co. v. Small, 85 Me. 462, 35 Am. St. Rep. 379, 27 Atl. 349; Tubbs v. Turkey, 57 Mass. (3 Cush.) 438, 50 Am. Dec. 744; Brock v. Stimson, 108 Mass. 521, 11 Am. Rep. 390; Paine Origin of rule making officer trespasser ab initio where he fails to take prisoner before magistrate.—Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hinsdell, 76 Kan. 74, 13 Ann. Cas. 981, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 94, 90 Pac. 800.

assault and battery,<sup>3</sup> or for false imprisonment.<sup>4</sup> But a police officer apprehending for intoxication need not take the prisoner before a magistrate at an unreasonable hour at night, or where the offender is too intoxicated for trial.<sup>5</sup>

Apprehending with or without warrant,<sup>6</sup> as will be fully shown presently,<sup>7</sup> the officer must take the prisoner, without any unnecessary delay, before a magistrate.<sup>8</sup>

§ 104. APPREHENSION ON WARRANT. Where an officer acts on a warrant, he must follow its directions in dealing with his prisoner,<sup>1</sup> and take him before the justice's court issuing the warrant, as is commanded therein;<sup>2</sup> where the court is not in session, the officer may detain the prisoner until the court again convenes, and may lawfully commit the prisoner to jail for the purpose of safe keeping.<sup>3</sup>

§ 107. BAIL MAY APPREHEND AND SURRENDER PRINCIPAL—AT COMMON LAW. Under the common law a bail or security for the appearance in court of one accused of crime, has the right, at his own discretion, to apprehend his principal and surrender him into the hands of the law,<sup>1</sup> by delivering him into the custody of the magistrate before whom the bail was entered, or to the court to which the cause is returned.<sup>2</sup> It is sometimes the prac-

United States, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 13, 9 L. Ed. 541.

The right to surrender implies the right of apprehending as an incident to it.—State v. Lazarre, 12 La. Ann. 166.

<sup>2</sup> Com. v. Bronson, 53 Ky. (14 B. Mon.) 361; State v. Lazarre, 12 La. Ann. 166; Harp v. Osgood, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 216; State v. Le Cerf, 1 Bail. (S. C.) 410. See Milburn, Ex parte, 34 U. S. (9 Pet.) 704, 9 L. Ed. 280.

Bail given, the principal is regarded as delivered to the custody of his sureties. Their dominion is a continuance of the original imprisonment. Whenever they choose to do so, they may seize him and deliver him up in their discharge; and if that can not be done at once, they may imprison him until it can be done. They may exercise their rights in person or by agent. They may pursue him into another state; may arrest him on the Sabbath; and, if necessary, may break and enter his house for that purpose. The seizure is not made by tice for the bail, when desiring to so apprehend, to apply to the magistrate, or to any other jurisdiction, for a warrant; but the right of the bail to apprehend exists without such a warrant.<sup>3</sup> The reason for this appears to be founded on the fact that the principal is supposed to be in the bail's constant custody, and, the former being the latter's jailer, may at any time surrender him into the custody of the law.<sup>4</sup>

Party on bail on state charge can not be taken out of

"In Devine v. State, 37 Tenn. (5 Sneed) 625, the court, speaking of the principal, say, 'The sureties had the control of his person; they were bound at their peril to keep him within their jurisdiction, and to have his person ready to surrender when demanded. . . . In the case before us, the failure of the sureties to surrender their principal was, in view of the law, the result of their own negligence or connivance, in suffering their principal to go beyond the jurisdiction of the court and from under their control.' The other authorities cited are to the same effect."—Swayne, J., Taylor v. Taintor, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 366, 21 L. Ed. 287.

§ 108. — UNDER STATUTE. In some jurisdictions the statutory provision qualifies the common-law right of the bail to apprehend the principal, and the method prescribed by the statute has been held to be cumulative, only, to the common-law remedy,<sup>1</sup> while in others it has been held to be exclusive.<sup>2</sup> Under some of these statutes the apprehension of the principal is provided for upon a certified copy of the bail-bond,<sup>3</sup> to be delivered to the jailer;<sup>4</sup> while under other statutes the bail must procure a copy of the recognizance from the clerk of the court, by virtue of which he, or his agent,<sup>5</sup> may take the principal in any county of the state;<sup>6</sup> and in yet others the statute requires the bail to make an affidavit before the clerk of the court.<sup>7</sup>

This affidavit may be made out of the term of court and without any order from the judge.—Whitener v. State, 38 Tex. Cr. 146, 41 S. W. 595.

There are two modes by which bail can surrender their principal, one being to deliver him into the custody of the proper officer, and the other by making affidavit and obtaining a warrant.—Woodring v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. 17, 108 S. W. 371.

§ 109. — WHEN AND WHERE RIGHT MAY BE EXERCISED. The right of a bail to apprehend his principal may be exercised at any time,<sup>1</sup> and at any place where the principal may be found<sup>2</sup> within the state.<sup>3</sup> To accomplish this purpose the bail may use such force as may be necessary.<sup>4</sup> There are some cases which hold that a bail may pursue his principal into another state to accomplish his apprehension,<sup>5</sup> and may take him into custody on the Sabbath.<sup>6</sup>

That a bail can arrest his principal in a foreign state, to which the principal has fled, has been sometimes asserted; but there is no ground for this opinion, as the bail only represents the court from which his authority emanates, and where the court has no power to arrest

Bail may break and enter, where necessary, the principal's house, for the purpose of apprehending him.—Taylor v. Taintor, 83 U. S. (16 Wall.) 366, 21 L. Ed. 287.

The bail may break open the outer door of the house in order to take the principal.—Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 John. (N. Y.) 146.

the bail has no power to arrest. The proper course in such case is to apply for a warrant for extradition. But, as has been seen, the fact of the irregularity of an arrest does not entitle the prisoner, when brought to a court having jurisdiction of the crime, to a release.<sup>7</sup>

Right to apprehend principal at any time is the general rule of the cases;<sup>8</sup> yet there are other cases to the effect that there can be no apprehension by the bail after the principal has defaulted in appearance and there has been a forfeiture of the recognizance,<sup>9</sup> and the surety entered of record,<sup>10</sup> the right to apprehend by the bail being available to him just so long and no longer than the bail remains bound for the appearance of the principal.<sup>11</sup>

§ 110. — HOW RIGHT OF APPREHENSION MAY BE EXERCISED. In those cases in which the bail or security for the appearance of a person charged with crime is a woman, or is a man who is too weak physically to apprehend the principal, such bail may lawfully depute an agent to seize the body of the principal and deliver him into the custody of the sheriff or other officer of the law;<sup>1</sup> in other words, the right may be exercised by the bail either in person or by deputy.<sup>2</sup>

1. Commitment for Further Hearing.

§ 111. WAIVER—HEARING MAY BE ADJOURNED FROM TIME TO TIME. The delinquent having been apprehended, the next step is to have the case heard before a magistrate or justice of the peace,<sup>1</sup> unless the hearing should be waived;<sup>2</sup> and this hearing should be prompt.<sup>3</sup> It is not essential that the hearing should take place at once. The apprehending officer may, if requisite, put the person arrested in the county prison or other place of temporary confinement, until a hearing can be secured. But the hearing should be with all possible dispatch; should there be any undue delay, a justice of the supreme or of any superior court having jurisdiction for the purpose may, by a writ of habeas corpus, exact an immediate examination before himself. And the issue of such a writ, on due cause shown, is obligatory.<sup>4</sup> It has been also held that if the commitment be for an indefinite or unreasonable time, the warrant is virtually void, and an action for trespass lies for the imprisonment.<sup>5</sup> If requisite, the hearing, on due cause shown, may be adjourned from day to day.<sup>6</sup> But, in any view, the hearing should be prompt and continuous, and, without the consent of the accused, delay should be granted for strong reasons, only.<sup>7</sup>

2. Evidence Requisite.

§ 112. PRACTICE NOT USUALLY TO HEAR WITNESSES FOR DEFENSE. Must the magistrate hear the case of the defense as well as for the prosecution, so far as it may be tendered? The English practice, as stated by Blackstone, was for the justice, "by statute 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10, to take in writing the examination of such prisoner, and the information of those who bring him." This statute was repealed by 7 Geo. 4, which provides that the justices at the preliminary hearing "shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or so much thereof as shall be material, in writing," etc.

In several of the United States, among which Pennsylvania may be mentioned, the statute 2 & 3 Ph. & M. has not been viewed as in force; nor has the practice of taking the prisoner's examination been generally adopted.<sup>1</sup>

§ 113. EXCEPTION IN CASES OF IDENTITY, OR OF ONE-SIDEDNESS IN PROSECUTION'S CASE. Yet it must be conceded that there are cases in which, to avoid circuitry and oppression, a magistrate should hear evidence for the defense. Suppose, for instance, the prosecution calls only a part of the witnesses to the res gestae, and the defendant offers to call the other witnesses, could the magistrate rightfully refuse to require the other witnesses of this class to be called?<sup>1</sup> Or suppose the defendant, in a liquor prosecution, tenders a license, would it not be an absurdity as well as an oppression to refuse to receive it? Such a distinction, indeed, has not been unrecognized by the courts,<sup>2</sup> nor is it inconsistent with the principles above stated that it should be definitely accepted. If so, the magistrate may call for such evidence as may enable him to come to a right conclusion, or may receive such evidence when offered, applying to the whole case the test of probable cause.<sup>3</sup> And the same distinction is applicable to questions of identity.<sup>4</sup>

It is within the province of the magistrate, also, when sitting as a justice of the peace, to hear any evidence tending to throw light on the corpus delicti.<sup>5</sup>

§ 114. PROBABLE CAUSE, ONLY, NEED BE SHOWN. As has already been stated,<sup>1</sup> the better opinion is that on a preliminary hearing the magistrate is to hold the defendant for trial in case there is made out a probable case of guilt; nor is it necessary, at common law, that the binding over shall be for the specific charge for which the warrant issued, if, on the hearing, the offense takes another shape.<sup>2</sup> By Blackstone it is stated,<sup>3</sup> that if "it manifestly appears either that no such crime was committed, or that the suspicion entertained of the prisoner was wholly groundless, in such cases only is it lawful totally to discharge him. Otherwise he must either be committed to prison or give bail, that is, put in securities to answer the charge against him." By Chief Justice Marshall, on a great historical occasion, in which his judicial sympathies were certainly not enlisted for the prosecution, the doctrine that probable cause is sufficient was declared

<sup>5</sup> In New York, as we have just seen, this rule is so far modified as to enable the defendant to have witnesses sworn and examined on his part. The magistrate, however, is required to hold the defendant for trial, if upon examination of the whole matter it appears to the magistrate that an offense has been committed, and that there is probable cause to believe the prisoner to be guilty thereof.

with still greater precision.<sup>4</sup> Nor can it be denied that the view that the case is to be fully heard by the magistrate, and that he is then to decide on its entire merits, would be prejudicial to those personal rights which this view is sometimes supposed to favor. For if we accept this, the defendant, instead of being subject to one trial, would be subject to two. The rule ne bis idem—no man to be tried twice for the same offense—would be overridden. The defendant would go to the jury oppressed by the presumption that upon his whole case he had already been condemned. Nor is this all. It is proper, in view of the immense power a government is capable of exercising in the influencing and intimidating of witnesses, as well as of the importance on other grounds to the defendant of keeping his case in reserve until the period of its final disclosure, that he should not be compelled to exhibit it at a preliminary hearing, subject to the mercies of whatever magistrate the prosecution might select. And then, again, it would lead to many complications to adopt at preliminary hearings before magistrates a rule as to the volume of proof different from that which obtains on habeas corpus and before grand juries. But both on habeas corpus and on hearings before grand juries, it is on all sides agreed, probable cause is the test.<sup>5</sup> And the rule has to the defendant this double advantage. It enables him, first, to inspect and prepare for the case of the prosecution without disclosing his own. It enables him, secondly, when the case comes on to be tried by a jury, to say, "I come before you as an innocent man, against whom no judicial condemnation is on file." For, on this hypothesis, the holding of a defendant to trial by a magistrate is not a decision that he is guilty, but only that on the prosecution's testimony there is probable cause that he should be tried.<sup>6</sup>

§ 115. AT COMMON LAW, BAIL TO BE TAKEN IN ALL BUT CAPITAL CASES. The common law rule is stated by Blackstone to be, that "wherever bail will answer the same intention" (that of safe custody), "it ought to be taken, as in most of the inferior crimes; but in felonies, and other offenses of a capital nature, no bail can be a security equivalent to the actual custody of the person. For what is there that a man may not be induced to forfeit to save his own life? And what satisfaction or indemnity is it to the public to seize the effects of those who have bailed a murderer, if the murderer himself be suffered to escape with impunity." Pushing this rule to its practical consequences, it has been the practice of American courts to take bail in all cases not capital, where the trial is to be in the jurisdiction in which the bail is given. And indeed the enactment of extradition treaties should lead, in all cases of doubt, to a still further liberalization of the rule. For no longer exist those strong temptations to break bail and fly which existed when Blackstone wrote. A fugitive from justice, if his bail bonds are forfeited, is pursued to his place of refuge, not merely by government, which may be languid, but also by his sureties, who may be incensed and determined. At all events, through the ubiquitousness of extradition police, the probabilities of eventual escape are much diminished.

§ 116. EXCESSIVE BAIL NOT TO BE REQUIRED. By the eighth amendment to the constitution of the United States,<sup>1</sup> "excessive bail shall not be required"; and by the act of September 24, 1789, "upon all arrests in crimi-

The general test is, is the offense with which the defendant is charged punishable with death? If so, and if the proof of guilt is strong, bail will be refused. See: ALA.—Bryant, Ex parte, 34 Ala. 270; Carroll, Ex parte, 36 Ala. 300.

§ 117. PROPER COURSE IS TO REQUIRE SUCH BAIL AS WILL SECURE ATTENDANCE. It has been sometimes argued that bail should be arbitrarily graded to meet the heinousness of the offense. But this is a dangerous principle, as it tends to show that on the rich, who can find bail and afford to forfeit it, there is no necessary corporal punishment imposed. Far wiser is it to adopt the principle, that, in determining and adjusting bail, the test to be adopted by the court is the probability of the accused appearing to take his trial.<sup>1</sup> This probability is to be tested in part by the strength of the evidence against the defendant; in part by the nature of the crime charged, and by the severity of the punishment which may be imposed; and in part by the character and means of the

In most states the limits as to bail are fixed by constitution or statute.

Bail refused in England after commitment under a coroner's verdict of wilful murder in a duel, although there were strong affidavits to the effect that the "duel was fair," as the question of the capital crime was to be settled, on the ultimate proofs given, by the court and jury alone.—In re Barthelemy, Dears. C. C. 60, 1 El. & Bl. 1, 72 Eng. C. L. 1; In re Barro-net, Dears. C. C. 51, 1 El. & Bl. 1, 72 Eng. C. L. 1.

After protracted trials, jury being unable to agree, the court, at its discretion, may permit the defendant to be discharged on bail.—People v. Perry, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 27, where there had been two abortive trials. And bail will be taken even in capital cases where there is a well-founded doubt of guilt.—Ex parte Bridewell, 56 Miss. 39; People v. Perry, 8 Abb. defendant. What to one is oppressive bail, to another is light; and of this the court is to judge.<sup>2</sup> As a general rule, the action of the court in this respect, unless great oppression is shown, is not revisable in error.<sup>3</sup> Even where there can be no question as to facts, there may be capital cases in which the government may consent to discharge on bail.

A striking illustration of this is the admission to bail of Jefferson Davis, when under indictment for treason, with the consent of the President of the United States.<sup>4</sup>

§ 118. AFTER CONTINUANCE, BAIL MAY BE GRANTED. Continuances on the part of the prosecution, especially after two sessions, will lead the court, even in capital cases, to admit to bail.<sup>1</sup> But a single continuance, necessitated by absence of witnesses, does not have this effect.<sup>2</sup>

§ 119. — AND SO IN CASES OF SICKNESS. Danger to life from sickness caused by imprisonment has been held sufficient cause to justify the defendant's release on bail, under proper and peculiar sanctions.<sup>1</sup> But such danger must be serious.<sup>2</sup>

that the statutes should be strictly construed.<sup>3</sup> In several states analogous power has been given in respect to professional thieves and other habitual criminals; and these statutes have been held constitutional. Sureties to keep the peace can also be required at common law from a person against whom oath is made that by him another person is put in fear or danger of life. In all these cases the sureties or commitment must be for a limited time.<sup>4</sup>

§ 122. ON HABEAS CORPUS, COURT MAY ADJUST BAIL. The writ of habeas corpus may be appealed to for the purpose, not only of determining the liability of the defendant to prosecution at all, but of settling the question of bail, supposing there be probable cause against him.<sup>1</sup> The court, on fixing the amount of bail, is guided by the considerations we have just noticed as governing the practice before magistrates.<sup>2</sup> The question as to the courts which may thus determine bail is a matter of local practice. In England no court that has not jurisdiction to try can thus interpose.<sup>3</sup> In Pennsylvania such is substantially the law as to the adjudication of the merits, though the supreme court will, on such a writ, see if the record is right.<sup>4</sup> In New York the judges of the supreme court assert the jurisdiction generally.<sup>5</sup> But as a rule no court which has not jurisdiction of the offense can take cognizance of it in this way.<sup>6</sup> At the same time, a court having supreme criminal jurisdiction over a particular state or territory has, in matters within such jurisdiction, power to release on bail, the amount of which it is entitled to fix.

§ 123. IN EXCEPTIONAL CASES, BAIL MAY BE PERMITTED AFTER VERDICT. In cases involving no high degree of turpitude, and in cases in which the court has serious doubts as to the question of the rightfulness of the verdict, or of the sufficiency of the proceeding in point of law, bail may be taken after verdict of conviction,<sup>1</sup> or even after sentence, while the case is under review in a superior court.<sup>2</sup>

"Military Courts."*

§ 125. AUTHORITY OF "MILITARY COURTS" TO TRY AND PUNISH. In certain states of the Union, during times of labor troubles, domestic disturbances and social discord due to strikes and attendant lawlessness, when the militia is called out to quell the disturbances, protect property and lives, and to restore and preserve order, martial law being declared in the district of the troubled zone, the officer in command of the militia has erected "military courts" which usurped the functions of the civil courts to deal with offenses and to punish offenders, even though the ordinary law courts were unaffected by the local disturbances, were open for business and transacting and conducting business in the ordinary way, and were amply able and willing to hear all complaints charging offenses and to punish the offenders, if found to be guilty of an infraction of the law of the land. This is an act so unnecessary, so unwarranted, so unconstitutional, and so flagrantly revolutionary in its character,—so dangerous in its possibilities and pernicious in its consequences,—as to merit treatment in a separate chapter in this work, notwithstanding the fact that the question involved is one of constitutional law, rather than a question of criminal procedure. The pressing importance of the question justifies such a chapter and treatment herein.<sup>2</sup>

CHAPTER XVI

FORM OF INDICTMENT—GENERALLY.

I. INDICTMENT AS DISTINGUISHED FROM INFORMATION.

- § 126. Under federal constitution, trials for capital or infamous crimes must be by indictment.
- § 127. Presentment is an accusation by grand jury, on which indictment may be based.
- § 128. Information is ex-officio procedure by attorney-general.
- § 129. — Is not usually permitted as to infamous crimes.
- § 130. “Infamous” crimes are such as involve disgrace or expose to penitentiary.

II. STATUTES OF JEOPAILS AND AMENDMENT.

- § 131. By statutes, formal mistakes may be amended, and formal averments made unnecessary.
- § 132. — Various particulars as to amendments.

III. CAPTION AND COMMENCEMENT.

- § 133. Caption is no part of the indictment, being an explanatory prefix.
- § 134. Substantial accuracy only required.
- § 135. Caption may be amended.
- § 136. Commencement must aver office and place of grand jurors, and also their oath.
- § 137. Each count must contain averment of oath.

IV. NAME AND ADDITION OF DEFENDANT AND NAME OF PROSECUTOR AND THIRD PARTY.

1. As to Defendant.

- § 138. Name of defendant should be specifically given.
- § 139. Omission of surname is fatal.

- § 140. Mistake as to either surname or Christian name may be met in abatement.
- § 141. Surname may be laid as an alias.
- § 142. Inhabitants of parish and corporation.
- § 143. Middle name to be given when essential.
- § 144. Initials sufficient when used by party himself.
- § 145. Party can not dispute a name accepted by him.
- § 146. Unknown party may be approximately described.
- § 147. At common law addition is necessary.
- § 148. Wrong addition to be met by plea in abatement.
- § 149. Defendant's residence must be given.
- § 150. "Junior" must be alleged when party is known as such.

2. Description of Parties Injured and Third Parties.

- § 151. Name only of third person may be given.
- § 152. Corporate title must be special.
- § 153. Third persons may be described as "unknown."
- § 154. — But this allegation may be traversed.
- § 155. — The test is whether the name was unknown to the grand jury.
- § 156. Immaterial misnomer may be rejected as surplusage.
- § 157. Sufficient if description be substantially correct.
- § 158. Variance in third party's name is fatal.
- § 159. Name may be given by initials.
- § 160. Representative name is sufficient.
- § 161. Idem sonans is sufficient.

V. TIME: NECESSITY FOR ALLEGING AND HOW AVERRED.

- § 162. Time must be averred, but not generally material.
- § 163. When "Sunday" is the essence of the offense, the day must be specified.
- § 164. "Videlicet" may introduce a date tentatively.
- § 165. Blank as to date is fatal.
- § 166. Substantial accuracy is enough.

- § 167. Double or obscure dates are inadequate.
- § 168. Date can not be laid between two distinct periods.
- § 169. Negligences should have time averred.
- § 170. Time may be designated by historical epoch.
- § 171. Recitals of time need not be accurate.
- § 172. Hour not necessary, unless required by statute.
- § 173. Repetition may be by "then and there."
- § 174. — Other terms insufficient.
- § 175. "Then and there" can not cure ambiguity.
- § 176. Repugnant, future, or impossible dates are bad.
- § 177. Record dates must be accurate.
- § 178. Dates of documents must be correctly given.
- § 179. Time should be within limitation.
- § 180. In homicide, death should occur within a year and a day.

VI. PLACE.

- § 181. Enough to lay venue within jurisdiction of court.
- § 182. When act is by agent, principal to be charged as of place of such act.
- § 183. When county is divided, jurisdiction to be laid in court of locus delicti.
- § 184. When county includes several jurisdictions, particular jurisdiction must be specified.
- § 185. Name of state not necessary in indictment.
- § 186. Sub-description in transitory offenses immaterial.
- § 187. — But not as to matters of local description.
- § 188. "County aforesaid" generally enough—"Then and there."
- § 189. Title, when changed by legislature, must be followed.
- § 190. Venue need not follow fine.
- § 191. In larceny, venue may be placed where goods are taken.
- § 192. Omission of venue is fatal.
- § 193. Offense must be set forth with reasonable certainty.

VII. STATEMENT OF OFFENSE.

- § 194. Omission of essential incidents is fatal.
- § 195. Terms must be technically exact.
- § 196. — Not enough to charge conclusion of law.

- § 197. — Exceptions in case of “common barrators,” “common scolds,” and certain nuisances.
- § 198. Matters unknown may be proximately described.
- § 199. Bill of particulars may be required.
- § 200. Surplusage need not be stated; and if stated may be disregarded.
- § 201. Videlicet is the pointing out of an averment of probable specification.
- § 202. Assault may be sustained without specification of object.
- § 203. Attempt to commit an impossible crime.
- § 204. Act of one confederate may be averred as act of the other.
- § 205. Descriptive averment must be proved.
- § 206. Alternative statements are inadmissible.
- § 207. Disjunctive offenses in statute may be conjunctively stated.
- § 208. — Otherwise as to distinct and substantive offenses.
- § 209. Intent, when necessary, must be averred.
- § 210. — And so of guilty knowledge.
- § 211. Inducement and aggravation need not be detailed.
- § 212. Particularity required for identification and protection.

VIII. WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS.

- 1. Where the Instrument, as in Forgery, and Libel, Must Be Set Out in Full.
  - § 213. When words of document are material they should be set forth.
  - § 214. — In such case the indictment should claim to set forth the words.
  - § 215. “Purport” means effect; “tenor” means contents.
  - § 216. “Manner and form,” “purport and effect,” “substance,” do not imply verbal accuracy.
  - § 217. Attaching original paper is not adequate.
  - § 218. When exact copy is required, mere variance of a letter is immaterial.

- § 219. Unnecessary documents need not be set forth.
- § 220. Quotation marks are not sufficient.
- § 221. Document lost, or in defendant's hands, need not be set forth.
- § 222. — And so of obscene libel.
- § 223. — Prosecutor's negligence does not alter the case.
- § 224. Production of document alleged to be "destroyed" is a fatal variance.
- § 225. Extraneous parts of document need not be set forth.
- § 226. Foreign or insensible document must be explained by averments.
- § 227. Innuendo can interpret but not enlarge.

2. Where the Instrument, as in Larceny, etc., May Be Described Merely by General Designation.

- § 228. Statutory designations must be followed.
- § 229. Though general designation is sufficient, yet if indictment purports to give words, variance is fatal.

3. What General Legal Designation Will Suffice.

- § 230. If designation be erroneous, variance is fatal—"Purporting to be."
- § 231. "Receipt" includes all signed admissions of payment.
- § 232. "Acquittance" includes discharges from duty.
- § 233. "Bill of exchange" to be used in its technical sense.
- § 234. "Promissory note" used in a larger sense.
- § 235. "Bank note" includes notes issued by banks.
- § 236. Treasury note and United States currency.
- § 237. "Money" is convertible with currency.
- § 238. "Goods and chattels" includes personalty, exclusive of choses in action.
- § 239. "Warrant" is an instrument calling for payment or delivery.
- § 240. "Order" implies mandatory power.
- § 241. "Request" includes mere invitation.

- § 242. Terms may be used cumulatively.
- § 243. Defects may be explained by averments.
- § 244. A "deed" must be in writing under seal passing a right—"Bonds."
- § 245. "Obligation" is an unilateral engagement.
- § 246. — And so is "undertaking."
- § 247. A "guarantee" and an I. O. U. are undertakings.
- § 248. "Property" is whatever may be appropriated.
- § 249. "Piece of paper" is subject of larceny.
- § 250. "Challenges" to fight need not be set forth.

IX. WORDS SPOKEN.

- § 251. Words spoken must be set forth exactly, though substantial proof is enough.
- § 252. — In treason enough to set forth substance.

X. PERSONAL CHATTELS.

1. In General.

- § 253. Scope of treatment.

2. Indefinite, Insensible, or Lumping Descriptions.

- § 254. Personal chattels, when subject to an offense, must be specifically described.
- § 255. When notes are stolen in a bunch, denominations may be proximately given.
- § 256. Certainty must be such as to individuate offense.
- § 257. "Dead" animals must be averred to be such—"Living" animals must be intelligently described.
- § 258. When certain articles only of a class are subjects of indictment, then individuals must be described.
- § 259. Minerals and vegetables must be averred to be severed from realty.
- § 260. Variance in number or value immaterial.
- § 261. Instrument of injury may be approximately stated.

3. Value.

- § 262. Value must be assigned when larceny is charged.
- § 263. Larceny of "piece of paper" may be prosecuted.
- § 264. Value essential to restitution, and also to mark grades.
- § 265. Legal currency need not be valued.
- § 266. When there is lumping valuation, conviction can not be had for stealing fraction.

4. Money and Coin.

- § 267. Money must be specifically described.
- § 268. When money is given to change, and change is kept, indictment can not aver stealing change.

XI. OFFENSES CREATED BY STATUTE.

- § 269. Usually sufficient and necessary to use words of statute.
- § 270. Conclusion of law not enough.
- § 271. Variance, if indictment proposes but fails to set forth statutory words.
- § 272. Special limitations to be given.
- § 273. Private statute must be given in full.
- § 274. Offense must be averred to be within limitation.
- § 275. Section or designation of statute need not be stated.
- § 276. Where statute requires two defendants one is not sufficient.
- § 277. When statute states object in plural, it may be pleaded in singular.
- § 278. Disjunctive statutory statements to be averred conjunctively.
- § 279. At common law defects in statutory indictments are not cured by verdict.
- § 280. Statutes creating an offense are to be closely followed.
- § 281. When common-law offense is made penal by title, details of offense must be given.

- § 282. When statute is cumulative, common law may be pursued.
- § 283. When statute assigns no penalty, punishment is at common law.
- § 284. Exhaustive statute absorbs common law.
- § 285. Statutory technical averments to be introduced.
- § 286. — But equivalent terms may be given.
- § 287. Where a statute describes a class of animals by a general term, it is enough to use this term for the whole class; otherwise not.
- § 288. Provisos and exceptions not part of definition need not be stated.
- § 289. — Otherwise when proviso is in same clause.
- § 290. Exceptions in enacting clause to be negatived.
- § 291. — Question in such cases is whether statute creates a general or a limited offense.

XII. DUPLICITY.

- § 292. Generally, joinder in one count of two distinct offenses is bad.
- § 293. — Exception in cases where larceny is included in burglary or embezzlement.
- § 294. — And so where fornication is included in major offense.
- § 295. When major crime includes minor, conviction may be for either.
- § 296. "Assault" is included under "assault with intent."
- § 297. On indictment for minor offense there can be conviction of minor, only.
- § 298. May be conviction of misdemeanor on indictment for felony.
- § 299. — But minor offense must be accurately stated.
- § 300. Not duplicity to couple successive statutory phases.
- § 301. Several articles can be joined in larceny.
- § 302. — And so of cumulative overt acts and intents and agencies.
- § 303. — And so of double battaries, libels, or sales.
- § 304. Duplicity is usually cured by verdict.

XIII. REPUGNANCY.

- § 305. Where material averments are repugnant, indictment is bad.

XIV. TECHNICAL AVERMENTS.

- § 306. In treason, "traitorously" must be used.
§ 307. "Malice aforethought" essential to murder.
§ 308. "Struck" usually essential to wound.
§ 309. "Feloniously" essential to felony.
§ 310. — Word "feloniously" can be rejected as surplusage.
§ 311. — In such case conviction may be had of attempt.
§ 312. "Ravish" and "forcibly" are essential to rape.
§ 313. "Falsely" essential to perjury.
§ 314. "Burglariously" essential to burglary.
§ 315. "Take and carry away" essential to larceny.
§ 316. "Violently and against the will" essential to robbery.
§ 317. "Piratical" essential to piracy.
§ 318. "Unlawfully," and other aggravating terms, not essential.
§ 319. "Forcibly" and "with a strong hand," essential to forcible entry.
§ 320. — "Vi et armis" not essential.
§ 321. "Knowingly" always prudent.

XV. CLERICAL ERRORS.

- § 322. Verbal inaccuracies not affecting sense, not fatal.
§ 323. Questions as to abbreviations.
§ 324. Omission of formal words may not be fatal.
§ 325. Signs can not be substituted for words.
§ 326. Erasures and interlineations are not fatal.
§ 327. Tearing or defacing not necessarily fatal.
§ 328. Pencil writing may be sufficient.

XVI. CONCLUSION OF INDICTMENTS.

- § 329. Conclusion must conform to constitution or statute.
§ 330. Where statute creates or midifies an offense, conclusion should be statutory.

- § 331. — Otherwise when statute does not modify offense.
- § 332. — Such conclusion does not cure defect.
- § 333. Conclusion need not be in plural.
- § 334. Statutory conclusion may be rejected as surplusage.

XVII. JOINDER OF OFFENSES.

- § 335. Counts for offenses of the same character and the same mode of trial, may be joined.
- § 336. Assaults on two persons can be joined.
- § 337. — So in conspiracy and assault.
- § 338. Common law and statutory offenses may be joined.
- § 339. — And so of felony and misdemeanor.
- § 340. Cognate felonies may be joined.
- § 341. Successive grades may be joined.
- § 342. Joinder of different offenses no ground for error.
- § 343. Election will not be compelled where offenses are connected.
- § 344. — Object of election is to reduce to a single issue.
- § 345. Election at discretion of court.
- § 346. Election may be any time before verdict.
- § 347. Counts should be varied to suit case.
- § 348. Two counts precisely alike defective.
- § 349. One bad count can not be aided by another.
- § 350. Counts may be transposed after verdict.

XVIII. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS.

1. Who May Be Joined.

- § 351. Joint offenders can be jointly indicted.
- § 352. — But not when offenses are several.
- § 353. — So of officers with separate duties.
- § 354. Principals and accessories can be joined.
- § 355. In conspiracy at least two must be joined.
- § 356. In riot, three must be joined.
- § 357. Husband and wife may be joined.
- § 358. Misjoinder may be excepted to at any time.
- § 359. Death need not be suggested on record.

2. Severance.

- § 360. Defendants may elect to sever.

§ 361. Severance should be granted when defenses clash.

§ 362. In conspiracy and riot, severance.

8. Verdict and Judgment.

§ 363. Joint defendants may be convicted of different grades.

§ 364. Defendants may be convicted severally.

§ 365. Sentence is to be several.

§ 366. Offense must be joint to justify joint verdict.

XIX. STATUTE OF LIMITATION.

§ 367. Construction to be liberal to defendant.

§ 368. Statute need not be specially pleaded.

§ 369. Indictment should aver offense within statute, or, if excluded by statute, should, by strict practice, aver facts of exception.

§ 370. Statute, unless general, operates on offenses it specifies, only.

§ 371. Statute is retrospective.

§ 372. Statute begins to run from commission of crime—Continuous offenses.

§ 373. Indictment or information saves statute.

§ 374. In some jurisdictions statute saved by warrant or presentment.

§ 375. When flight suspends statute, it is not renewed by temporary return.

§ 376. Failure of defective indictment does not revive statute.

§ 377. Courts look with disfavor at long delay in prosecution.

§ 378. Statute not suspended by fraud.

§ 379. Under statute, indictment unduly delayed may be discharged.

§ 380. Statutes have no extra-territorial effect.

I. Indictment as Distinguished from Information.

§ 126. UNDER FEDERAL CONSTITUTION, TRIALS OF ALL CAPITAL OR INFAMOUS CRIMES MUST BE BY INDICTMENT. "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service, in time of war, or public danger; nor shall any person be subject, for the same offense, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without compensation."<sup>1</sup>

§ 127. PRESENTMENT IS AN ACCUSATION BY GRAND JURY, ON WHICH INDICTMENT MAY BE BASED. "The first clause," to adopt the language of Judge Story, in commenting on this article, "requires the interposition of a grand jury, by way of presentment or indictment, before the party accused can be required to answer to any capital or infamous crime charged against him. This is regularly true, at the common law, of all offenses above the grade of common misdemeanor. A grand jury, it is well known, are selected in a manner prescribed by law, and duly sworn to make inquiry, and present all offenses committed against the authority of the state government within the body of the county for which they are empanelled. In the national courts they are sworn to inquire and present all offenses committed against the authority of the national government within the state or district for which they are empanelled, or elsewhere, within the jurisdiction of the national government.

9 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., pp. 256 et seq.

Without either indictment or information a prosecution can not be maintained. See State v. First, 82 Ind. 1.

A de facto grand jury satisfies
I. Crim. Proc.—12

"Due process of law," in the XIV amendment, does not necessitate a grand jury. See Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. 111, 292, approving Kalloch v. Sup. Ct., 56 Cal. 229; Rowan v. State, 30 Wis. 129, 11 Am. Rep. 559.

"A presentment, properly speaking, is an accusation made ex mero motu by a grand jury, of an offense, upon their own observation and knowledge, or upon evidence before them, and without any bill of indictment laid before them at the suit of the government. An indictment is a written accusation of an offense preferred to and presented upon oath as true, by a grand jury at the suit of the government. Upon a presentment, the proper officer of the court must frame an indictment, before the party accused can be put to answer to it."<sup>1</sup>

United States Constitution does not prohibit prosecution by information when authorized by state constitution. See State v. Boswell, 104 Ind. 541, 4 N. E. 675; State v. Barnett, 3 Kan. 250, 87 Am. Dec. 471; State v. Wishner, 35 Kan. 271, 10 Pac. 852; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. State, 112 Ky. 635, 66 S. W. 505; State v. Tucker, 36 Ore. 291, 51 L. R. <sup>4</sup> ALA.—Thomas v. State, 58 Ala.

In respect to amendment, however, there is a difference at common law, arising from the fact that an information emanates exclusively from the attorney-general, without the interposition of a grand jury; and hence he alone, with leave of court, is authorized to amend it, the assent of a grand jury not being required.<sup>5</sup>

§ 129. IS NOT USUALLY PERMITTED AS TO INFAMOUS CRIMES. The limitation in the federal constitution restricting prosecutions for infamous crimes to presentments or indictments by a grand jury applies distinctively to federal prosecutions.<sup>1</sup> In Pennsylvania there is a constitutional provision against proceeding by information in any case where an indictment lies;<sup>2</sup> and the same restriction exists in several of the other states.<sup>3</sup> In the United States courts, as has been seen,<sup>4</sup> in New York,<sup>5</sup> and in Virginia,<sup>6</sup> the limitation is confined to cases of infamous crime. In New Hampshire, it obtains in all cases where the punishment is death or confinement at hard labor.<sup>7</sup> In Vermont, a distinction of the same character is made.<sup>8</sup> In Indiana,<sup>9</sup> and in California,<sup>10</sup> a larger range is given; and so as to Georgia.<sup>11</sup> It may, in fact, be stated as a general rule, that the provision in the federal constitution, given at the head of this chapter, applies only to cases in the United States courts.<sup>12</sup> In Massachusetts, it was at one time held that all public misdemeanors which may be prosecuted by indictment may be prosecuted by information on behalf of the commonwealth, unless the prosecution be restricted by the statute to indictment.<sup>13</sup> But now by the Gen. Stat., c. 158, § 3, all criminal prosecutions must be by indictment, except (1) When informations are expressly authorized by statute; (2) In cases before police justices; and (3) In courts-martial. In Connecticut all offenses not punished by death or by imprisonment for life are prosecuted by information.<sup>14</sup> In California

there is no longer any restriction.<sup>15</sup> In the United States courts, crimes against the elective franchise may be prosecuted by information filed by the district attorney.<sup>16</sup>

§ 130. "INFAMOUS" CRIMES ARE SUCH AS INVOLVE DISGRACE OR EXPOSE TO PENITENTIARY. In the United States courts it was once said that, for misdemeanors, which do not, at common law, preclude the person convicted from being a witness,<sup>1</sup> there can be a proceeding by information,<sup>2</sup> and hence that a person may be prosecuted by information for a violation of the revenue laws.<sup>3</sup> Severity of imprisonment, it has been argued, does not by itself create infamy.<sup>4</sup> But where at common law disgrace attaches, then the offense is infamous.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Disqualification to be a witness is said by Mr. Justice Gray not to be the proper test as to the infamy of a crime; the true question is whether the crime is one for which the statute authorizes the court to inflict or award an infamous punishment. When the defendant is in danger of being subjected to an infamous punishment if convicted, under the fifth amendment to the federal Constitution, he has a right to insist that he shall not be put upon his trial, except on the finding and presentment of a grand jury.—Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. In United States v. Butler, 4 Hughes 514, 6 Fed. 247, conspiracy was held infamous; in United States v. Cross, 1 McArth. (D. In United States v. Yarborough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. Ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. 35, it was applied to a conspiracy to drive a citizen of the United States from a homestead entry and was held within the statute, but it was doubted whether the proceeding in such cases could be by information. ## II. Statutes of Jeofails and Amendment.<sup>1</sup>

§ 131. BY STATUTES, FORMAL MISTAKES MAY BE AMENDED, AND FORMAL AVERMENTS MADE UNNECESSARY. No inconsiderable portion of the difficulties in the way of the criminal pleader, at common law, have been removed in England by the 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, ss. 20, 21; 11 & 12 Vict., c. 46, and 14 & 15 Vict., c. 100, and in most of the states in the American Union, by statutes containing similar provisions.<sup>2</sup> In some jurisdictions, also, it is provided that as to certain offenses certain prescribed forms shall be sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

Whether such statutes conflict with constitutional provisions providing that the indictment should notify the defendant of the character of the offense depends in part upon the words of the constitution, in part upon the degree in which the rights of the defendant are abridged by the indictment as to which the question arises. Supposing that the constitutional provision, as is sometimes the case, is simply a presentation of the common law

§ 132. — VARIOUS PARTICULARS AS TO AMENDMENTS. The legislature having full power to prescribe the form, and regulate the proceedings, in criminal cases,<sup>1</sup> has full power to provide as to the amendment of the pleadings in such a case, providing, only, that no substantial constitutional rights of the defendant are invaded. In the absence of a statute conferring such authority the court, either of its own motion, or on the motion of the attorney prosecuting for the state,<sup>2</sup> can not make any amendment, except as to matters of form, only;<sup>3</sup> any amendment as to matter of substance must be with the consent and concurrence of the grand jury which found the bill and made the presentment.<sup>4</sup>

In England, the caption in general does not appear until the return to a writ of certiorari, or a writ of error; yet in cases of high treason the defendant is entitled to a copy of it in the first instance after the finding of the indictment, in order that he may be acquainted with the names of the jurors by whom it was presented.—1 East P. C. 113; Fost. 2; Ch. C. L. 327.

Forms no part of the indictment, and no ground for arresting judgment that the indictment does not show, in its caption, that it was taken in the state; for, it is said, while it stood on the records of the court below, it appeared to be an indictment of that court, and when sent to the Supreme Court, the caption of the record, of which it is a part, officially certified, renders it sufficiently certain.—State v. Brickell, 8 N. C. (1 Hawks) 354; 1 Saunders, 250d, n. 1.

If wholly omitted in the court below, it is said the indictment may nevertheless be sufficient, as the minute of the clerk upon the bill, at the time of the presentment, and the general records of the term, will supply any defect in such preface.—State v. Smith, 2 Harr. (Del.) 532; State v. Gilbert, 13 Vt. 647.

In North Carolina it was held that a caption to an indictment is only necessary where the court acts under a special commission.—State v. Wasden, N. C. Term, 163.

Giving only the initials of the first names of the grand jurors is no defect.—Stone v. State, 30 Ind. 115.

In Massachusetts practice, it seems, each indictment is framed with its own special caption, instead of leaving the caption to be made up, as is the usual and better course, from the records of the court, by the clerk, when the record is taken into another court. Yet even in Massachusetts, this "caption," if it is so to be called, is purely formal, and is amendable. See Com. v. Edwards, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 1. See, also, State v. Conley, 39 Me. 78.

removal by certiorari, its principal object, as we have seen, is to show that the inferior court had jurisdiction, and, therefore, a certainty in that respect is particularly requisite. Care must be taken duly to set it forth, for if there be no caption, or one that is defective, the error, in England, may be taken advantage of on arrest.<sup>8</sup> But ordinarily its caption is not vitiated by mere surplusage.<sup>9</sup>

Distinction between "caption" and "commencement" is not maintained by some of our courts, both, by such courts, being called "caption." But as both are purely formal, and are open to amendment by the record, they should be so amended when faulty.

tinct allegation; but it will suffice to mention it once as the nominative case in one continuing sentence.

When once given in full, the name need only be repeated by the Christian title as "the said John" or "James," as the case may be.<sup>2</sup> But each count must describe the defendant by his full name.<sup>3</sup>

§ 139. OMISSION OF SURNAME IS FATAL. If the surname of the defendant be omitted in the presenting portion of an indictment, the defect is fatal, though the full name be mentioned in subsequent allegations referring to the name as their antecedent.<sup>1</sup>

§ 140. MISTAKE AS TO EITHER SURNAME OR CHRISTIAN NAME MAY BE MET IN ABATEMENT. A plea in abatement, in the language of Mr. Chitty, has always been allowed when the Christian name of the defendant is mistaken,<sup>1</sup> but it seems formerly to have been supposed that an error in the surname was not thus pleadable.<sup>2</sup> But it is now the settled law that a mistake in the latter is equally fatal with one in the former.<sup>3</sup> A plea in abatement is the only way to meet the misnomer of the defendant; and this plea is too late after the general issue.<sup>4</sup>

When the issue is tried on plea in abatement, if the sound of the name is not affected by the misspellings, the error will not be material.<sup>5</sup> If two names are, in original derivation, the same, and are taken promiscuously in common use though they differ in sound, yet there is no variance.<sup>6</sup>

A blank in either Christian name or surname is ground for a motion to quash, or plea in abatement.

§ 141. SURNAME MAY BE LAID AS AN ALIAS. The surname may be such as the defendant has usually gone by or acknowledged; and if there be a doubt which one of two names is his real surname, the second may be added in the indictment after an alias dictus,<sup>1</sup> thus, "Richard Wilson, otherwise called Richard Layer." Proof of either will be enough.<sup>2</sup>

§ 142. INHABITANTS OF PARISH AND CORPORATION<sup>1</sup> MAY BE INDICTED IN CORPORATE NAME FOR DISOBEDIENCE. company" of a certain turnpike road to remove a gate on the road, an indictment would not lie against the president and managers, individually, for not removing the gate.<sup>3</sup> In Maine, however, it is said, that where an offense is committed by virtue of corporate authority, the individuals concerned in its commission, in their personal capacity, and not as a corporation, must be indicted;<sup>4</sup> and in Virginia it has been ruled, still more broadly, that a corporation can not be impleaded criminaliter by its artificial name at common law.<sup>5</sup> But for all disobedience to statutes and derelictions of duty, the better opinion is that a corporation aggregate may be indicted by its corporate name; which name must, as a rule, be correctly alleged as it existed at the time of the offense.<sup>6</sup>

§ 143. MIDDLE NAMES TO BE GIVEN WHEN ESSENTIAL. In several jurisdictions it has been determined that the law does not recognize more than one Christian name, and, therefore, when the middle names of the defendant are omitted, the omission is right.<sup>1</sup> And the same view is taken in Ohio and Tennessee, with the qualification that if a middle name is nevertheless set out, it must be

The better view is that when a party is known by a combination of names, by these he should be described; though it is otherwise when he is only known by a single name.<sup>5</sup>

§ 144. INITIALS SUFFICIENT WHEN USED BY PARTY HIMSELF. Where names are ordinarily written with an abbreviation, this will be sufficient in an indictment.<sup>1</sup> And where a man is in the habit of using initials for his Christian name, and he is so indicted, and the fact whether he was so known is put in issue, and he is convicted, the court will not interfere on that ground.<sup>2</sup>

In Texas initials are sufficient under statute.—McAfee v. State, 14 Tex. App. 668.

"Lord Campbell, when an objection was made to a recognizance taken before Lee B. Townshend, Esq., and I. H. Harper, Esq., that only the initials of the Christian names of the justices were mentioned, remarked: 'I do not know that these are initials; I do not know that they (the justices) were not baptized with those names; and I must say that I can not acquiesce in the distinction that was made in Lomax v. Tandel, that a vowel may be a name, but a consonant can not. I allow that a vowel may be a Christian name, and why may not a consonant? Why might not the parents, for a reason good or bad, say that their child should be baptized by the name of B, C, D, F, or H? I am just informed, by a person of most credible authority, that within his own knowledge a person has been baptized by the name of T.' And in this opinion of the chief, Justices Patterson, Wightman, and Erle concurred, R. v. Dale, 15 Jur. 657, 5 E. L. & E. 360."—18 Alb. L. J. 127. See, also, Tweedy v. Jarvis, 27 Conn. 42.

In Kinnersley v. Knott, 7 C. B. 980, Mr. Sergeant Talfourd contended that a defendant called "John M. Knott" was not legally and properly designated, saying that the letter M, standing by itself, could not be pronounced and meant nothing, but that in this connection it meant something, and that that something ought to be stated, for the law forbade the use of initials in pleadings. The court, however, held that M was not a name. Maule, J., said that vowels might be names, and that in Sully's Memoirs a Monsieur D'O is spoken of; but that consonants could not be so alone, as they require in pronunciation the aid of vowels; and the chief justice said that the courts had decided that they would not assume that a consonant expresses a name, but that it stood for an initial only, and that the insertion of an initial instead of a name was a ground of demurrer. In this country, as we have seen, single consonants may be names.—18 Alb. L. J. 127. See State v. Brite, 73 N. C. 26; Mead v. State, 26 Ohio St. 505.

his real name is, he can not defend himself on the ground of misnomer, if he be indicted by a name commonly accepted by him.<sup>1</sup>

§ 146. UNKNOWN PARTY MAY BE APPROXIMATELY DESCRIBED. Where the name of the defendant is unknown, and he refuses to disclose it, he may be described as a person whose name is to the jurors unknown, but who is personally brought before them by the keeper of the prison;<sup>1</sup> but an indictment against him as a person to the jurors unknown, without something to ascertain whom the grand jury meant to designate, will be insufficient.<sup>2</sup>

The practice is to indict the defendant by a specific name, such as John No-name, and if he pleads in abatement, to send in a new bill, inserting the real name which he then discloses, by which he is bound. This course is in some States prescribed by statute.<sup>3</sup>

A known party can not be indicted as unknown,<sup>4</sup> and if it appear that the grand jury knew the name, the indictment may be quashed.<sup>5</sup>

The Christian name may, if necessary, be averred to be unknown.<sup>6</sup>

The pleading as to unknown co-conspirators is elsewhere discussed.<sup>7</sup>

§ 148. WRONG ADDITION TO BE MET BY PLEA IN ABATEMENT. Though, when there is no addition, the correct course at common law is to quash, yet, when there is a misnomer, the only method of meeting the error is by plea in abatement.<sup>1</sup> The error, however, must be one of substance; hence a plea in abatement that James Baker is a husbandman, and not a laborer, being demurred to, was adjudged bad.<sup>2</sup>

§ 149. DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE MUST BE GIVEN. The defendant must be described as of the town or hamlet, or place and county, of which he was or is, or in which he is or was, conversant.<sup>1</sup> In most States, the forms in common use give the addition of place, as “late of the said county,” or “of the county of ——.” The place may be averred to be that of the commission of the crime.<sup>2</sup>

§ 150. “JUNIOR” MUST BE ALLEGED WHEN PARTY IS KNOWN AS SUCH. Where a father and son have the same name, and are both indicted, the English rule was to distinguish them by naming one as the elder, the other as the younger;<sup>1</sup> though such seems no longer requisite;<sup>2</sup> and the general rule in this country is that junior is no necessary part of the name,<sup>3</sup> though it has been held that when L. W., Junior, it being presumed L. W. in the indictment meant L. W., Senior.<sup>4</sup> In New York, in an early case, it was said that if a man be known by the addition of "junior" to his name, an indictment against him without that addition is not conclusive that he is the person indicted.<sup>5</sup> The question is one of usage. If a party is commonly known as "Junior" or as "2d," as such he must be indicted; otherwise not.<sup>6</sup>

2. Description of Parties Injured and Third Parties.

§ 151. NAME ONLY OF THIRD PERSON NEED BE GIVEN. The statute of additions extends to the defendant alone, and does not at all affect the description either of the prosecutor, or any other individuals whom it may be necessary to name;<sup>1</sup> and therefore no addition is in such case necessary, unless more than two persons are referred to whose names are similar.<sup>2</sup> It is enough to state a party injured, or any person except the defendant, whose name necessarily occurs in the bill, by the Christian and surname; as, for instance, "on John Slycer did make an assault," or, the "goods of John Nokes did steal." The name thus given must be the name by which the person is generally known,<sup>3</sup> including Christian as well as surname.<sup>4</sup>

§ 153. THIRD PERSONS MAY BE DESCRIBED AS "UNKNOWN." Where a third person can not be described by name, it is enough to charge him as a "certain person to the jurors aforesaid unknown,"<sup>1</sup> which, as will presently be seen, is correct, if the party was at the time of the indictment unknown to the grand jury, though he became known afterwards.<sup>2</sup> A deceased person may thus be described as "unknown," when the grand jury have no knowledge of his name;<sup>3</sup> and it is to be noted that the same is also true as to the owner of stolen property,<sup>4</sup> or

A bastard is sufficiently identified by showing the name of its parent, thus: "A certain illegitimate male child then lately born of the body of A. B. (the mother)." —R. v. Hogg, 2 M. & Rob. 380. See R. v. Hicks, 2 Ibid. 302, where an indictment for child-murder was held bad for not stating the name of the child, or accounting for its omission. A bastard must not be described by his mother's name till he has acquired it by reputation.—R. v. Clark, R. & R. 358. Contra: Wakefield v. Mackey, 1 Phill. R. 134.

A bastard child, six weeks old, who was baptized on a Sunday, and down to the following Tuesday had been called by its name of baptism and mother's surname, was held by Erskine, J., to be properly described by both those names in an indictment for its murder.—R. v. Evans, 8 Car. & P. 765, 34 Eng. C. L. 1009.

Bastard was baptized “Eliza,” without mentioning any surname at the ceremony, and was afterwards, at three years old, suffocated by the prisoner, an indictment styling it “Eliza Waters,” that being the mother's surname, was held bad by all the judges, as the deceased had not acquired the name of Waters by reputation.—R. v. Waters, 1 Mood. C. C. 457, 2 Car. & K. 864, 61 Eng. C. L. 862.

No baptismal register, or copy of it, was produced at either trial. Semb.: “Eliza” would have sufficed. See R. v. Stroud, 1 Car. & K. 187, 47 Eng. C. L. 186, and cases collected; Williams v. Bryant, 5 M. & W. 447.

In the previous case of R. v. Clark, R. & R. 358, an indictment stated the murder of “George Lakeman Clark, a base-born infant male child, aged three weeks,” by the prisoner, its mother. The child had been christened George Lakeman, being the name of its reputed father, and was called so, and not by any other name known to the witnesses. Its mother called it so. There was no evidence that it had been called by or obtained its mother's name of Clark. The court held that the child was incorrectly described as Clark, and as nothing but the name identified him in it, the conviction was held bad. See, also, R. v. Sheen, 2 Car. & P. 634, 12 Eng. C. L. 776.

However, in R. v. Bliss, 8 Car. & P. 773, 34 Eng. C. L. 1014, an indictment against a married woman for murder of a legitimate child, which stated “that she, in and upon a certain infant male child of tender years, to wit, of the age of six weeks, and not baptized, feloniously and wilfully, etc., did make an assault,” etc., was held insufficient by all the judges, as it neither stated the child's name, nor that it was “to the jurors unknown.” It is, however, sufficient to describe the child “as a certain male child, etc., of tender age, that is to say, about the age of six weeks, and not baptized, born of the body of C. B.” See 2 C. & P. 635, n.; R. v. Willis, 1 Car. & K. 722, 47 Eng. C. L. 720; see, also, R. v. Sheen, 2 Car. & P. 634, 12 Eng. C. L. 776; Dickins, Q. S., 6th ed., 213. Junior and Senior.

The law as to defendants on this point has been already stated, § 108. In England, it is said that where the party injured has a mother or father of the same name, it is better to style the prosecutor “the younger,” as it may be presumed that the parent is the party meant; for George Johnson means G. J. the elder, unless the contrary is expressed.—Singleton v. Johnson, 9 M. & W. 67. But this was held immaterial when it is sufficiently proved who Elizabeth Edwards, the party dean assaulted person.<sup>5</sup> Unless there be such an averment, an indictment in which the injured party is not individuated can not be sustained.<sup>6</sup>

§ 154. — BUT THIS ALLEGATION MAY BE TRAVERSED. But if the third party's name be known to the grand jury, or could have been known by inquiry of witnesses at hand, the allegation will be improper, and the defendant must be acquitted on that indictment, though he may be afterwards tried upon a new one, in which the mistake is corrected.<sup>1</sup> Discovery of the name subsequently to the finding of the, however, is no ground for acquittal,<sup>2</sup> or arrest of judgment.<sup>3</sup> But the allegation that co-defendants are "unknown" is material, and may be trav-scribed assaulted, was, viz., the daughter of another Elizabeth Edwards.—R. v. Peace, 3 Barn. & Ald. 579, 5 Eng. C. L. 334.

Indicted for the murder of bastard child, whose name was to the jurors unknown, of mother, where it appeared that the child had not been baptized, but that the mother had said she would like to have it called Mary Ann, and little Mary, the indictment was held good.—R. v. Smith, 1 Mood. C. C. 402, 6 Car. & P. 151, 25 Eng. C. L. 368.

"A certain Wyandott Indian, whose name is unknown to the grand jury," in indictment for murder, is valid, and sufficiently descriptive of the deceased, without an allegation that the words "Wyandott Indian" mean a human being.—Reed v. State, 16 Ark. 499.

ersed under the plea of not guilty.<sup>4</sup> Thus, an indictment will be bad against an accessory, stating the principal to be unknown to the grand jury, contrary to the truth, and the judge will direct an acquittal.<sup>5</sup>

§ 155. — THE TEST IS WHETHER THE NAME WAS UNKNOWN TO THE GRAND JURY. The test is, had the grand jury notice, actual or constructive, of the name; for if so, the name must be averred.<sup>1</sup> But it is not enough to defeat the bill that the same grand jury found another bill specifying the "person unknown" as "J. L.,"<sup>2</sup> and the burden is on the defendant to prove knowledge at the time by the grand jury.<sup>3</sup>

It is the approved practice, in cases of doubtful ownership, to lay the ownership in one count in persons unknown, and in other counts in several persons tentatively.

§ 156. IMMATERIAL MISNOMER MAY BE REJECTED AS SURPLUSAGE. If the allegation in which the misnomer appears is immaterial, it may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>1</sup>

§ 158. VARIANCE IN THIRD PARTY'S NAME IS FATAL. A variance or an omission in the name of the person aggrieved is much more serious than a mistake in the name or addition of the defendant, as the latter can only be taken advantage of by the plea in abatement, while the former will be ground for arresting the judgment when the error appears on the record, or for acquittal, when a variance arises on the trial.<sup>1</sup>

§ 159. NAME MAY BE GIVEN BY INITIALS. Initials, it seems, are a sufficient designation of the Christian name, if the party uses and is known by such initials;<sup>1</sup> and at all events can not be excepted to after verdict.<sup>2</sup>

§ 160. REPUTATIVE NAME IS SUFFICIENT. As has been already incidentally noticed, a description of a person in legal proceedings by the name acquired by reputation has been held sufficiently certain.<sup>1</sup> Thus where, in a case of homicide, an indictment charges the name of the per-

§ 163. WHEN "SUNDAY" IS THE ESSENCE OF OFFENSE, THE DAY MUST BE SPECIFIED. The statement of the day of the month, in an indictment for an offense on Sunday, though the doing of the act on that day is the gist of the offense, is not more material than in other cases; and hence, if the indictment charge the offense to have been committed on Sunday, though it names the day of the month which does not fall on Sunday, it is good, or though the Sunday averred is not the Sunday proved.<sup>1</sup> But "Sunday" or "Sabbath" must be averred.<sup>2</sup>

"Sabbath" for "Sunday" is said to be no variance.<sup>2</sup>

§ 164. "VIDELICET" MAY INTRODUCE A DATE TENTATIVELY. A videlicet (i. e., "that afterwards, to-wit," etc.) was used by the old pleaders when they wished to aver a date or other fact tentatively, for information, without binding themselves to it as a matter of essential description, a variance in respect to which would be fatal. Hence it has been held in England (though there is some confusion in the authorities in this respect) that the videlicet can, if repugnant, be stricken out as surplusage, when there is enough remaining to make out the charge.<sup>1</sup> And as a rule the videlicet relieves the pleader from the necessity of proving a non-essential descriptive averment.<sup>2</sup>

After verdict, to support an indictment, and to show that the provisions of a statute have been complied with, dates laid under a videlicet may be taken to be true,<sup>3</sup> and as properly averred.<sup>4</sup>

Before verdict, however, and at common law, dates laid in a videlicet, when time is material, may be traversed; and hence, if laid insensibly, will vitiate the context. In other words, when an allegation is material, accuracy in stating it can not be dispensed with by thrusting it into a videlicet.<sup>5</sup>

month without the year is insufficient,<sup>1</sup> and so when the month is given but the day is left blank.<sup>2</sup> If the date be laid in blank the judgment will be arrested.<sup>3</sup> But in Pennsylvania, it has been determined that where the commencement of the indictment was "December Session, 1818," and the offense was charged to have been committed on the twelfth day of August, in the year aforesaid, the time was sufficiently expressed.<sup>4</sup> And it was said in another case that it was not fatal to aver the "first March," instead of the first day of March.<sup>5</sup> On the other hand, an indictment, not containing the year, but referring to the caption (which does contain the year) in this manner, "in the year of our Lord aforesaid," has been held to be bad, as the caption is no part of the indictment.<sup>6</sup>

§ 166. SUBSTANTIAL ACCURACY IS ENOUGH. It has been said that the omission of the phrase, "the year of our Lord," is fatal,<sup>1</sup> though it is ruled that A. defendant beat so many of the king's subjects between two specified days, is insufficient.<sup>2</sup>

§ 169. NEGLIGENCES SHOULD HAVE TIME AVERRED. In alleging a mere neglect or non-performance, it has been held to be unnecessary to specify either time or place.<sup>1</sup> But this, as a general principle, can not be sustained. The proper course is to aver that the defendant, at an assigned time, had a particular duty imposed on him, and that he, at that time, neglected to discharge that duty.<sup>2</sup>

§ 170. TIME MAY BE DESIGNATED BY HISTORICAL EPOCH. In England, it is the practice to specify the year of the king's reign, but it is enough if the time be designated by the calendar date.<sup>1</sup> And by the common law either the year of the reign, or the calendar date, has been sustained.<sup>2</sup> With us the uniform practice is to give the day and year of the Christian era according to the calendar rendering.<sup>3</sup>

§ 171. RECITALS OF TIME NEED NOT BE ACCURATE. The wrong recital of the date of a statute is immaterial;<sup>1</sup> and such is the case with all erroneous recitals except those of written or printed documents.

§ 172. HOUR NOT NECESSARY, UNLESS REQUIRED BY STATUTE. As a rule, it is unnecessary to state the hour at which the act was done, unless rendered so by the statute upon which the indictment is framed.<sup>1</sup> In burglary, indeed, it is usual to state it; but alleging the offense to have been committed “in the night,” without mentioning the hour, has been held to be sufficient,<sup>2</sup> though at common law the practice is to aver the hour.<sup>3</sup> If an hour in the night be stated, proof of any hour of the night will sustain the allegation.<sup>4</sup> In an indictment upon stat. 9 G. 4, c. 69, for unlawfully entering, or being in a close by night for the purpose of taking game, armed, it is not necessary to state the hour of the night.<sup>5</sup>

§ 173. REPETITION MAY BE BY “THEN AND THERE.” When the time has been once named with certainty, it is afterwards sufficient to refer to it by the words then and there, which have the same effect as if the day and year were actually repeated.<sup>1</sup> The mere conjunction and, without adding then and there, is insufficient to constitute an adequate independent averment, though it may be otherwise when the sense is certain without the repetition.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in an indictment for robbery, the allegation of time must be attached to the robbery, and not merely to the assault;<sup>3</sup> and in a case of murder, it is

If the indictment alleged that the defendant feloniously and of malice aforethought made an assault, and with a certain sword, etc., then and there struck, the previous omission will not be material, for the words feloniously and with malice aforethought, previously connected with the assault, are by the words then and there adequately applied to the murder. See 4 Co. 41, b; Dyer, 69, a; 1 East P. C. 346; 1 Ch. C. L. 221; Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, § 662.

In an indictment for breaking a house with intent to ravish, "then and there" is not necessary to the intent.—Com. v. Doharty, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 52.

An indictment which avers that the defendant feloniously assaulted B., at a time and place named, and being then and there armed with a dangerous weapon, did actually strike him on his head with said weapon, is sufficient, without repeating the words "then and there" before the words "did actually strike"; the court rejected the English rule above stated requiring such repetition.—*Com. v. § 174. — OTHER TERMS INSUFFICIENT. The word "being" (existens) will, unless necessarily connected with some other matter, relate to the time of the indictment rather than of the offense; and, therefore, an indictment for a forcible entry, on land being the prosecutor's freehold, without saying "then being," was held insufficient.<sup>1</sup> It is otherwise when part of an independent adequate averment.<sup>2</sup>

Neither "instantly,"<sup>3</sup> nor "immediately,"<sup>4</sup> nor "whilst,"<sup>5</sup> being ambiguous terms, can supply the place of "then and there."

§ 175. "THEN AND THERE" CAN NOT CURE AMBIGUITIES. If, however, two times and places have been previously mentioned, and afterwards comes the reference "then and there," or if the antecedent averment is in any way ambiguous as to time or place, the indictment is defective, because it is uncertain to which it refers.<sup>1</sup>

But an indictment may be found for a crime committed after the term commenced to which it is returned.<sup>6</sup>

§ 181. ENOUGH TO LAY VENUE WITHIN JURISDICTION OF COURT. In England, at common law, it was held necessary to lay as the place of the commission of the offense, beside the county, some particular vicinage, of such dimensions that all living in it might be supposed to have knowledge of the transaction to be inquired into.<sup>2</sup> By statute, however, it is now enough to aver the county as the place of the commission.<sup>3</sup>

In the United States, the latter practice is generally accepted wherever the county is conterminous with the jurisdiction of the court,<sup>4</sup> though it is otherwise when the jurisdiction of the court embraces but a fraction of the county.<sup>5</sup>

By statute in several jurisdictions, when an offense is committed near the boundary line between two counties, it may be averred to be in either county.<sup>8</sup>

Jurisdiction of the federal courts, where crimes have been committed at sea or abroad, is discussed at large in another work.<sup>9</sup> The indictment, when the offense is alleged to have been committed on the high seas, must be averred to have been out of the jurisdiction of any State of the United States.<sup>10</sup>

In such cases the trial of the offense is, by Act of April 30, 1790, to be "in the district where the offender is apprehended, or into which he may first be brought." Under this statute a person is triable in the Southern District of New York who, on a vessel owned by citizens of the United States, has committed on the high seas an offense made penal by act of Congress; has been then put in irons for safe keeping; has, on the arrival of the vessel at anchorage at the lower quarantine in the Eastern District of New York, been delivered to officers of the State of New York, in order that he may be forthcoming on trial; and has been by them carried into the Southern District, and there delivered to the marshal of the United States for that district, to whom a warrant to apprehend and bring him to justice was first issued.<sup>11</sup> But where the indictment charged that an assault with a dangerous weapon was committed on board a vessel in the harbor of Guantanamo, in the Island of Cuba, but there was no allegation that the place was out of the jurisdiction of any of the States, it was ruled that the omission of such an allegation was fatal, as whether the place of the offense was without the jurisdiction of any State was material in determining the question of jurisdiction, and was a question of fact for the jury.<sup>12</sup> "In Jackelow's case,"<sup>13</sup> said Benedict, J., "it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States that the question whether a particular place be out of the jurisdiction of any State, when material in determining the question of the jurisdiction of a court, is a question of fact to be passed on by the jury; and in that case the Supreme Court set aside a special verdict, which found the offense to have been committed in the water adjoining the State of Connecticut, between Norwalk Harbor and Westchester County in the State of New York, at a point five miles eastward of Lyons' Point (which is the boundary between the States of New York and Connecticut), and one mile and a half from the Connecticut shore at low-water mark, on the ground that, in the absence of a finding by the jury that the place so described was out of the jurisdiction of any State, it was impossible for the court to determine such to be the fact."

§ 182. WHEN ACT IS BY AGENT, PRINCIPAL TO BE CHARGED AS OF PLACE OF SUCH ACT. We have discussed, in another volume,<sup>1</sup> the important question whether it is necessary to jurisdiction that the offender, at the time of the offense, should have been within the jurisdiction. We may here notice that where an offense is committed within a State by means of an agent, the employer is guilty as a principal, though he did not personally act in that State, and at the time the offense was committed was in another State.

The forum delicti commissi in such case has jurisdiction of the offense, and, if the offender comes within the limits of the State, has also jurisdiction of his person, and he may be arrested and brought to trial.<sup>2</sup> And the better opinion is that the place of the commission of the offense, as distinguished from the place where the offender at the time stood, is, in cases of conflict, the proper venue.<sup>3</sup>

§ 183. WHEN COUNTY IS DIVIDED, JURISDICTION TO BE LAID IN COURT OF LOCUS DELICTI. Where an offense is committed within the county of A., and after the commission of the offense the county is divided, and the part of the county in which the offense was committed is created a new county called B., the latter county has jurisdiction over the offense.<sup>1</sup> In such case, however, the indictment may charge the perpetration in the former county while the trial is in the latter.<sup>2</sup>

§ 184. WHEN COUNTY INCLUDES SEVERAL JURISDICTIONS, PARTICULAR JURISDICTION MUST BE SPECIFIED. Where there are distinct judicial districts in the county, it is not sufficient that the indictment names the county. Therefore, where the offense in a District Court in North Carolina was laid to have been committed in Beaufort County, without adding in the District of Newbern, judgment was arrested.<sup>1</sup> And so in all cases where the jurisdiction is less than the county.<sup>2</sup> And when several counties are in the town, it is not enough to allege the town.<sup>3</sup>

The court will take judicial notice of statutory subdivisions of counties.<sup>4</sup>

§ 185. NAME OF STATE NOT NECESSARY IN INDICTMENT. Where the caption gives the name of the State, it need not be repeated in the indictment. And a complaint made "in behalf of the State," alleging an offense in a particular city and county (corresponding in name to a city and county of the State), against a statute the title and date of which are stated, and rightly describing a statute passed by the legislature of the State, sufficiently shows that the offense was committed within the State, without any caption, or venue in the margin.<sup>1</sup> And, generally, as the name of the State is assumed, in all the proceedings, it need not be given in the indictment.<sup>2</sup>

§ 186. SUB-DESCRIPTION IN TRANSITORY OFFENSES IMMATERIAL. Of transitory offenses as they are called (e. g., offenses of which the object of the offense is not necessarily attached to a particular spot), a variance as to specification is not fatal if jurisdiction be correctly given.<sup>1</sup>

§ 187. — BUT NOT AS TO MATTERS OF LOCAL DESCRIPTION. But where the case is stated by way of local description and not as a venue merely, a variance in what are called local offenses (e. g., where the object is necessarily attached to a place) is fatal;<sup>1</sup> as where, in an indictment for arson, the tenement was averred to be in the sixth ward, whereas it was in the fifth.<sup>2</sup> The same particularity is required in cases of stealing in a dwelling-house, of burglary,<sup>3</sup> of forcible entry and detainer, of arson, and in all cases where a statute makes a special locality essential. In such cases, where the situation of the premises is especially laid, the description must be strictly proved.<sup>4</sup> Under the same head are to be included injuries to

<sup>1</sup> In the city of New York, the practice has been to charge the ward as part of the venue, thus: "In the First Ward of the city of New York"; in New Orleans, to name the parish. The same practice obtains elsewhere. If, however, the offense is shown to be within the jurisdiction of the court, the special place averred, if unnecessary, need not, when the offense is transitory, be proved.—

§ 188. "COUNTY AFORESAID" GENERALLY ENOUGH—"THEN AND THERE." It is sufficient if the place be averred simply as "the county aforesaid," when the county is named in the commencement or caption as that for which the grand jurors were sworn.<sup>1</sup> It is otherwise when two counties are named.<sup>2</sup>

"County," even, may be left out in the statement of place, when it can be presumed from prior averments.<sup>3</sup> Thus it has been held enough, in an indictment against A. B., of the town of C., County of D., to aver that the offense was committed at C.<sup>4</sup>

"County" or "town" or "city," however, must somewhere appear; and it is not enough to aver the offense to have been committed in C. The indictment must say,

§ 189. TITLE, WHEN CHANGED BY LEGISLATURE, MUST BE FOLLOWED. A change of local title, when enacted by the legislature, must be followed by the pleader. Thus in North Carolina, by an act of assembly, passed in 1842, a part of the county of Burke, and a part of the county of Rutherford were constituted a new county, by the name of M'Dowell; and by a supplemental act, jurisdiction of all criminal offenses committed in that part of M'Dowell taken from Burke was given to the Superior Court of Burke. It was held that an indictment for a criminal offense, alleging it to have been committed in Burke County, could not be supported by evidence showing the offense to have been committed in M'Dowell, after the establishment of the latter county.<sup>1</sup> By the same rule, it is not error to describe a county within which the offense was committed by the name belonging to it at the time of trial, even though it went by another name at the time when the act was committed.<sup>2</sup>

§ 190. VENUE NEED NOT FOLLOW FINE. Where a fine is payable, or penalty is special, to a subdivision of county, it has been said that the pleading should aver such subdivision, so as to guide the court in the application of the fine or penalty.<sup>1</sup> But it has been held in Pennsylvania, with better reason, that in an indictment for adultery, it is not necessary to mention the township in which the defendant resided, though of moment in the sentence, because the court may ascertain the place of the defendant's residence otherwise than by the verdict of the jury.<sup>2</sup>

§ 191. IN LARCENY, VENUE MAY BE IN PLACE WHERE GOODS ARE TAKEN. In larceny, the venue may be laid in any county in which the thief was possessed of the stolen goods.<sup>1</sup>

§ 192. OMISSION OF VENUE IS FATAL. Where an indictment omits to lay a venue or place of the offense charged, this is at common law a fatal defect on demurrer, on motion to quash, in arrest of judgment, or in error.<sup>1</sup>

In another volume the proof of place is discussed at large; and it is shown that the place of the offense must be proved to be within the jurisdiction of the court<sup>2</sup> though the proof of this may be inferential.<sup>3</sup> It will also be seen that when a place is stated as matter of description, a variance may be fatal.<sup>4</sup> The venue in homicide may be placed by statute in the place of death,<sup>5</sup> and that of conspiracy in the place of any overt act.<sup>6</sup> with such certainty, that the offense may judicially appear to the court.<sup>1</sup> When special facts are an essential part of an offense, they must be set out.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in indictments for murder or manslaughter, it is necessary to state that the death ensued in consequence of the act of the prisoner;<sup>3</sup> and in perjury it is necessary to set out the oath as an oath taken in a judicial proceeding, and before a proper person, in order to see whether it was an oath which the court had jurisdiction to administer.<sup>4</sup> And in the prosecution of a constable for not serving, it is requisite to set out the mode of his election, because if he was not legally elected to the office, he can not be guilty of a crime in refusing to execute his duties.<sup>5</sup> Certainty to common intent, it is said, is what is required; perfect certainty is unattainable, and the attempt to secure it would in almost every case lead to a variance.<sup>6</sup> An illus-

In United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. Ed. 588, it was held that an indictment under the Act of May 31, 1870, prohibiting the intimidation of citizens, must contain the averment that the right hindered was one secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

See, to same effect, Biggs v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 547; People v. Taylor, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 91; State v. Philbrick, 31 Me. 401; Kit v. State, 30 Tenn. (11 Humph.) 167.

ing is well stated by Judge Kane, in United States v. Almelda, Wh. Prec. 1061-2, Fed. Cas. No. 14433.

tration of the degree of certainty required may be found in indictments for bigamy. In such indictments a variance as to the second wife's name is fatal, it being necessary to individuate her, in order to determine the offense.<sup>7</sup> But the weight of authority is that it is not necessary to set forth the name of the first wife.<sup>8</sup> And if we lean on the analogy of indictments for receiving stolen goods, we should hold that the more general statement is enough. If we are forced to state in detail the marital relations of the parties, it would be necessary to go still further, and aver that the first wife or husband of the defendant was capable of consenting to marriage, and was not bound by other matrimonial ties. As, however, the first marriage in all its relations is simply matter of inducement, it is enough to state it in general terms, without specifying the details. If these are needed for justice, they can be supplied by a bill of particulars.<sup>9</sup> Where, however, the details of the first marriage are given, a variance in the name is fatal.<sup>10</sup> The certainty, in other words, must be such, so far as concerns the substance of the offense, as exhibits the truth according to its ordinary general acceptance; not the truth with its differentia scientifically and exhaustively displayed.<sup>11</sup>

§ 194. OMISSION OF ESSENTIAL INCIDENTS IS FATAL. We may hold it to be a general rule that, where the act is not in itself necessarily unlawful, but becomes so by its peculiar circumstances and relations, all the matters must be set forth in which its illegality consists.<sup>1</sup> Hence, the omission of any fact or circumstance necessary to constitute the offense will be fatal; as, in an indictment for obstructing an officer in the execution of process, without showing that he was an officer of the court out of which the prosecution issued, and the nature of the official duty and of the process.<sup>2</sup> An indictment, also, for contemptuous or disrespectful words to a magistrate is defective without showing that the magistrate was in the execution of his duty at the time;<sup>3</sup> and an indictment against a public officer for non-performance of a duty without showing that he was such an officer as was bound by law to perform that particular duty,<sup>4</sup> though the title of an officer need not be alleged unless it be at issue; and any unnecessary averments of this class may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>5</sup> It is necessary, also, in an indictment for obtaining money under false pretenses, to show whose money it was.<sup>6</sup>

At the same time it is not necessary, when a minor offense is inclosed in a greater, to introduce the averments showing the defendant to have been guilty of the greater offense, though these should be proved by the evidence. The defendant, however, on such an indictment, can be convicted only of the minor offense.<sup>7</sup> averred, but these averments must be so shaped as to include the legal characteristics of the offense. Thus, an indictment charging the defendant with forging a receipt against a book-account is defective when it does not bring the facts up to the definition of forgery.<sup>1</sup> So an indictment for fornication and bastardy must use the technical expressions which the statutes prescribe.<sup>2</sup> The main charges of guilt must be categorically made;<sup>3</sup> and can not be thrown into a participial form.<sup>4</sup> It is otherwise as to incidental assertions, e. g., scienter, which, though material, are in the nature of qualifications of such material charges.<sup>5</sup>

§ 196. — NOT ENOUGH TO CHARGE CONCLUSION OF LAW. As the indictment must contain a specific description of the offense, it is not enough to state a mere conclusion of law.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it would be insufficient to charge the defendant with "stealing" or "murdering."<sup>2</sup> So it is bad to accuse him of being a common defamer, vexer, or oppressor of many men,<sup>3</sup> or a common disturber of the peace, and having stirred up divers quarrels,<sup>4</sup> or a common forestaller,<sup>5</sup> or a common thief,<sup>6</sup> or as to a common evil-doer,<sup>7</sup> or a common champertor,<sup>8</sup> or a common conspirator, or any other such vague accusation.<sup>9</sup> On the same reasoning, in an indictment for obtaining money by false pretenses, it will not suffice merely to state that the defendant falsely pretended certain allegations, but it must also be stated by express averment what parts of the representation were false, for otherwise the defendant will not know to what circumstances the charge of falsehood is intended to apply.<sup>10</sup> It is also not sufficient, generally, to charge "malicious mischief" or "malicious injury"; the facts of the injury must be given.<sup>11</sup> An indictment, on the same principle, charging a man with being a common cheat, or a common swindler or defrauder, is bad, and is not helped by an averment that, by divers false pretenses and false tokens, he deceived and defrauded divers good citizens of the said State.<sup>12</sup> A count, also, in an indictment charging that the defendant sold a lottery ticket, and tickets, in a lottery not authorized by the laws of the Commonwealth, is bad, not being sufficiently certain;<sup>13</sup> and so of an indictment for embezzlement charging unlawful loaning of State money, without stating how or to whom, is bad;<sup>14</sup> and so of a count charging the defendant with voting without having the legal qualifications of a voter;<sup>15</sup> and so of a charge that election officers "did commit wilful fraud in discharge of duties" is insufficient without setting out the particular acts;<sup>16</sup> and so of a count which charges the defendant with unlawfully and fraudulently adulterating "a certain substance intended for food, to-wit, one pound of confectionery";<sup>17</sup> and so an indictment under statute for defrauding a hotel-keeper is insufficient, unless the nature and character of the acts and circumstances indicative of fraudulent intent are fully set forth;<sup>18</sup> and so an indictment for defrauding by means of divers false and fraudulent tokens, devices, pretenses, and representations, must make specific allegations as to the tokens, devices, pretenses, and representations, or it will be insufficient.<sup>19</sup>

The same rule applies to certain lines of nuisance, to describe which generic terms are adequate, as is the case with a “house of ill-fame”; a “disorderly house,”<sup>4</sup> and a “tippling-house.”<sup>5</sup> So an indictment for betting at faro bank need not set out the particular nature of the game, nor the name of the person with whom the bet was made.<sup>6</sup> But an indictment, as has just been seen, charging the defendant as a common cheat, is bad.<sup>7</sup>

§ 198. MATTERS UNKNOWN MAY BE PROXIMATELY DESCRIBED. If a particular fact, or condition, which is one of the component parts of the offense, can not be accurately described, the indictment will be good, if it state that such fact or condition is unknown to the grand jury, provided that the fact or condition in question be described as accurately as possible.<sup>1</sup> But “this allegation, that the name or other particular fact is ‘unknown to the grand jury,’ is not merely formal; on the contrary, if it be shown that it was, in fact, known to them, then, the

§ 199. BILL OF PARTICULARS MAY BE REQUIRED. As will hereafter be more fully seen, whether a bill of particulars or specification of facts shall be required is exclusively within the discretion of the presiding judge.<sup>1</sup> In many cases of general charges (e. g., conspiracy, where the indictment merely avers a general conspiracy to cheat), such a specification on the part of the prosecution will be exacted.<sup>2</sup> As a general rule, the counsel for the prosecution are to be restricted, after such an order, to proof of the particulars stated in the bill, though this limitation may, in extraordinary cases, be relaxed at the discretion of the court.<sup>3</sup>

§ 201. VIDELICET IS THE POINTING OUT OF AN AVERMENT OF PROBABLE SPECIFICATION. A videlicet, in reference to statement of time, has been already considered.<sup>1</sup> The object of the videlicet, which may be extended to allegations of quantity, of distance, of localization, of differentiation, is to annex a specification, by way of definition, to a clause immediately preceding, and thus to separate, by a kind of bracketing, this specification from other clauses.<sup>2</sup> This "is a precaution which is totally useless when the statement placed after the videlicet is material, but which, in other cases, prevents the danger of a variance by separating the description from the material averment, so that the former, if not proved, may be rejected, without mutilating the sentence which contains the latter."<sup>3</sup> But a videlicet can not be admitted to contradict, increase, or diminish the allegations with which it is connected.<sup>4</sup>

§ 202. ASSAULT MAY BE SUSTAINED WITHOUT SPECIFICATION OF OBJECT. Where an assault is duly averred, then the intent with which this assault was committed is matter of surplusage, and need not be proved in order to secure a conviction of the assault.<sup>1</sup> Even an assault with intent need not specify the facts necessary to constitute an offense whose actual and complete shape was not at the

The means of effecting the criminal intent, or the circumstances evincive of the design with which the act was done, are considered to be matters of evidence to the jury to demonstrate the intent, and not necessary to be incorporated in an indictment.<sup>8</sup> It is otherwise, however, when the charge is a statutory aggravated assault, in which case the aggravation must be specially averred.<sup>9</sup> When, however, an attempt is averred, it is necessary that some act constituting such attempt (e. g., an assault) should be laid,<sup>10</sup> as the attempt is not per se indictable, and needs extraneous facts to make it the subject of an indictment, while it is otherwise with an assault.<sup>11</sup> It is not necessary, however, to aver that which the grand jury could not have known, e. g., what were the specific

In United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819, it is held that where a defendant is not charged with using a still, boiler, or other vessel himself, but with causing and procuring some other person to use them, the name of such person must be given in the indictment.

Indictment for distilling vinegar illegally, must set out that the apparatus was used for that purpose, and in the premises described, and the vinegar manufactured at the time the apparatus described was being used. The averment that defendant caused and procured the apparatus to be used for distilling implies with sufficient certainty that it was so used; it is not essential that its actual use shall be set out. goods the party attempted to steal,<sup>12</sup> or, it may be, particular poison the defendant intended to employ.<sup>13</sup>

§ 203. ATTEMPT TO COMMIT AN IMPOSSIBLE CRIME. Where the offense consists in the criminal intent, an indictment will lie for such attempt, and it need not be alleged that there was a possibility that the attempted crime could have been committed; in other words, there may be an indictment for an attempt to commit an impossible crime, where the intent with which the attempt is made is criminal. In such case the indictment must charge and the evidence show that the intent was in fact criminal.<sup>1</sup> Thus, there may be a criminal attempt to pick the pocket of another, notwithstanding the fact that there was nothing in the pocket at the time,<sup>2</sup> and for that reason the attempted crime was impossible of accomplishment;<sup>3</sup> or, again, there may be a criminal attempt to produce an abortion, although the woman is not at the time pregnant with child,<sup>4</sup> or the medicine administered

<sup>2</sup> In England it was formerly held that where a man put his hand into another's pocket, and there was nothing in the pocket to steal, he could not be convicted of an attempt to steal (Reg. v. Collins, 1 Leigh & C. 471); but this doctrine was overruled by Lord Coleridge in Reg. v. Brown, 24 Q. B. Div. 357.

In America this doctrine has never found favor. Butler, J., says in State v. Wilson, 30 Conn. 500, that "it would be a startling proposition that a known pickpocket might pass around in a crowd, in full view of a policeman, and even in the room of a police station, and thrust his hands into the pockets of those present with intent to steal, and yet not be liable to arrest and punishment until the policeman had ascertained that there was in fact money or valuables in some one of the pockets upon which the thief had experimented."

<sup>3</sup> Com. v. McDonald, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 365. The court in this case say: "A man may attempt to steal by breaking open a trunk, and be disappointed at not finding the object of pursuit, and so not steal in fact. Still he nevertheless remains chargeable with an act done towards the commission of the offense."

§ 204. ACT OF ONE CONFEDERATE MAY BE AVERRED AS ACT OF THE OTHER. As we shall have occasion to see at length when the proof of variance is discussed,<sup>1</sup> the act of an agent may be averred as the act of the principal, and that of one confederate as the act of the other.<sup>2</sup>

§ 205. DESCRIPTIVE AVERMENT MUST BE PROVED. When an averment is descriptive, it may so far enter into the designation of the offense that it must be specifically proved.<sup>1</sup>

§ 207. DISJUNCTIVE OFFENSES IN STATUTE MAY BE CONJUNCTIVELY STATED. Where a statute disjunctively enumerates offenses, or the intent necessary to constitute such offenses, the indictment can not charge them disjunctively.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a statute against unlawful shooting affixes a penalty when the act is done with intent to maim, disfigure, disable, or kill (in the disjunctive), the disjunctive statement of intent is bad.<sup>2</sup> Under statutes also, describing the several phases of forgery disjunctively, it is held fatal to say that the defendant forged, or caused to be forged, an instrument,<sup>3</sup> or that he carried and conveyed, or caused to be carried and conveyed, two persons having the smallpox, so as to burden a certain parish.<sup>4</sup> It is therefore error to state the successive gradations of statutory offenses disjunctively; and to state them conjunctively, when they are not repugnant, is allowable.<sup>5</sup>

§ 208. — OTHERWISE AS TO DISTINCT AND SUBSTANTIVE OFFENSES. When a statute in one clause makes several distinct and substantive offenses indictable, neither of which is included in the other, it has been held better to specify the actual offense committed.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the language of the statute was, “any person who shall presume to keep a tippling-house, or sell rum, brandy, whisky, tafia, or other spirituous liquors, etc., shall be liable,” etc.; and the indictment charged the defendant with selling the particular liquors in the aggregate without a license, it was held that the indictment was deficient in not defining the offense with sufficient precision.<sup>2</sup> Whether different designations of an object (e. g., “warrant,” “order,” “request”) can be coupled will be hereafter noticed.<sup>3</sup>

§ 209. INTENT, WHEN NECESSARY, MUST BE AVERRED. The cases in reference to intent may be grouped under the following heads:

1. Where the intent is to be proved in order to indicate the character of the act, as when there is an attempt or assault to commit an offense, in which cases the intent must be averred;<sup>1</sup> and must be attached to all the material allegations.<sup>2</sup> And so as to the intent in forgery.<sup>3</sup>

2. Where the intent is to be prima facie inferred from the facts stated, in which case intent, unless part of the statutory definition, need not be specifically averred.<sup>4</sup> Thus, while intent must be averred in an indictment for an attempt to steal, it need not be averred in an indictment for larceny.<sup>5</sup>

3. Where intent is part of the statutory definition of the offense it must be averred, though it is otherwise in cases where it is not part of such statutory definition, and when the offense is punishable, no matter what was the intent.<sup>6</sup>

4. In negligent offenses, to allege intent is a fatal error, unless the allegation be so stated as to be capable of discharge as surplusage.<sup>7</sup>

In United States v. Bayaud, 21 Blatchf. 217, 16 Fed. 276, 21 Blatchf. 287, 23 Fed. 721, it was held that in an indictment for removing revenue stamps from casks without destroying them it is not necessary to aver a scienter. "Where a statute," said Benedict, J., "forbids the doing of a certain act under certain circumstances, without reference to knowledge or intent, any person doing the act mentioned is charged with the duty to see that the circumstances attending this act are such as to make it lawful, and under such statutes a conviction may be had upon proof of doing the forbidden act, without proof or knowledge by the accused of the circumstances specified in the statute."

Rule applied in many cases. See: CONN.—Barnes v. The State, 19 Conn. 399. MASS.—Com. v. Boynton, 84 Mass. (2 Allen) 160 (where selling liquor that was intoxicating was the offense); Com. v. Waite, 93 Mass. (11 Allen) 264, 87 Am. Dec. 711 (where the act charged was selling adulterated milk). MINN.—State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 594 (where selling liquor to an habitual drunkard was charged). § 211. INDUCEMENT AND AGGRAVATION NEED NOT BE DETAILED. Matters of inducement or aggravation, as a general rule, do not require so much certainty as the statement of the gist of the offense.<sup>1</sup> And where the offense can not be stated with complete certainty, it is sufficient to state it with such certainty as it is capable of. We have this rule illustrated in cases of assaults already noticed. And in conspiracy to defraud a person of goods, it is not necessary to describe the goods as in an indictment for stealing them; stating them as "divers goods" has been holden sufficient.<sup>2</sup>

1. In order to identify the charge, lest the grand jury should find a bill for one offense and the defendant be put upon his trial for another.<sup>2</sup>

2. That the defendant's conviction or acquittal may the offense was having in possession adulterated tobacco, and where it was found as a fact that the accused believed the tobacco to be unadulterated); Fitzpatrick v. Kelly, L. R. 8 Q. B. 337 (where the charge was selling adulterated butter); Russell on Crimes 93 (where the crime charged is inducing a soldier to desert).

The question in its substantive relations is discussed in Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 108-113.

enure to his subsequent protection, should he be again questioned on the same grounds.

3. To warrant the court in granting or refusing any particular right or indulgence, which the defendant claims as incident to the nature of the case.<sup>3</sup>

4. To enable the defendant to prepare for his defense<sup>4</sup> in particular cases, and to plead in all;<sup>5</sup> or, if he prefer it, to submit to the court by demurrer whether the facts alleged (supposing them to be true) so support the conclusion in law, as to render it necessary for him to make any answer to the charge.<sup>6</sup>

5. To enable the court, looking at the record after conviction, to decide whether the facts charged are sufficient to support a conviction of the particular crime, and to warrant their judgment.

6. To instruct the court as to the technical limits of the penalty to be inflicted.<sup>7</sup>

7. To guide a court of error in its action in revising the record.<sup>8</sup>

Certainty and precision in an indictment are required to that extent that will enable the defendant to judge whether the facts and circumstances stated constitute an indictable offense, that he may know the nature of the offense against which he is to prepare his defense; that he may plead a conviction or acquittal, in bar of another indictment; and that there may be no doubt as to the nature of the judgment to be given in case of conviction.—Biggs v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 547.

Material parts of instrument alleged to be forged is all that need be set out.—Haupt v. State, 108 Ga. 53, 75 Am. St. Rep. 19, 34 S. E. 313.

Omission of dollar marks at the head of the columns in a report, in an indictment for forgery, does not vitiate the indictment.—State v. Bonney, 34 Me. 383.

Setting out instrument in hæc verba, indictment need not include anything therein which is not part of the contract.—Langdale v. People, 100 Ill. 263.

As to variance, see Whart. Crim. Ev., § 114.

As to forgery, see Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, § 932.

In indictment for libel, the alleged libelous matter must be set out accurately, any variance being fatal. See: MASS.—Com. v. Tarbox, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 66. PA.—Com. v. Sweney, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 173. S. C.—Walsh v. State, 2 McC. 248. TENN.—State v. Brownlow, 26 Tenn. (7 Humph.) 63. ENG.—Cartwright v. Wright, 1 Dow. & Ry. 230.

If the indictment does not on its face profess to set forth an accurate copy of the alleged libel in words and figures, it will be held insufficient on demurrer, or in arrest of judgment.—State v. Twitty, 9 N. C. (2 Hawks) 248; State v. Goodman, 6 Rich. (S. C.) 387, 60 Am. Dec. 132, and cases cited to § 215.

It is not sufficient to profess to set it forth according to its substance or effect.—Com. v. Wright, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 46; Com. v. Tarbox, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 66; State v. Brownlow, 26 Tenn. (7 Humph.) 63.

Where the indictment alleged that the defendant published, etc., an unlawful and malicious libel, according to the purport and effect, and in substance as follows, it was ruled that the words between libel and as follows could not be rejected as surplusage.—Com. v. Wright, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 46. Infra, § 216.

—Matters not in the libelous passage, or of record, need not be exactly alleged. Thus, an indictment charging that the defendant published a libel on the twenty-first of the month, may be supported by proof of a publication on the nineteenth of the same month. But it is otherwise if the indictment has alleged that the libel was published in a paper dated the twenty-first of the month.—Com. v. Varney, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 402.

—Where parts are selected, they must be set forth thus: "In a certain part of which said," etc., "there were and are contained certain false, wicked, malicious, scandalous, seditious, and libelous matters, of and concerning," etc., "according to the tenor and effect following, that is to say:" "And in a certain other part," etc., etc. See 1 Camp. 350, per Lord Ellenborough; Archbold's C. P. 494; 1 Wms. Notes to Saund. 139. Infra, § 225.

—The date at the end of the libel need not be set forth.—Com. v. Harmon, 68 Mass. (2 Gray) 289.

Where it does not appear from the paper itself who its author was, nor the persons of and concerning whom it was written, nor the purpose for which it was written, these facts should be explicitly averred, for the consideration of the jury, in all cases in which they are material.—State v. Henderson, 2 Rich. (S. C.) 179.

Where the persons alleged to have been libeled are alluded to in ambiguous and covert terms, it is not sufficient to aver generally that the paper was composed and published "of and concerning" the persons alleged to have been figures. The matter must be set out word for word.<sup>3</sup> Thus, the omission of a word in an indictment for forgery is fatal.<sup>4</sup> In such cases, however, it is not necessary to copy the vignettes, devices, seals, letters, or figures in the margin, as they make no part of the meaning;<sup>5</sup> and so of stamps.<sup>6</sup> But it has been held fatal to omit the name of the State in the upper margin of a copy of a bank note, when such name is not repeated on the body.<sup>7</sup> libeled, with innuendoes accompanying the covert terms, whenever they occur in the paper as set out in the indictment, that they meant those persons, or were allusions to their names. There should be a full and explicit averment that the defendant, under and by the use of the covert terms, wrote of and concerning the persons alleged to be libeled.—State v. Henderson, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 179; State v. Brownlow, 26 Tenn. (7 Humph.) 63; R. v. Marsden, 4 Moore & Scott 164, and see, infra, § 227.

The court will regard the use of fictitious names and disguises, in a libel, in the sense that they are commonly understood by the public.—State v. Chace, 1 Miss. (Walker) 384.

Innuendoes and colloquiums necessary under a declaration which alleges the publication of a certain "libel concerning the plaintiff," but contains no innuendoes, colloquiums, or special averments of facts to connect the publication with the plaintiff, if no evidence be offered to connect him therewith, except the publication itself, the question whether the publication refers to the plaintiff is for the court, and not for the jury.—Barrows v. Bell, 73 Mass. (7 Gray)

In prosecutions for selling lottery tickets, in jurisdictions in which all lotteries are illegal, the weight of authority is that the ticket need not be set forth;<sup>8</sup> though, if there be a pretense of setting forth the ticket, a variance is fatal.<sup>9</sup> It has also been held not necessary to set forth, in an indictment for not destroying stamps, the stamps which should have been effaced.<sup>10</sup>

§ 214. — IN SUCH CASE THE INDICTMENT SHOULD CLAIM TO SET FORTH THE WORDS. When it is necessary to set forth exactly a document,<sup>1</sup> it may be preceded by the words, "to the tenor following," or "in these words," or "as follows," or "in the words and figures following," for though the term "tenor," which imports an accurate copy,<sup>2</sup> has been considered to be the most technical way of introducing the document, yet it has been ruled that "as follows" is equivalent to the words "according to the tenor following," or "in the words and figures following," and that if under such an allegation the prosecutor fails in proving the instrument verbatim, as laid, the variance will be fatal,<sup>3</sup> and where the indictment, by these or similar averments, fails to claim to set out a copy of the instrument in words and figures, it will be invalid.<sup>4</sup>

as it appears on the face of it in ordinary construction, and is insufficient when literal exactness is required; tenor means an exact copy of it.<sup>1</sup> But if the instrument, in cases where only purport is required, does not "purport" to be what the indictment avers—i. e., if its meaning is not accurately stated—the variance is fatal.<sup>2</sup> Purport may be rejected as surplusage when tenor is accurately given.<sup>3</sup> Nor when the document is set forth, and shows fraud on its face, need its prejudicial character be averred.<sup>4</sup>

§ 216. "MANNER AND FORM," "PURPORT AND EFFECT," "SUBSTANCE," DO NOT IMPLY VERBAL ACCURACY. The words "in manner and form following, that is to say," do not profess to give more than the substance, and are usual in an indictment for perjury;<sup>1</sup> but the word "aforesaid" binds the party to an exact recital.<sup>2</sup> "According to the purport and effect, and in substance," is bad, in cases where exactness of setting forth is required.<sup>3</sup> And so is "substance and effect."<sup>4</sup>

§ 217. ATTACHING ORIGINAL PAPERS IS NOT ADEQUATE. The attaching of one of the original printed papers to the indictment, in place of inserting a copy, is not sufficient indication that the paper is set out in the very words.<sup>1</sup>

not be fatal, even when it is averred that the tenor is set out, provided the meaning be not altered by changing the word misspelled into another of a different meaning;<sup>1</sup> thus, in an indictment for forging a bill of exchange, the tenor was "value received," and the bill as produced in evidence was "value reiceved"; the question being reserved, it was held that the variance was not material, because it did not change one word into another, so as to alter the meaning.<sup>2</sup> On the same principle, where, in an

Literal correspondence between the instrument alleged to be forged and the document as set forth in hæc verba, or according to its "tenor," or "as follows" in the indictment is not necessary in order to render the instrument admissible in evidence. If the correspondence be such as to prevent the accused from being a second time put in jeopardy for the same cause should he be acquitted, it will be sufficient.—Butler v. State, 22 Ala. 48.

Insertion of word in instrument alleged to be forged as purporting to be set out in hæc verba in an indictment will not vitiate the indictment where such addition in no manner or for any purpose alters the signification of the instrument.—People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 61, 11 Pac. 493 ("pay to A. B." instead of "pay A. B."); People v. Crane, 4 Cal. App. 145, 87 Pac. 240 (word "signed" added before signature to alleged forged check); Quigley v. People, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 301 ("B. Aymor or bearer" for "B. Aymor, bearer").

Omission of word from forged instrument purporting to be set out in hæc verba in indictment, is immaterial where the omission in no manner or for any purpose alters the significance of the instrument.—People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 61, 11 Pac. 493; United States v. Mason, 12 Blatchf. C. C. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 15736 (omission of "to" from phrase "pay to the bearer").

Omission of a figure which changed the sense held to be fatal in State v. Street, 1 N. C. (Tayl.) 158, 1 Am. Dec. 589; Lee's Case, Leach 353; Cogan's Case, Leach 389.

indictment for perjury, it was assigned for perjury that the defendant swore he "understood and believed," instead of "understood," the mistake was held to be immaterial.<sup>3</sup> So "promise" for "promised" was held not a fatal variance.<sup>4</sup> The great rigor of the old English law in this respect was one of the consequences of the barbarous severity of the punishment imposed. A more humane system of punishment was followed by a more rational system of pleading.<sup>5</sup>

§ 219. UNNECESSARY DOCUMENT NEED NOT BE SET FORTH. Where the setting out of the document in an indictment can give no information in the court, it is unnecessary to set it out.<sup>1</sup>

Where the document, bank-bill or note,<sup>1</sup> or coin,<sup>2</sup> on which the indictment rests is in the defendant's possession, or is lost or destroyed, it is sufficient to aver such special facts as an excuse for the non-setting out of the document, and then to proceed, either by stating its substance, or by describing it as a document which "the said inquest can not set forth by reason," etc., of its loss, destruction, or detention, as the case may be,<sup>3</sup> giving, however, the purport of the instrument as near as may be.<sup>4</sup>

In England the position of the text is accepted as to indecent prints.—Dugdale v. R., Dears. C. C. 64.

In R. v. Bradlaugh, 38 L. T. (N. S.) 118, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 607, 14 Cox C. C. 68, it was ruled that an indictment which did not give the words of an alleged obscene libel or excuse their omission was bad. In this case it was noticed by Bramwell, J., that the American authorities excuse the non-setting forth of the libel on the grounds of its obscenity, which allegation was omitted in R. v. Bradlaugh. It will not do to say that this excuse is surplusage. An indictment which excuses the non-setting forth of a document on the ground of its loss, or of its destruction by the defendant, is good, though without such an excuse the indictment would be defective. The excuse, therefore, is essential.

When such an excuse is made, the American cases present an almost unbroken line of authority to the effect that the obscene document need not be copied (see cases footnote 2, ante).—Com. v. Tarbox, 55 Mass. (1 Cush.) 66, reaffirms the principle of Com. v. Holmes (but holds that to paste the alleged obscene matter to the indictment is a defective mode of pleading), and so does Com. v. Dejardin, 126 Mass. 46, 30 Am. Rep. 652.

On the other hand, in State v. Hanson, 23 Tex. 232, an indictment for publishing an obscene document, without giving the words, was held bad. In this case, however, there was no excuse offered, as in Com. v. Holmes, 17 Mass. 336, for not setting out the libel.

§ 223. — PROSECUTOR'S NEGLIGENCE DOES NOT ALTER THE CASE. Even where the prosecutor's negligence caused the loss, the loss will be an excuse for non-description, unless the misconduct was so gross as to imply fraud.<sup>1</sup>

§ 224. PRODUCTION OF A DOCUMENT ALLEGED TO BE "DESTROYED" IS A FATAL VARIANCE. When there is an allegation that a document is destroyed, as an excuse for its non-description, there is a fatal variance between the indictment and the proof if the destroyed instrument is produced on trial.<sup>1</sup>

§ 225. EXTRANEOUS PARTS OF DOCUMENT NEED NOT BE SET FORTH. Wherever the whole document is essential to the description of the offense, the whole must be set out in the indictment. It is otherwise, however, as to indorsements and other extraneous matter having nothing to do with the part of the document alleged to be forged.<sup>1</sup>

Com. v. Sharpless, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 91, 7 Am. Dec. 632, was the case of an indecent picture, and the Supreme Court held that it was not necessary that the picture should be copied on the indictment. The reason, however, is the same as that given in Com. v. Holmes, 17 Mass. 336—that the court must preserve the "chastity" of its records, and not permit them to be used to perpetuate obscenities. It may be added to this that if an obscene publication were to be considered as exclusively a libel, it might be difficult to resist the conclusion that as a libel when indicted as such, it should be spread on the record, supposing that no legitimate excuse be given for the non-setting out. But there is much force in the position that an obscene publication is not so much a libel as an offense against public decency; and if it be the latter, the par-ticularity required in setting forth libels is not necessary. If a mob, for instance, should gather about a religious assembly, disturbing its worship by profane and indecent language, it would not be necessary, it may well be argued, that those profane and indecent words should be set out. Nor is this the only illustration to which we may appeal. An indictment against a common scold need not set forth the words the "scold" was accustomed to use. See argument in Southern Law Rev. for 1878, p. 258.

And where, upon an indictment for forging a receipt, it appeared that the receipt was written at the foot of an account, and the indictment stated the receipt thus: "8th March, 1773. Received the contents above by me, Stephen Withers," without setting out the account at the foot of which it was written; this was ruled sufficient.<sup>2</sup> In other cases, where part only of a written instrument is included in the offense, that part alone is necessary to be set out. Thus, in cases where portions of publications are libelous and others not, it is only necessary, as is elsewhere noticed, to state those parts containing the libels; and if the libelous passages be in different parts of the publication, distinct from each other, they may be introduced thus: "In a certain part of which said libel there were and are contained the false, scandalous, malicious, and defamatory words and matter following, that is to say," etc. "And in a certain other part of which said libel there were and are contained," etc.<sup>3</sup> Where the indictment is for forging a note or bill, the indorsement, though forged, need not be set out.<sup>4</sup> And, as we have seen, it is not necessary to set forth vignettes or other embellishments, though if this be attempted a variance may be fatal.<sup>5</sup>

§ 226. FOREIGN OR INSENSIBLE DOCUMENT MUST BE EXPLAINED BY AVERMENTS. A document in a foreign language must be translated and explained by averments.<sup>1</sup> The proper course is to set out, as "of the tenor following," the original, and then to aver the translation in English to be "as follows."<sup>2</sup> And so where initials appear without averment of what they mean;<sup>3</sup> and where there is no averment of who the officer was whose name is copied in a forged instrument, there being no averment of what the instrument purports to be.<sup>4</sup>

In another volume it will be seen more fully that when "tenor" is set out, a variance is fatal;<sup>5</sup> that when the legal effect only of a document is averred, it is sufficient if the proof substantially conforms;<sup>6</sup> that when the variance is doubtful, the question is for the jury;<sup>7</sup> and that a lost or unobtainable document may be proved by parol.<sup>8</sup>

Explanation needed to show falsity may be by innuendo.—United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655, 27 L. Ed. 520, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

It was held in Pennsylvania, in 1870, that where no new essential fact is requisite to the frame of an indictment for libel, which requires to be found by the grand jury as the ground of a colloquium, and where the only object of an innuendo is to give point to the meaning of the language, it is not proper to quash the indictment on the ground that the innuendo may be supposed to carry the meaning of the language beyond the customary meaning of the word. If some of the innuendoes in an indictment for libel extend the meaning of parts too far, but there be others sufficient to give point to it, the jury may convict under the latter alone.—Com. v. Keenan, 67 Pa. St. 203. See, further, note to § 213.

"He burnt my barn," in an action on the case against a man for saying of another "He has burnt my barn," the plaintiff cannot, by way of innuendo, say, "meaning my barn full of corn" (Barham v. Nethersal, 4 Co. 20a) because this is not an explanation derived from anything which preceded it on the record, but is the statement of an extrinsic fact not previously stated. But if in the introductory part of the declaration it had been averred that the defendant had a barn full of corn, and that, in a discourse about that barn, he had spoken the above words of the plaintiff, an innuendo of its being the barn full of corn would have been good; for, by coupling the innuendo with the introductory averment, it would have made it complete.—*Archbold's C. erence to matter of inducement.<sup>2</sup> It may serve as an explanation, but not as a substitute.<sup>3</sup> Extrinsic facts, if requisite to the sense, must be averred in the introductory part of the indictment.<sup>4</sup> Thus, in an action for the words "he is a thief," the defendant's meaning in the use of the word "he" can not be explained by an innuendo "meaning the said plaintiff," or the like, unless something appear previously upon the record to ground that explanation; but if the words had previously been charged to have been spoken of and concerning the plaintiff, then such an innuendo would be correct; for when it is alleged that the defendant said of the plaintiff "he is a thief," this is an evident ground for the explanation given by the innuendo, that the plaintiff was referred to by the word "he."<sup>5</sup>

"When the language is equivocal and uncertain, or is defamatory only because of some latent meaning, or of its allusion to extrinsic facts and circumstances, then an inducement or innuendo or both are indispensable to express and render certain precisely what the libel is of which the defendant is accused."<sup>6</sup> But extrinsic facts need not be averred unless necessary to make out the

§ 228. STATUTORY DESIGNATIONS MUST BE FOLLOWED. By State as well as by federal legislation, statutes have been enacted making the larceny of bank notes, bonds, and other writings for the payment of money, highly penal. Questions constantly arise whether certain articles alleged to be stolen are included within these statutes. The adjudications are too numerous to be here detailed; and we can only, within the limits assigned to us, fall back upon the general principle that documents stolen, to bring them within the statute, must be described by the statutory terms.<sup>2</sup>

§ 229. THOUGH GENERAL DESIGNATION IS SUFFICIENT, YET IF INDICTMENT PURPORTS TO GIVE WORDS, VARIANCE IS FATAL. When a general designation of a document is all that is required, then it is ordinarily sufficient to give the statutory designation, and it is enough if this is sufficiently accurate to identify the document.<sup>1</sup> But if the pleader undertakes to give the words of the document, then a variance as to such words is at common law fatal.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, it is said that if the words are accurately given, an erroneous designation may be treated as surplusage.<sup>3</sup> Nor will the indictment be defective for want of accuracy of specification, where this specification is the best the pleader could give. This is eminently the case in prosecutions for larceny of bank bills from the person, when the bank bills have not been recovered.<sup>4</sup>

"Purporting to be" is not a necessary qualification of the designation.<sup>5</sup>

following references to rulings under statutes may be of value:

Alabama: See Wilson v. State, 1 Port. 118; Sallie v. State, 39 Ala. 691.

Connecticut: Where an information for theft described the property alleged to be stolen as "thirteen bills against the Hartford Bank, each for the payment and of the value of ten dollars, issued by such bank, being an incorporated bank, in this State," it was held that this description was sufficiently certain.—Salisbury v. State, 6 Conn. 101.

Georgia: See State v. Allen, Charlt. 518.

Maryland: In an indictment founded upon the Act of 1809, ch. 138, for stealing a bank note, it is sufficient to describe the note as a bank note, for the payment of, etc., and of the value of, etc. Nothing more is required than to charge the offense in the language of the act.—State v. Cassel, alias, Baker, 2 Har. & G. 407.

Massachusetts: An indictment under the Act of March 15, 1785, for larceny, alleging that the defendant stole "a bank note of the value of . . . , of the goods and chattels of . . . , " is sufficient, without a more particular description of the note.—Com. v. Richards, 1 Mass. 337.

"Divers bank-bills, amounting in the whole to . . . , etc., and of the value of, etc., of the goods and chattels," etc., has been held sufficient.—Larned v. Com., 53 Mass. (12 Met.) 240; Com. v. Sawtelle, 65 Mass. (11 Cush.) 142; see other cases, infra, §§ 235, 254.

"Certain moneys, to wit, divers promissory notes, current as money in said Commonwealth."—Com. v. Ashton, 125 Mass. 384; see, for other cases, infra, § 236.

"Sundry bank-bills and sundry promissory notes issued by the United States, commonly called legal tender notes, all said bills and notes together amounting to ninety dollars, and of the value of ninety dollars," is not an adequate description of the United States treasury notes.—Com. v. Cahill, 94 Mass. (12 Allen) 540.

"For the payment of money" need not be averred of a promissory note.—Com. v. Brettun, 100 Mass. 206, 97 Am. Dec. 95.

New Jersey: "Bank notes," pleaded as such, are not goods and chattels under the statute.—State v. Calvin, 22 N. J. L. (2 Zab.) 207.

New York: A contract not under seal is incorrectly described as a bond, and the error is fatal.—People v. Wiley, 3 Hill 194.

Where the indictment stated that the defendant stole "four promissory notes, commonly called bank notes, given for the sum of fifty dollars each, by the Mechanics' Bank in the city of New York, which were due and unpaid, of the value of two hundred dollars, the goods and chattels of P. C., then and there found," etc., it was held a sufficient description without saying they were the property of P. C. The word chattels denotes property and ownership.—People v. Holbrook, 13 John. 90; see, also, People v. Jackson, 8 Barb. 637.

North Carolina: In an indictment for stealing a bank note, a description of the note in the following words: "one twenty dollar bank note on the State Bank of North Carolina, of the value of twenty dollars," is good.—State v. Williamson, 6 N. C. (3 Murph.) 216; State v. Rout, 10 N. C. (3 Hawks) 618; State v. Fulford, 61 N. C. (1 Phil.) 563.

§ 230. IF DESIGNATION BE ERRONEOUS, VARIANCE IS FATAL—"PURPORTING TO BE." The pleader may aver the instrument to be of the class prohibited, or he may aver that it "purports to be," etc.; e. g., he may say that the defendant forged "a certain will," or "a certain false, etc., paper writing purporting to be the last will," etc.,<sup>1</sup> though, as has just been seen, "purporting to be" may be omitted.<sup>2</sup> At common law, however, great care is necessary in this respect, since, if the document turns out in proof not to be what the indictment declares it purports to be, the variance is fatal.<sup>3</sup> But, as has been already observed, when the tenor is correctly given, the general designation of the document may be rejected for stealing bank notes must lay them as promissory notes for the payment of money, and therefore an indictment for stealing a "ten dollar note of the President, Directors, and Company of the Bank of the United States," is bad.—Com. v. Boyer, 1 Binn. 201.

as surplusage.<sup>4</sup> In libel, it is not necessary to aver that the publication was in a newspaper.<sup>5</sup>

§ 231. "RECEIPT" INCLUDES ALL SIGNED ADMISSIONS OF PAYMENT. "Settled, Sam. Hughes," at the foot of a bill of parcels, was held to support an allegation of a receipt without any explanatory averment.<sup>1</sup> Anything that admits payment, and is signed, is enough to bring the instrument within the term "receipt."<sup>2</sup> But if the fact of payment does not either appear on the instrument or is not averred,<sup>3</sup> or the name of the receptor is wanting, or is obscure and is not helped out by averments,<sup>4</sup> the term "receipt" is not sustained.<sup>5</sup> And such explanatory matter must not only be averred, but proved.<sup>6</sup>

§ 232. "ACQUITTANCE" INCLUDES DISCHARGES FROM DUTY. Acquittance is a term used in some statutes as cumulative with receipt, and all receipts may be regarded as acquittances;<sup>1</sup> but all acquittances are not receipts, as an acquittance may consist in an instrument simply discharging another from a particular duty.<sup>2</sup>

§ 234. "PROMISSORY NOTE" USED IN A LARGER SENSE. Great liberality has been shown in the interpretation of this term when used in statutes making the forgery or larceny of "promissory notes" penal. Thus, it has been held to include bank notes,<sup>1</sup> where the statute does not specifically cover "bank notes," though it seems to be otherwise when it does;<sup>2</sup> while it does not include silver certificates.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary, in prosecutions for larceny, that the note be locally negotiable,<sup>4</sup> or be anything more than a mere due bill.<sup>5</sup> It was at one time ruled in Pennsylvania, that if a note be not averred or implied to be still due and unpaid, it will not be within the statute,<sup>6</sup> though it is enough if on the face of the paper it appears still outstanding.<sup>7</sup> And though an instrument signed by M. and payable to his order is not a promissory note until indorsed, an allegation that D., in forging the indorsement, forged the indorsement of a promissory note, may be sustained.<sup>8</sup>

§ 235. "BANK-NOTE" INCLUDES NOTES ISSUED BY BANKS. In England, in an indictment under the 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, the instrument stolen must be expressly averred to be a bank note, or a bill of exchange, or some other of the securities specified; and, therefore, it is insufficient to charge the defendant with stealing a certain note, commonly called a bank note, for none such is described in the act.<sup>1</sup> And in the case of a bank note, it is sufficient to describe it generally as a bank note of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, for the payment of one pound, etc., the property of the prosecutor; the said sum of one pound thereby secured, then being due and unsatisfied to the proprietor.<sup>2</sup> In Massachusetts, a bank note is sufficiently described as a "bank bill" in an indictment on Rev. cluded,<sup>1</sup> nor bonds and mortgages,<sup>2</sup> nor coin.<sup>3</sup> But, be this as it may, it seems that in such case the words "goods and chattels" may be discharged as surplusage, and a conviction sustained without them.<sup>4</sup> And the tendency is to embrace in the term all movables, e. g., poultry and other live stock;<sup>5</sup> and grain in a stable.<sup>6</sup> Indeed, it would seem as if whatever is subject to common law larceny should be embraced in the term unless restricted by statute.<sup>7</sup>

§ 239. "WARRANT" IS AN INSTRUMENT CALLING FOR PAYMENT OR DELIVERY. "Warrant" is now held to include any instrument calling for the payment of money or delivery of goods, on which, if genuine, a prima facie case of recovery could be made.<sup>1</sup>

A "dividend" warrant falls under this head.—R. v. Autey, Dears. &

§ 240. "ORDER" IMPLIES MANDATORY POWER. "Order" implies beyond this, a mandatory power in the drawer.<sup>1</sup>

Under statute, in some of the states, an "order" does

B. 294, 7 Cox C. C. 329; and so does a letter of credit.—R. v. Raake, 2 Moody 66; and so, distinctively, of any letters authorizing but not commanding a particular act; and this constitutes the chief differentia between warrant and order. Perhaps the only cases, therefore, to which "order" does not apply, but "warrant" does, are those in which there is a discretionary power reserved to the drawee.

An authority to a correspondent to advance funds if he thinks best, is a "warrant" but not an "order." See R. v. Williams, 2 East P. C. 581.

Warrants include also (as has been seen) instruments where the drawer assumes mandatory power; e. g., besides the cases just mentioned, post-office drafts (R. v. Gilchrist, 2 Leach 657, 2 M. C. C. 233, C. & M. 224) and bills of exchange.—R. v. Willoughby, 2 East P. C. 581.

Prima facie case is enough; and though the drawer has neither money nor goods in the drawee's hands, and there is no privity between them, yet, as the instrument could be none the less on its face the basis of a suit, it does not, from such latent defects, lose the qualities of a forgeable order. See People v. Way, 10 Cal. 336; R. v. Carte, 1 Car. & K. 741, 47 Eng. C. L. 741; R. v. Lockett, 1 Leach 110.

But a prima facie drawer and drawee are necessary; and the drawer must occupy, on the face of the instrument, the attitude of "ordering," and the drawee the relation of being "ordered." See cases just cited, and People v. Farrington, 14 John. (N. Y.) 348; R. v. Curry, 2 Moody 218; R. v. Cullen, 5 Car. & P. 116, 24 Eng. C. L. 481; R. v. Richards, R. & R. 193.

Yet that there may be cases where a drawee's name can be dispensed with is on reason clear. An order on the keeper of a prison, for instance, or on the sheriff of a county, is no less an order because the drawee's name is not given; and so we can conceive of an order by a factory treasurer on the factory storekeeper, to which the same remark would apply. As sustaining this may be cited Com. v. Butterick, 100 Mass. 12; Noakes v. People, 25 N. Y. 380; R. v. Snelling, Dears. 219, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 597; R. v. Gilchrist, 2 Moody 233.

Defectiveness, or elliptical obscurity does not destroy the forgeable character of the instrument as an "order," if it can be proved to be an order by parol. But if so, the wanting links must be supplied by special averment in the indictment. See, supra, § 226; Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 887 et seq. Yet when this is done, our courts have not been so fastidious, as appears to have been sometimes the case in England, as to require each "order" to come up to a preconceived legal stan-not mean an act imparting a right on the part of the person who is supposed to have made it, and imposing a duty upon the person to whom directed, but it may be a mere request to pay money or deliver goods to a designated person.<sup>2</sup>

dard. This, perhaps (besides our emancipation from the numbing effect on old English judges of the consciousness of the death penalty in forgery), may be attributed to the fact that in this country everybody does business in every sort of way, while in England the class is comparatively limited, and restricted to settled forms. As sustaining the American liberalization of the rule, see: ALA.—McGuire v. State, 37 Ala. 361; Jones v. State, 50 Ala. 161. CONN.—State v. Cooper, 5 Day 250. GA.—Hoskins v. "Order for money" has a well-understood meaning, and consists of a direction made to one who is indebted to the maker of the order, to pay the money owing, or a designated portion thereof, to a person named.—People v. Smith, 112 Mich. 192, 67 Am. St. Rep. 392,

Even in England a note from a merchant asking that the bearer should be permitted to test wine in London docks, is an "order" for the delivery of goods.—R. v. Illidge, 2 Car. & K. 871, 61 Eng. C. L. 871, T. & M. 127, 3 Cox C. C. 552.

A forged instrument of writing was in the following terms:

"Mr. Davis: Wen. 19th.

"pleas let the boy have $6.00 dolers for me. B. W. Earl."

It was held that such instrument is prima facie an "order for the payment of money" within the meaning of the statute.—Evans v. State, 8 Ohio St. 196, 70 Am. Dec. 98.

Many subtleties formerly existed in the English law as to the distinctions between these several designations. The following cases are generally referred to under this head: R. v. Roberts, Car. & M. 682; R. v. Williams, 2 Car. & K. 51, 61 Eng. C. L. 50; R. v. Hart, 6 Car. & P. 106, 25 Eng. C. L. 345; R. v. Dawson, 2 Den. C. C. 75, 5 Cox C. C. 220, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 589; R. v. McIntosh, 2 East P. C. 942; R. v. Anderson, 2 Moody & R. 469.

The pleader has been relieved from most of these by a more recent case (1850), where it was held that if the instrument be set out in hæc verba, a misdescription will be immaterial, at least if it fall within one of several terms used to designate it.—R. v. Williams, 2 Den. C. C. 61, 4 Cox C. C. 356, cited, supra, §§ 230, 239, 240.

The intimation was even thrown out that where the indictment sets forth the forged instrument, the court will see whether it is within the statute (when the indictment is under a statute), and if so, will sustain a conviction, although it was not specifically averred to be an instrument which the statute covered. Thus, where the indictment charged the defendant to have forged a certain warrant, order, and request, in the words and figures following, to wit: "Mr. Bevan, S— Pleas to send by bearer a quantity of basket nails," etc., the Court of Criminal Appeal, Lord Campbell presiding, sustained the conviction, apparently on the ground that if there was a technical misnomer of the instrument, this was cured by its being fully set forth, and thus speaking for itself.—R. v. Williams, 2 Den. C. C. 61, 4 Cox C. C. 356, 2 Eng. Law & Eq. 633. See other cases cited supra, §§ 230, 239.

"W. Trim, 2a.," simply, is insensible and incurable.—R. v. Ellis, 4 Cox C. C. 258.

ment, as in the case last cited, to be "a certain warrant, order, and request," the better course is to aver the uttering of one warrant, one order, and one request. But it is doubtful whether even this is not duplicity, where the words do not each describe the object,<sup>1</sup> and hence, where there is a question whether the document is an "order," or "request," or "warrant," it is safe to give to each designation a separate count.<sup>2</sup>

§ 243. DEFECTS MAY BE EXPLAINED BY AVERMENTS. If the writing, on its face, comes short of being either an order, warrant, request, or other statutory term, averment may be made, and evidence received, bringing it up to the required standard, as where the name of the party addressed is omitted;<sup>1</sup> or where the body of the writing is on its face insensible.<sup>2</sup> And where the fraudulent or illegal character of the document does not appear on its face, this must be helped out by averments.<sup>3</sup>

Innuendoes have been already discussed.<sup>4</sup>

§ 244. A "DEED" MUST BE IN WRITING UNDER SEAL PASSING A RIGHT—"BONDS." To sustain the averment of a deed, there must be a writing under seal, purporting to pass some legal right from one party to another, either mediately or immediately; and hence a power of attorney to sell stock is a deed under the statutes.<sup>1</sup> Nor is it necessary that a deed should rigorously pursue the statutory form.<sup>2</sup> Prima facie validity is enough. The averment of the "deed" need not give the grantee's name.<sup>3</sup> "Bond" includes a municipal certificate of indebtedness.<sup>4</sup>

§ 245. "OBLIGATION" IS AN UNILATERAL ENGAGEMENT. Under statutes based, as those of Louisiana, on the Roman law, an obligation is an unilateral engagement by which one party engages himself to another to do a particular thing. The English common law authorities sometimes speak as if the term is limited to bonds with penalties. But when the term is used in a statute as nomen generalissimum, it must be construed in its most liberal sense.<sup>1</sup>

§ 246. — AND SO IS "UNDERTAKING." As to "undertaking," the same remark is to be made. Where, however, either term is used to represent a subordinate species or class, then the instrument must be proved to belong to this species or class.<sup>1</sup>

B. was admitted into the holy order of deacons, according to the manner prescribed by the Church of England, and rightly and canonically ordained deacon, in testimony whereof the bishop had caused his episcopal seal to be affixed thereunto, is not the feloniously forging

§ 248. "PROPERTY" IS WHATEVER MAY BE APPROPRIATED. "Property," it needs scarcely be said, includes whatever may be appropriated to individual use. Money necessarily falls within this definition.<sup>1</sup>

§ 249. "PIECE OF PAPER" IS SUBJECT OF LARCENY. It has been sometimes the practice to aver, in larceny, the stealing of "one piece of paper, of the value of one dollar," etc., as the case may be; and it has been thought that in this way the difficulty as to setting out doubtful instruments could be avoided. How far this is the case will be considered hereafter.<sup>1</sup> A "piece of paper," it may be generally said, if of any value, is the subject of larceny.<sup>2</sup>

§ 250. "CHALLENGES" TO FIGHT NEED NOT BE SET FORTH. A written letter, if merely the inducement or introduction to an oral communication, conveying a challenge, need not be set forth. Thus, where T., in a letter to N., used expressions implying a challenge, and by a postscript referred N., the challenged party, to one H. (the bearer of the letter), if any further arrangements were necessary, it was held that the letter was only evidence of the challenge, and need not be specially pleaded; and that N. might give testimony of the conversation between H., the bearer of the letter, and himself.<sup>1</sup> Even when a statute makes sending a challenge indictable, it has been held not necessary to set out a copy of the challenge;<sup>2</sup> and if an attempt be made to set out in the indictment a copy, and it varies slightly from the original, as by the addition or omission of a letter, in no way altering the meaning, this is cured by verdict.<sup>3</sup>

IX. Words Spoken.

§ 251. WORDS SPOKEN MUST BE SET FORTH EXACTLY, THOUGH SUBSTANTIAL PROOF IS ENOUGH. Where words are the gist of the offense, they must be set forth in the indictment with the same particularity as a libel; as, for instance, in an indictment for scandalous or contemptuous words spoken to a magistrate in the execution of his office;<sup>1</sup> or for blasphemous or seditious or obscene or abusive words,<sup>2</sup> or for perjury.<sup>3</sup> It is not enough, in such case, to lay the substance of the words alleged to have been spoken. The words themselves must be laid, but only the substance need be proved.<sup>4</sup> But the meaning must be evidently and clearly the same, without the help of any implication or anything extrinsic.<sup>5</sup> Should any substantial difference exist between the words proved and those laid, even if laid as spoken in the third person and proved to have been spoken in the second,<sup>6</sup> the defendant must be acquitted. But if some of the words be proved as laid, and the words so proved amount to an indictable offense, it will be sufficient.<sup>7</sup> And when the words do not subject of an offense, they must be described specifically by the names usually appropriated to them, and the number and value of each species or particular kind of goods stated;<sup>1</sup> thus, for instance: "one coat of the value of twenty shillings; two pairs of boots, each pair of the value of thirty shillings; two pairs of shoes, each pair of the value of twelve shillings; two sheets, each of the value of thirteen shillings; of the goods and chattels of one J. S.," or "one sheep of the price of twenty shillings," etc., and the like. If the description were "twenty wethers and ewes," the indictment would be bad for uncertainty; it should state how many of each;<sup>2</sup> and so of an indictment charging the stealing of "one case of merchandise."<sup>3</sup> But an indictment charging the defendant with feloniously taking three head of cattle has been held sufficiently certain under a statute, without showing the particular species of cattle taken.<sup>4</sup>

§ 255. WHEN NOTES ARE STOLEN IN A BUNCH, DENOMINATIONS MAY BE PROXIMATELY GIVEN. When several notes are stolen in a bunch, it is rarely that the prosecutor can designate their respective amounts and values. As a matter of necessity, therefore, an indictment charging the larceny of "sundry bank bills, of some banks respectively to the jurors unknown,<sup>1</sup> of the value of $38," etc., is sufficient.<sup>2</sup> And there is even authority to the effect that it is enough to say "divers bank bills, amounting in the whole to, etc., and of the value of, etc., of the goods and chattels," etc.<sup>3</sup>

§ 256. CERTAINTY MUST BE SUCH AS TO INDIVIDUATE OFFENSE. The common acceptance of property is to govern its description, and there must be such certainty as will enable the jury to say whether the chattel proved to be stolen is the same as that upon which the indictment is founded, and will judicially show to the court that it could have been the subject-matter of the offense charged.<sup>1</sup>

A count charging manslaughter

— "LIVING" ANIMALS MUST BE INTELLIGENTLY DESCRIBED.

When animals are stolen alive, it is not necessary to state them to be alive, because the law will presume them to be so unless the contrary be stated; but if when stolen the animals were dead, that fact must be stated; for, as the law would otherwise presume them to be alive, the variance would be fatal.<sup>1</sup> But if an animal have the same appellation whether it be alive or dead, and it makes no difference as to the charge whether it were alive or on the high seas, by casting F. A. from a vessel, whose name was unknown, is sufficiently certain; and so of a count charging the offense to have been committed from a long-boat of the ship W. B., belonging, etc.—United States v. Holmes, 1 Wall. Jr. C. C. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 15383. See Com. v. Strangford, 112 Mass. 289.

"Lot of Lumber," "Parcel of Oats," "Mixtures."—In Louisiana judgment was arrested on an indictment which charged the defendant with stealing a "lot of lumber," a "certain lot of furniture," and "certain tools."—State v. Edson, 10 La. Ann. R. 229.

On the other hand, in North Carolina, a "parcel of oats" was adjudged a sufficient description of the stolen property.—State v. Brown, 12 N. C. (1 Dev.) 137, 17 Am. Dec. 562.

The reason of this distinction is, that in the first case a closer description was possible; in the second, not so. And a general description in larceny is enough. This doctrine is founded partly on the fact that the prosecutor is not considered in possession of the article stolen, and is not, therefore, enabled to give a minute description; and principally, because, notwithstanding the general description, it is made certain to the court, from the face of the indictment, that a crime has been committed, if the facts be true.—State v. Scribner, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 246.

Substances mechanically mixed should not be described in an indictment as a "certain mixture consisting of," etc., but by the names applicable to them before such mixture, though it is otherwise with regard to substances chemically mixed.—R. v. Bond, 1 Den. C. C. 517.

It has been held in Massachusetts that where brandy was feloniously drawn from a cask, and then bottled, it could not be described in the indictment as "bottles of brandy."—Com. v. Gavin, 121 Mass. 54, 23 Am. Rep. 255.

dead, it may be called, when dead, by the appellation applicable to it when alive.<sup>2</sup>

Whether a description is sufficient depends in statutory cases largely on the statute.<sup>3</sup> It has been held that "one sheep" is a sufficiently exact description;<sup>4</sup> and so is "a chestnut sorrel horse,"<sup>5</sup> and "one beef steer,"<sup>6</sup> and "one black pig, white listed, and one white pig, with a blue rump, both without ear-marks, of the value of $2."<sup>7</sup> But "a yearling" is not a sufficient description.<sup>8</sup> A "pig" four months old may be called a "hog,"<sup>9</sup> and "chickens" may be called "hens."<sup>10</sup> But "cattle" does not include "sheep" or "goats."<sup>11</sup>

When a dead animal, or part of an animal, has a distinctive name, it may be described as such. Hence an indictment charging the stealing of "one ham," of the value of ten shillings, of the goods and chattels of T. H., was held good, although it did not state the animal of which the ham had formed a part.<sup>12</sup> But an indictment for stealing "meat" is bad for generality.<sup>13</sup>

of specification depends largely on the terms of the statute.<sup>15</sup>

§ 258. WHEN CERTAIN ARTICLES ONLY OF A CLASS ARE SUBJECTS OF INDICTMENT, THEN INDIVIDUALS MUST BE DESCRIBED. Specification is necessary when certain members of a class are subjects of indictment, and certain others not. Thus, an indictment for stealing "three eggs" has been ruled to be bad, because only the eggs of animals domitæ naturæ are the subject of larceny.<sup>1</sup> But an indictment for bestiality, which described the animal as "a certain bitch," was held sufficiently certain, although the female of foxes and some other animals, as well as of dogs, are so called.<sup>2</sup> In larceny this would be bad, as the term would not indicate whether or no the animal was larcenous.<sup>3</sup> In bestiality this distinction is immaterial.

§ 259. MINERALS AND VEGETABLES MUST BE AVERRED TO BE SEVERED FROM REALTY. An indictment charging the stealing of certain "gold-bearing quartz rocks," is bad. It should appear that the rock was severed from the realty.<sup>1</sup> "A cabbage" or other vegetable must, at common law, be shown not to have been growing on the field.<sup>2</sup>

§ 260. VARIANCE IN NUMBER OR VALUE IMMATERIAL. The prosecutor is bound by the description of the species of goods stated; thus, for instance, an indictment for stealing a pair of shoes can not be supported by evidence of a larceny of a pair of boots. But a variance in the number of the articles is immaterial, provided the verdict rests on an article which is one of the number averred, and which is sufficient to sustain a conviction.<sup>1</sup> So if there be ten different species of goods enumerated, and the prosecutor prove a larceny of any one or more of a sufficient value, it will be sufficient, although he fail in his proof of the rest.<sup>2</sup> But it was held otherwise where five certificates of stock of a particular number were alleged to be stolen, and it appeared that only one certificate of that number had been issued.<sup>3</sup>

§ 261. INSTRUMENT OF INJURY MAY BE APPROXIMATELY STATED. An instrument of injury must be substantially described; though when the effect produced by the instrument averred and that used is virtually the same, a mere variance in name will not vitiate.<sup>1</sup> The question of the effect of the instrument is one of fact for the jury under the direction and supervision of the court.<sup>2</sup> Such agencies may be cumulatively laid.<sup>3</sup> Ordinarily the adoption of the statutory description is sufficient.<sup>4</sup> If the instrument be unknown, this may be so averred.<sup>5</sup>

3. Value.

§ 262. VALUE MUST BE ASSIGNED WHEN LARCENY IS CHARGED. It is necessary that some specific value should be assigned to whatever articles are charged as the sub-

§ 264. VALUE ESSENTIAL TO RESTITUTION AND ALSO TO MARK GRADES. It has been said that the object of inserting value is either to distinguish grand from petit larceny, or to enable the court to be guided as to imposing fines or restitution; and that when neither of these conditions exists (e. g., where a statute punishes horse-stealing, irrespective of value), then value need not be

§ 268. WHEN MONEY IS GIVEN TO CHANGE, AND CHANGE IS KEPT, INDICTMENT CAN NOT AVER STEALING CHANGE. It should be kept in mind, that if the indictment charges stealing a particular note or piece of coin and the evidence is that such note or coin was given to the defendant to change, who refused to return the change, the defendant, even under the statutes making such conversion larceny, can not be convicted of stealing the change; for there is a fatal variance between the description in the indictment and the proof.<sup>1</sup> But an indictment charging the larceny of the note or coin actually given to the defendant may be good.<sup>2</sup> by a mere transcript of the words of the statute depends in part upon the structure of the statute, in part upon the rules of pleading adopted by statute or otherwise, in the particular jurisdiction. On the general principles of common law pleading, it may be said that it is sufficient to frame the indictment in the words of the statute, in all cases where the statute so far individuates the offense that the offender has proper notice, from the mere adoption of the statutory terms, what the offense he is to be tried for really is. But in no other case is it sufficient to follow the words of the statute. It is no more allowable, under a statutory charge, to put the defendant upon trial without specification of the offense, than it would be under a common law charge.

Exceptions to rule: And besides this general principle, there are the following settled exceptions to the rule before us:

§ 270. CONCLUSION OF LAW NOT ENOUGH. 1. Statutes frequently make indictable common law offenses, describing them in short by their technical name, e. g., "burglary," "arson." No one would venture to say that in such cases indictments would be good charging the defendants with committing "burglary" or "arson."<sup>1</sup>

In United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. Ed. 819, it was held that where a defendant is not

2. A statute may be one of a system of statutes, from which, as a whole, a description of the offense must be picked out. Thus, a statute makes it indictable to obtain negotiable paper by false pretenses. But what are "false pretenses"? To learn this we have to go to another statute, and this statute, it may be, refers to another statute, giving the definition of terms. No one of these statutes gives an adequate description of the offense, nor can such description be taken from them in a body. It is inferred from them, not extracted from them. The same may be said of statutes making indictable the use of slanderous words. These words must be set forth.<sup>2</sup>

3. A statute on creating a new offense describes it by a popular name. It is made indictable, for instance, to obtain goods by "falsely personating" another. But no one would maintain that it is enough to charge the defendant with "falsely personating another." So far from this being the case, the indictment would not be good charged with using a still, boiler, or other vessel himself, but with causing and procuring some person to use them, the name of such person must be given in the indictment. It was further ruled that an indictment for distilling vinegar illegally must set out that the apparatus was used for that purpose, and in the premises described, and the vinegar manufactured at the time the apparatus described was being used; and further, that the averment that defendant caused and procured the apparatus to be used for distilling implies with sufficient certainty that it was so used; it is not essential that its actual use shall be set out. It was held, also, that it is not necessary, in an indictment for defrauding the revenue, to set out the particular means of the fraud.

An indictment under the Massachusetts statute, which charges the defendant with adulterating "a certain substance intended for food, to wit, one pound of confectionery," is not sufficiently descriptive of the substance alleged to have been adulterated.—Com. v. Chase, 125 Mass. 202.

Taking up animals on land other than his own land for the purpose of taking advantage of the provisions of the statute, being made a felony by statute (Cal. Stats., 1873-4, p. 50), an indictment charging the offense must state the particular provision which the person taking up the animals intended to violate.—People v. Martin, 52 Cal. 201.

unless it stated the kind of personation, and the person on whom the personation took effect.<sup>3</sup> An act of Congress, to take another illustration, makes it indictable to "make a revolt," but under this act it has been held necessary to specify what the revolt is.<sup>4</sup> "Fraud" in elections, in a Pennsylvania statute, is made indictable; but the indictment must set out what the fraud is.<sup>5</sup> It is not enough to say that the defendant "attempted" an offense, though this is all the statute says; the particulars of the attempt must be given.<sup>6</sup> "Not a qualified voter," in a statute, must be expanded in the indictment by showing in what the disqualification consists.<sup>7</sup> And "the accused must be apprised by the indictment, with reasonable certainty, of the nature of the accusation against him, to the end that he may prepare his defense, and plead the judgment as a bar to any subsequent prosecution against him. An indictment not so framed is defective, although it may follow the language of the statute."<sup>8</sup>

4. The terms of a statute may be more broad than its intent, in which case the indictment must so differentiate the offense (though this may bring it below the statutory description) as may effectuate the intention of the legislature.<sup>9</sup>

5. An offense, when against an individual, must be specified as committed on such an individual, when known, though no such condition is expressed in the statute; though it is otherwise with nuisances, and offenses against the public.<sup>10</sup>

§ 271. VARIANCE, IF INDICTMENT PROPOSES TO BUT FAILS TO SET FORTH STATUTORY WORDS. An indictment, when professing to recite a statute, is bad if the statute is not set forth correctly.<sup>1</sup> It is otherwise when the statute is counted on (or appealed to by the conclusion against the form of the statute, etc.), in which case, as is hereafter noticed, terms convertible with those in the statute may be used.<sup>2</sup>

§ 272. SPECIAL LIMITATIONS TO BE GIVEN. Where a general word is used, and afterwards more special terms, defining an offense, an indictment charging the offense must use the most special terms; and if the general word is used, though it would embrace the special term, it is inadequate.<sup>1</sup>

§ 273. PRIVATE STATUTE MUST BE GIVEN IN FULL. An indictment on a private statute must set out the statute in full.<sup>1</sup> As has been seen, it is otherwise with a public statute.<sup>2</sup>

§ 274. OFFENSE MUST BE AVERRED TO BE WITHIN LIMITATION. The indictment must show what offense has been committed, and what penalty incurred by positive averment. It is not sufficient that they appear by inference.<sup>1</sup>

§ 275. SECTION OR DESIGNATION OF STATUTE NEED NOT BE STATED. It is not necessary to indicate the particular section or even the particular statute, upon which the case rests. It is only necessary to set out in the indictment such facts as bring the case within the provisions of some statute which was in force when the act was done, and also when the indictment was found.<sup>1</sup>

§ 276. WHERE STATUTE REQUIRES TWO DEFENDANTS ONE IS NOT SUFFICIENT. Where a statute creates an offense, which from its nature requires the participation of more than one person to constitute it, a single individual can not be charged with its commission unless in connection with persons unknown.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an indictment against one individual unconnected with others, based upon that section of the Vermont statute relative to offenses against public policy which inflicts a penalty upon each indi-

§ 277. WHEN STATUTE STATES OBJECT IN PLURAL, IT MAY BE PLEADED IN SINGULAR. When, however, the object (as distinguished from the actor) of an offense is stated in the statute in the plural, then, if this be done as a description of a class, the indictment may be in the singular, designating any one of the class. Thus, in a statute prohibiting the stealing of notes, an indictment for stealing a note was sustained;<sup>1</sup> on a statute prohibiting the living in houses of ill-fame, an indictment for living in a house of ill-fame is good.<sup>2</sup>

§ 278. DISJUNCTIVE STATUTORY STATEMENTS TO BE AVERRED CONJUNCTIVELY. The general rule of law is that where the statute specifies several things disjunctively as constituting an offense, an indictment charging a commission of the offense which avers the several things in the disjunctive, is bad.<sup>1</sup> But though the language of the § 279. AT COMMON LAW DEFECTS IN STATUTORY INDICTMENTS ARE NOT CURED BY VERDICT. Defects in the description of a statutory offense will not at common law be aided by verdict,<sup>1</sup> nor will the conclusion, contra formam statuti, cure.<sup>2</sup> But if the indictment describe the offense in the words of the statute, in England, after verdict, by the operation of the 7 Geo. 4, c. 64,<sup>3</sup> it will be sufficient in all offenses created or subjected to any greater degree of punishment by any statute.<sup>4</sup> But as a rule, at common law the features of the statute must be enumerated by the indictment with rigid particularity.

§ 280. STATUTES CREATING AN OFFENSE ARE TO BE CLOSELY FOLLOWED. Where an act not before subject to punishment is declared penal, and a mode is pointed out in which it is to be prosecuted, that mode must be strictly pursued.<sup>1</sup>

As to when offense is to be regarded as statutory, see, infra, § 331.

In Pennsylvania, as it has been noticed, it is required by act of assembly, that every act must be followed strictly, and where a statutory penalty is imposed, the common law remedy is forever abrogated.—Act 21st March, 1806, § 13; 4 Smith's Laws 332; *Republica v. Where a magistrate is guilty of extortion, it has accordingly been held, the common law remedy, by indictment, is abrogated by the act of assembly giving the injured party, in such case, a qui tam action for the penalty.—Evans v. Com., 13 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 246.

Courts have shown great unwillingness to extinguish the com-

§ 283. WHEN STATUTE ASSIGNS NO PENALTY, PUNISHMENT IS AT COMMON LAW. On the other hand, as has been noticed,<sup>1</sup> where the statute both creates the offense and prescribes the penalty, the statute must be exclusively followed, and no common law penalty can be imposed. But where the statute creates the offense, but assigns no penalty, then the punishment must be by common law.<sup>2</sup>

§ 284. EXHAUSTIVE STATUTE ABSORBS COMMON LAW. Wherever a general statute, purporting to be exhaustive, is passed on a particular topic, it absorbs and vacates, on that topic, the common law.<sup>1</sup>

§ 285. STATUTORY TECHNICAL AVERMENTS TO BE INTRODUCED. Whenever a statute attaches to an offense certain technical predicates, these predicates must be used in the indictment.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in an indictment on the statute which makes it high treason to clip, round, or file any of the coin of the realm, "for wicked lucre or gain sake," it was necessary to charge the offense to have been committed for the sake of wicked lucre or gain,<sup>2</sup> otherwise it would be bad. In another case, an indictment on that part of the Black Act (now repealed) which made it felony, "wilfully and maliciously" to shoot at any person in a dwelling-house or other place, was ruled bad, because it charged the offense to have been done "unlaw-mon law remedy in many cases where a statutory penalty is created. Thus, nuisances to navigable rivers are still indictable at common law, though the Act of 23d March, 1803, points out a peculiar procedure by which the obstruction is to be abated; Com. v. Church, 1 Barr (Pa.) 107; and a common law indictment is preserved against an interference with the health of the city of Philadelphia, though the legislature has particularly committed that interest to the care of a board of health, with plenary powers to abate or indict.—Com. v. Vansickle, 1 Brightly (Pa.) 69. See Whart. Crim. Law, 9th ed., §§ 25-6.

fully and maliciously," omitting the word "wilfully";<sup>3</sup> some of the judges thought that "maliciously" included "wilfully," but the greater number held, that as wilfully and maliciously were both mentioned in the statute, as descriptive of the offense, both must be stated in the indictment.

In Pennsylvania, an indictment for arson, charging that the defendant did "feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously set fire," etc., was held to be sufficient without the word "wilfully," though "wilfully" was included in the description of the offense given in the act constituting it.<sup>4</sup>

In New Hampshire and North Carolina, the contrary view has been taken.<sup>5</sup>

In England, under Stat. 7 and 8 Geo. IV, c. 33, § 2, an indictment for feloniously, voluntarily, and maliciously setting fire to a barn, was holden bad, because the words of the statute are "unlawfully and maliciously."<sup>6</sup>

§ 286. — BUT EQUIVALENT TERMS MAY BE GIVEN. It must be remembered, in qualification of what has been heretofore stated, that as to the substance, as distinguished from the technical incidents of an offense, it is the wrongful act that the statute forbids, and that the words used by the statute in describing the act may not be the only words sufficient for this purpose. A statute may include in such description cumulative terms of aggravation for which substitutes may be found without departing from the sense of the statutory definition; or, as in the case of the Pennsylvania and cognate statutes dividing murder into two degrees, the terms used to indicate the differentia of the offense may be regarded as so far equivalents of the common law description that the common law description may be held to be proper, and the introduction of the statutory terms unnecessary.<sup>1</sup> Or, another word may be held to be so entirely convertible with one in the statute that it may be substituted without variance. In such case a deviation from the statutory terms may be sustained. We have already seen that these words, when they state a conclusion of law, are not sufficient, but that the unlawful act must be further described. We have further to add that these words, when they describe the substance, are not necessarily exclusive. Hence, where a word not in the statute is substituted in the indictment for one that is, and the word thus substituted is equivalent to the word used in the statute, or is of more extensive signification than it, and includes it, the indictment may be sufficient.<sup>2</sup> Thus, if the word "knowingly" be in the statute and the word "advisedly" be substituted for it in the indictment, the indictment may be

§ 287. WHERE A STATUTE DESCRIBES A CLASS OF ANIMALS BY A GENERAL TERM, IT IS ENOUGH TO USE THIS TERM FOR THE WHOLE CLASS: OTHERWISE NOT. We have elsewhere seen that where a statute uses a single general term, this term is to be regarded as comprehending the several species belonging to the genus; but that if it specifies each species, then the indictment must designate specifically.<sup>1</sup> Where an indictment on the repealed statutes 15 Geo. 2, c. 34, and 14 Geo. 2, c. 6, which made it felony, without benefit of clergy, to steal any cow, ox, heifer, etc., charged the defendant with stealing a cow, and in evidence it was proved to be a heifer, this was determined to be a fatal variance; for the statute having mentioned both cow and heifer, it was presumed that the words were not considered by the legislature as synonymous.<sup>2</sup> It is otherwise when "cow" is used as a nomen generalissimum.<sup>3</sup> A "ewe"<sup>4</sup> or "lamb"<sup>5</sup> may be included under the general term "sheep," when such general term

§ 288. PROVISOS AND EXCEPTIONS NOT PART OF DEFINITION NEED NOT BE STATED. "Provisos" and "exceptions," to whose consideration we next proceed, though usually coupled in this connection, are logically distinct; a "proviso" being a qualification attached to a category, an "exception," the taking of particular cases out of that category. For our present purposes, however, they may be considered together; and the first principle that meets us is that when they are not so expressed in the statute as to be incorporated in the definition of the offense, it is not necessary to state in the indictment that the defendant does not come within the exceptions, or to negative the statutory provisos.<sup>1</sup> Nor is it even necessary

"There seem to be many shadowy distinctions, the sound reason and good sense of which are not easily discoverable."—State v. Palmer, 18 Vt. 573.

Middle class of cases where exception is not in express terms introduced into enacting clause, but only by reference to a subsequent clause, or prior statute, as where the words "except as hereinafter mentioned," or words of similar import, are employed. In such cases the exception, whether the exception applies to the person or to the offense, must be negatived. Verba relata inesse videntur.—State v. Palmer, 18 Vt. 570; State v. Abbey, 20 Vt. 60, 67 Am. Dec. 754; R. v. Pratten, 6 T. R. 559.

Reason for the rule as to negativing exceptions is founded on the general principle that the indictment must contain the statement of those facts which consti-the cases thereafter accepted.<sup>2</sup> Nor, even when the enacting clause refers to the subsequent excepting clauses, does this necessarily draw such subsequent clause up into the enacting clause.<sup>3</sup> For when such exceptions embrace matters of defense, they are properly to be introduced by the defendant.<sup>4</sup> And extenuation which comes in by

The subject is closely allied to that of Burden of Proof, discussed in Whart. Crim. Ev., § 319.

In Com. v. Hart, 65 Mass. (11 Cush.) 130, 1 Benn. & H. Lead. Crim. Cas. 250, we have the following from Metcalf, J.:

"The rule of pleading a statute which contains an exception is usually expressed thus: 'If there be an exception in the enacting clause, the party pleading must show that his adversary is not within the exception; but if there be an exception in a subsequent clause or subsequent statute, that is matter of defense, and is to be shown by the other party.' The same rule is applied in pleading a private instrument of contract. If such instrument contain in it, first, a general clause, and afterwards a separate and distinct clause which has the effect of taking out of the general clause something that would otherwise be included in it, a party relying upon the general clause, in pleading, may set out that clause only, without noticing the separate and distinct clause which operates as an exception; but if the exception itself be incorporated in the general clause, then the party relying on it must, in pleading, state it way of subsequent proviso or exception need not be pleaded by the prosecution.<sup>5</sup>

§ 289. — OTHERWISE WHEN PROVISIO IS IN SAME CLAUSE.

But where a proviso adds a qualification to the enactment, so as to bring a case within it, which, but for the proviso, would be without the statute, the indictment must show the case to be within the proviso.<sup>1</sup> This is eminently the case with clauses in statutes prohibiting doing together with the exception.—Gould Pl., ch. 4, §§ 20, 21; 2 Saunders Pl. & Ev., 2d ed., 1025, 1026; Vavasour v. Ormrod, 9 Dow. & Ry. 597, 6 Barn. & C. 430, 13 Eng. C. L. 199.

"The reason of this rule is obvious, and is simply this: Unless the exception in the enacting clause of a statute, or in the general clause in a contract, is negatived in pleading the clause, no offense or no cause of action appears in the indictment or declaration, when compared with the statute or contract.—Plowden 410. But when the exception or proviso is in a subsequent substantive clause, the case provided for in the enacting or general clause may be fully stated without negativing the subsequent exception or proviso. A prima facie case is stated, and it is for the party, for whom matter of excuse is furnished by the statute or the contract, to bring it forward in his defense.

"The word 'except' is not necessary in order to constitute an exception within the rule. The words 'unless,' 'other than,' 'not being,' 'not having,' etc., have the same legal effect, and require the same form of pleading."—East P. C. 166, 167; Com. v. Maxwell, 19

Mass. (2 Pick.) 139; State v. Butler, 17 Vt. 145; Wells v. Iggulden, 5 Dow. & Ry. 19; R. v. Palmer, 1 Leach C. C., 4th ed., 102; Spieres v. Parker, 1 T. R. 141; Gill v. Scrivens, 7 T. R. 27.

But in a subsequent case the last distinction was reconsidered in the same court, it being held that an exception not in the enacting clause need not be negatived, unless necessary to the definition of the offense.—Com. v. Jennings, 121 Mass. 47, 23 Am. Rep. 249.

certain acts without a license,<sup>2</sup> and with statutes prohibiting sales to minors without consent of parents.<sup>3</sup> And where a statute forbids the doing of a particular act, without the existence of either one of two conditions, the indictment must negative the existence of both these conditions before it can be supported.<sup>4</sup>

§ 290. EXCEPTIONS IN ENACTING CLAUSE TO BE NEGATIVED.

Where exceptions are stated in the enacting clause (under which term are to be understood all parts of the statute which define the offense), unless they be mere matters of extenuation or defense, it will be necessary to negative them, in order that the description of the crime may in all respects correspond with the statute.<sup>1</sup> But it is a substantial, not an express negative, that is required.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the charge preferred, ex natura rei, as conclusively imports a negative of the exception as if such negative had been in express terms, the indictment is sufficient under the above general rule.<sup>3</sup>

Instances: Thus, where a statute imposes a penalty on the selling of spirituous liquors without a license, it is necessary to aver the want of a license in the indictment;<sup>4</sup> and such negation must squarely meet and traverse the assumption of a license of the character specified in the indictment as an excuse.<sup>5</sup> So, in an indictment under the Mississippi Act of 1830, prohibiting any person, other than Indians, from making settlements within their territory, it is necessary to aver that the defendant is not an Indian.<sup>6</sup> Again, on an indictment under the Massachusetts statute of 1791, c. 58, making it penal to entertain persons not being strangers on the Lord's day, it must appear that the parties entertained were not strangers.<sup>7</sup> So in Vermont, an indictment under the statute which prohibits the exercise on the Sabbath of any "secular business," etc., except "works of necessity and charity," must allege that the acts charged were not acts of "necessity and charity."<sup>8</sup> Even where certain persons were authorized by the legislature to erect a dam, in a certain manner, across a river which was a public highway, it was held that an indictment for causing a nuisance, by erecting the dam, must contain an averment that the dam was beyond the limits prescribed in the charter, and that it was not erected in pursuance of the act of the legislature.<sup>9</sup>

§ 291. — QUESTION IN SUCH CASE IS WHETHER STATUTE CREATES A GENERAL OR A LIMITED OFFENSE. Such are the technical tests which are usually applied to determine whether an exception or proviso is or is not to be negated in an indictment. In many cases we are told that when the exception or proviso is in the "enacting clause," it must be negated in the indictment, but it is otherwise when it is in "subsequent" clauses. This distinction has sometimes been called rude, and sometimes artificial, yet in point of fact it serves to symbolize a germinal point of discrimination. I prohibit, for instance, all sale of alcohol by a sweeping section; and in a subsequent section I except from this sales for medicinal purposes. Here the very structure of the statute shows my intent, which is to make the sale of alcohol a crime by statute, as is the exploding gunpowder in the streets a crime at common law; and hence a license in the first case need not be negatived in the indictment any more than a license in the second.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, I enact that none but licensed persons shall sell alcohol. Here I do not create a general crime, but I say that if certain persons do certain things they shall be liable to indictment; and to maintain an indictment it must be averred that the defendants were of the class named. Hence the test before us is not formal, but essential; it is practically this,—is it the scope of the statute to create a general offense, or an offense limited to a particular class of persons or conditions? In other words, is it intended to impose the stamp of criminality on an entire class of actions, or upon only such actions of that class as are committed by particular persons or in a particular way? In the latter case, the defendant must be declared to be within this class; in the former case this is not necessary. We may take as a further illustration a statute defining murder, in which statute are specified the cases in which necessity or self-defense are to be regarded as excusatory. It would make no matter, in such case, whether these excusatory cases be or be not given in the same clause with that prohibiting the general offense; in either case they need not be negatived in the indictment. The same might be said of the defense, that the person killed was an alien enemy, and that the killing was in open war. On the other hand, if the statute should say that an offense is indictable only when perpetrated on a particular class of persons, no matter how many clauses may intervene between the designation of the offense and the limitation of the object, the limitation of the object must be given in the indictment.<sup>2</sup> Of course, the question thus involved, whether a crime is general or limited as to persons, may be determined otherwise than by the structure of a statute. If it be clear that an act is only to become a crime

when executed by persons of a particular class, or under particular conditions, then this class or those conditions must be set out in the indictment, no matter in what part of the statute they may be expressed. With this view practically coincides that expressed in some of the cases cited above, that mere excusatory defense is not to be negatived in the indictment. For an excusatory defense implies a crimen generalissimum; and to a crimen generalissimum no exceptions, on the foregoing principles, need be negatived in the indictment.<sup>3</sup>

In England a statute casting on the defendant the burden of proving a license does not, by itself, relieve the prosecution from averring the want of license (R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. 284), though otherwise in Massachusetts.—Com. v. Edwards, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 187.

—The whole question depends, as the cases show, on the principle underlying the statute. Where one section of the statute imposes a penalty on selling "in violation of the provisions of this act," it has been held unnecessary to negative exceptions in subsequent sections.—Com. v. Tuttle, 66 Mass. (12 Cush.) 502; Com. v. Hill, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 682.

§ 293. — EXCEPTION IN CASES WHERE LARCENY IS INCLUDED IN BURGLARY OR EMBEZZLEMENT. Prominent exceptions to the rule before us are to be found in indictments for burglary, in which it is correct to charge the defendant with having broken into the house with intent to commit a felony, and also with having committed the felony intended;<sup>1</sup> in indictments for robbery, in which there can be averments for larceny;<sup>2</sup> and in indictments in England for embezzlements by persons intrusted with public or private property, which may charge any number of embezzlements, not exceeding three, committed within six months.<sup>3</sup> On the same principle, a count stating that the defendant broke and entered into a shop with intent to commit a larceny, and did then and there commit a larceny, is not bad for duplicity.<sup>4</sup> So when an indictment alleged that the defendant broke and entered into the dwelling-house of one person with intent to steal his goods, and having so entered, stole the goods of another person, etc., it was held there was no misjoinder.<sup>5</sup> So, also, a person may be indicted in one count for breaking and entering a building with intent to steal, and also with stealing, and may be convicted of the larceny simply.<sup>6</sup>

§ 294. — AND SO WHERE FORNICATION IS INCLUDED IN MAJOR OFFENSE. Another exception has been recognized in indictments for adultery, in which under some statutes the jury may find the defendants guilty of fornication but not guilty of adultery.<sup>1</sup> And so, on an indictment for seduction,<sup>2</sup> it is not duplicity to charge fornication.<sup>3</sup> It is not duplicity, also, to join "battery" with "rape"<sup>4</sup> or "robbery."<sup>5</sup>

§ 297. ON INDICTMENT FOR MINOR OFFENSE THERE CAN BE CONVICTION OF MINOR ONLY. Where an offense is, by law, made more highly punishable if committed upon a person of a particular class than if committed upon a person of another class, an indictment for the offense may be maintained, though it does not specify to which of the classes the injured person belongs; and upon a conviction on such an indictment, the milder punishment only will be awarded.<sup>1</sup> And although the evidence prove the major offense, if the indictment charge only the minor, the defendant can only be convicted of minor.<sup>2</sup>

§ 298. MAY BE CONVICTION OF MISDEMEANOR ON INDICTMENT FOR FELONY. At common law, for the reason that a defendant on trial for misdemeanor was entitled to certain privileges (e. g., a special jury, a copy of the indictment, and counsel) which were not allowed to a defendant on trial for a felony, the rule was that a defendant could not be convicted of a misdemeanor on an indictment for a felony. Had such a conviction been permitted, then it would have been within the power of the prosecution to deprive the defendant, in a case of misdemeanor, of these privileges, by indicting him for a felony in which the misdemeanor was inclosed. This, however, could not be tolerated, and hence rose the common law rule prohibiting a conviction of misdemeanor on an indictment for felony.<sup>1</sup> But when these privileges were allowed in felonies as well as misdemeanors, the reason for the rule failed; and the rule ceased to be regarded as peremptory.<sup>2</sup> In some jurisdictions in this country the rule has never been in force, the reason for it not existing;<sup>3</sup> in other jurisdictions the right to so convict is expressly given by statute.<sup>4</sup> are different in the nature of the wrong done, and in the facts which constitute them. Neither includes the other; and a defendant may be convicted of either without allegation or proof essential to the other. Carnal knowledge of a woman is the fact common to both; if it is with force against her will the crime is rape, and the fact that she is married is immaterial; if she is a married woman the crime is adultery, and the fact that it is by force is immaterial. That a man can not commit rape upon a married woman without also committing adultery, only shows that he commits both crimes by one act which includes all the elements of both."—Com. v. stated.<sup>1</sup> Thus, on an indictment for rape, there can be no conviction for fornication unless there be an averment that the prosecutrix was not the defendant's wife.<sup>2</sup> So there can be no conviction of an assault on an indictment for murder unless the indictment avers an assault.<sup>3</sup> The minor offense, also, must be an ingredient of the major; if simply collateral to the major, not forming part of it, there can be no conviction of such minor offense.<sup>4</sup>

§ 300. NOT DUPLICITY TO COUPLE SUCCESSIVE STATUTORY PHASES. Where a statute, as has already been observed,<sup>1</sup> makes two or more distinct acts connected with the same transaction indictable, each one of which may be considered as representing a phase in the same offense, it has in many cases been ruled they may be coupled in one count.<sup>2</sup> Thus, setting up a gaming-table, it has been said,

In a leading English case, it was ruled that, in order to convict a prisoner of a felony, not a felony primarily charged in the indictment, it is necessary that the minor felony should be substantially included in the indictment. Thus, an indictment for burglary includes an indictment for house-breaking, and generally also for larceny, and the prisoner on this may be found guilty of one or other of these felonies. But in an indictment for burglary, and for breaking and entering a house and stealing, the prisoner can not be found guilty of breaking and entering a house with intent to steal.—R. v. Reid, 2 Den. § 302. — AND SO OF CUMULATIVE OVERT ACTS AND INTENTS AND AGENCIES. Laying several overt acts in a count for high treason is not duplicity,<sup>1</sup> because the charge consists of the compassing, etc., and the overt acts are merely evidences of it; and the same as to conspiracy. A count in an indictment, charging one endeavor or conspiracy to procure the commission of two offenses, is not bad for duplicity, because the endeavor is the offense charged.<sup>2</sup> The same rule exists where assaults and other offenses with several intents are charged.<sup>3</sup> It is so, as we have seen, where forging a note and forging an indorsement are joined.<sup>4</sup> It is admissible, also, to state cumulatively several weapons by which a wound has been inflicted;<sup>5</sup> and those not proved may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>6</sup>

"Like a complaint in a civil case, which states no cause of action, a fatal defect in an indictment may be taken advantage of at any stage of the proceedings, unless the right to do so is restricted by the Penal Code. Repugnancy has been held to exist where an indictment charged the offense to have been committed in November, 1801, and in the twenty-fifth year of American independence (State v. Hendricks, 1 N. C. 532, Com. & N. Conf. Rep., § 639); charging that on the 4th day of April, 1873, being Sunday, kept open a saloon in violation of statute, the 4th being Friday (Werner v. State, 51 Ga. 426; Hoover v. State, 56 Md. 584); alleging offense to have been committed on different days (State v. Hendricks, 1 N. C. 532, Com. & N.

does not render it bad,<sup>2</sup> such as an impossible date in an immaterial part of the indictment, which may be corrected at any time when the date does not enter into the essence of the offense charged,<sup>3</sup> or it may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>4</sup> Thus, to adopt one of the old illustrations, if an indictment charge the defendant with having forged a certain writing, whereby one person was bound to another, the whole will be vicious, for it is impossible that any one can be bound by a forgery.<sup>5</sup>

A relative pronoun, also, referring with equal uncertainty to two antecedents will make the proceedings bad in arrest of judgment. But, as is elsewhere seen, every fact or circumstance laid in an indictment, which is not a necessary ingredient in the offense, may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>6</sup>

Conf. Rep., § 639); averring an impossible date (Markely v. State, 10 Mo. 291. Contra: McMath v. State, 55 Ga. 303; Jones v. State, 55 Ga. 625); fixing time of offense thirteen years before the state became such, and forty years before the enactment of the statute creating the offense (State v. O'Donnell, 81 Me. 272, 17 Atl. 66), or 800 years before date of indictment (Serpentine v. State, 2 Miss. (1 How.) 256).

<sup>2</sup> "Crushing, fracturing and breaking the skull," in an indictment charging forcibly striking and beating upon the body a named person, is not bad for repugnance, because it is not necessary to describe the part of the body upon which the injury inflicted.—State v. Ferguson, 162 Mo. 668, 63 S. W. 101.

A general verdict of guilty on an indictment for procuring a miscarriage, in which one count averred quickness and the other merely pregnancy, and one count averred the abortion of the mother and the other of the child, the Supreme Court refused to reverse on the ground of repugnancy.—Mills v. Com., 13 Pa. St. 634.

An indictment charging an assault with three weapons—a pair of tongs, a hammer, and an axe-handle—is not void for repugnancy.—State v. McDonald, 67 Mo. 13; supra, §§ 200, 261.

Disjunctive statements inadmissible has been elsewhere seen.<sup>7</sup>

Where counts are repugnant a general verdict can not be sustained;<sup>8</sup> though it is otherwise when they represent varying phases or stages of the same offense.<sup>9</sup>

XIV. Technical Averments.

§ 306. IN TREASON, "TRAITOROUSLY" MUST BE USED. In indictments for treason, the offense must be laid to have been committed traitorously; but if the treason itself be laid to have been so committed, whether it consists in levying war against the supreme authority or otherwise, it is not necessary to allege every overt act to have been traitorously committed.<sup>1</sup>

§ 307. "MALICE AFORETHOUGHT" ESSENTIAL TO MURDER. In an indictment for murder, it must be alleged that the offense was committed of the defendant's malice aforethought, words which can not be supplied by the aid of any other; and if this averment be omitted, or if the defendant be merely charged with killing and slaying the deceased, the offense will amount to no more than manslaughter.<sup>1</sup> But the want of these words in an indictment for an assault with intent to kill will not be fatal on arrest of judgment.<sup>2</sup>

Where one count charges the offense to have been committed in one county and another count charges it in another, the general rule is, that the counts are repugnant, and the indictment will be quashed on motion, or the prosecutor be compelled to elect which he will proceed on.—State v. Johnson, 50 N. C. (5 Jones) 221.

§ 308. "STRUCK" USUALLY ESSENTIAL TO WOUND. Where the death arises from any wounding, beating, or bruising, it has been said that the word "struck" is essential, and that the wound or bruise must be alleged to have been mortal.<sup>1</sup>

§ 309. "FELONIOUSLY" ESSENTIAL TO FELONY. The word "feloniously" is at common law essential to all indictments for felony, whether at common law or statutory,<sup>1</sup> although the reason for the term being purely arbitrary,<sup>2</sup> it is no longer necessary unless prescribed by statute, or unless describing a common law or statutory felony.<sup>3</sup> But in all common law felonies it is, at common law, essential. Thus, in an indictment for murder, it is at common law requisite to state as a conclusion from the facts previously averred that the said defendant, him, the said C. D., in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously did kill and murder.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held, however, that when a statute creating a felony does not use the term "feloniously," the latter term may be omitted in the indictment.—People v. Olivera, 7 Cal. 403; Jane v. Com., 60 Ky. (3 Metc.) 18.

The word "feloniously" may be sometimes dispensed with by statute, either expressly or by implication.—Butler v. State, 22 Ala. 43; Peek v. State, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 78.

<sup>2</sup> The term was originally introduced in order to exclude the offender from his clergy (R. v. Clerk, 1 Salk. 377, 91 Eng. Repr. 328), and is not essential to an indictment for manslaughter. See, as to gradual disappearance of distinction, Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, § 26.

"Feloniously" is not essential to an assault and battery with intent to kill, it has been held (Stout v. Com., 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 177;

§ 310. — WORD "FELONIOUSLY" CAN BE REJECTED AS SURPLUSAGE. We have already seen that matter which is merely surplusage is not required to be stated in an indictment.<sup>1</sup> Mere surplusage does not vitiate an indictment,<sup>2</sup> and where it occurs, if the offense is otherwise sufficiently charged,<sup>3</sup> may be stricken out<sup>4</sup> or disregarded.<sup>5</sup> Hence, if in an indictment an act be charged to have been done with a felonious intent to commit a crime, and it appears upon the face of the indictment that the crime, though perpetrated, would not have amounted to a felony, the word felonious, being repugnant to the legal import of the offense charged, may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>6</sup>

Where a count on its face is for a complete felony, however, it has been doubted whether a conviction can be had for the constituent misdemeanor. In England, the rule at common law was that such a conviction could not be had, the reason being, that if a misdemeanor be tried under an indictment for a felony, the defendant loses his right to a special jury and a copy of the bill of indictment.<sup>7</sup> In this country, though the reason fails, the principle that under an indictment for a felony there can, at common law, be no conviction for a misdemeanor, has been followed in several of the states, among others Massachusetts,<sup>8</sup> in Indiana,<sup>9</sup> in Tennessee,<sup>10</sup> in Maryland,<sup>11</sup> and in Louisiana.<sup>12</sup> In New York,<sup>13</sup> Pennsylvania,<sup>14</sup>

An indictment for arson charged that the defendants "feloniously, wilfully, and unlawfully" set fire to, burned, and consumed a certain building used as a brewery for the manufacture of beer. It was held that the indictment was defective in not alleging that the burning was malicious.—Kellenbeck v. State, 10 Md. 431, 69 Am. Dec. 166. Supra, § 285.

Where a statute makes criminal the doing of the act "wilfully and maliciously," it is not sufficient for the indictment to charge that it was done "feloniously and unlawfully," or feloniously, unlawfully and wilfully; these latter terms not being synonymous, equivalent, of the same legal import, or substantially the same as "wilfully and maliciously."—State v. Gove, 34 N. H. 510; though see,

§ 312. "RAVISH" AND "FORCIBLY" ARE ESSENTIAL TO RAPE. In indictments of rape, the words "feloniously ravished" are essential, and the word "rapuit" is not supplied by the words "carnaliter cognovit";<sup>1</sup> and it seems that the latter words are also essential in indictments,<sup>2</sup> though the contrary has been ruled in the case of an appeal.<sup>3</sup>

The usual course in an indictment for rape is to aver that it was committed forcibly, and against the will of the female, and therefore it would not be safe to omit the averment,<sup>4</sup> though in Pennsylvania the omission was held not to be fatal, in a case where ravish and carnally know were introduced.<sup>5</sup>

In an indictment for an unnatural crime, the descriptive words of the statute taking<sup>6</sup> away clergy, must be used; and it is not sufficient to say contra naturæ ordinem rem habuit veneream et carnaliter cognovit.<sup>7</sup>

actually perpetrated, must also be stated in technical terms.<sup>2</sup> But "burglariously" is not necessarily in statutory housebreaking.<sup>3</sup>

§ 315. "TAKE AND CARRY AWAY" ESSENTIAL TO LARCENY. In larceny, the words feloniously took and carried away the goods,<sup>1</sup> or took and led away the cattle, are essential. "The property of" is also essential.<sup>2</sup> These terms are also requisite in statutory indictments for embezzlement.<sup>3</sup>

§ 316. "VIOLENTLY AND AGAINST THE WILL," ESSENTIAL TO ROBBERY. In an indictment for robbery from the person, the words feloniously, violently,<sup>1</sup> and against the will, are essential; and it is usual, though it is said to be unnecessary, to allege a putting in fear.<sup>2</sup>

§ 317. "PIRATICAL" ESSENTIAL TO PIRACY. Piracy must be alleged to have been done feloniously and piratically.<sup>1</sup>

§ 318. "UNLAWFULLY," AND OTHER AGGRAVATIVE TERMS, NOT ESSENTIAL. The phrase "unlawful" is in no case essential, unless it be a part of the description of the offense as defined by some statute; for if the fact, as stated, be illegal, it would be superfluous to allege it, to be unlawful; if the facts stated be legal, the word unlawful can not render it indictable.<sup>1</sup> The same observation is applicable to the terms "wrongfully," "unjustly," "wickedly," "wilfully," "corruptly," to "the evil example," "falsely," "maliciously," "fraudulently," and such like.<sup>2</sup> Thus, though it is usual to allege that the party falsely forged and counterfeited, it is enough to allege that he forged, because the word implies a false making. In indictment for libels, it is sufficient either to use the word falsely or maliciously,<sup>3</sup> or an equivalent epithet. But when either of these terms is part of the essential definition of the offense, it can not be dropped.<sup>4</sup> And this is eminently the case when the term is part of a statutory definition.<sup>5</sup>

§ 319. "FORCIBLY" AND "WITH A STRONG HAND" ESSENTIAL TO FORCIBLE ENTRY. In forcible entry, at common law, the defendants must be charged with having used such a degree of force as amounts to a breach of the peace.<sup>1</sup> The words, "with strong hand," are indispensable. But it is sufficient in such an indictment to aver, that the defendants unlawfully and with a strong hand entered into the prosecutor's mills, etc., and expelled him from the possession thereof.<sup>2</sup> In rape, also, "forcibly" is in most jurisdictions essential.<sup>3</sup>

§ 320. — "VI ET ARMIS" NOT ESSENTIAL. The practice still exists of introducing, in indictments for forcible injuries, the technical words, vi et armis; but by the stat. 37 H. 8, c. 8, it is enacted that "inquisitions or indictments lacking the words vi et armis, viz., baculis, cultellis, arcubus, et sagittis, or any such like words, shall be taken, deemed, and adjudged, to all intents and purposes, to be good and effectual in law, as the same inquisitions and indictments having the same words were theretofore taken, deemed, and adjudged to be." These words are therefore superfluous, even where the crime is of a forcible nature, and were unnecessary at common law, where the injury was not forcible.<sup>1</sup> And in case of murder, the force at common law is implied from the very nature of the offense.<sup>2</sup> The stat. 37 H. 8, c. 8, is in force in Pennsylvania,<sup>3</sup> in New Hampshire,<sup>4</sup> in Vermont,<sup>5</sup> in Massachusetts,<sup>6</sup> in North Carolina,<sup>7</sup> in Tennessee,<sup>8</sup> in

§ 321. “KNOWINGLY” ALWAYS PRUDENT. “Knowingly” is one of the expletives which, when fraud is charged, it may be useful to insert.<sup>1</sup> For although it may be discharged as surplusage if unnecessary, it may be sometimes employed to help out an otherwise defective allegation of guilty knowledge.<sup>2</sup>

XV. Clerical Errors.

§ 322. VERBAL INACCURACIES NOT AFFECTING SENSE, NOT FATAL. It has been well said that formerly, in England, the judges felt themselves constrained to adhere so strictly to form that public justice was in many cases evaded, and the most dangerous malefactors let loose upon society, in consequence of the omission of some senseless and unmeaning form. The failure on the part of the prosecution to dot an i,<sup>1</sup> or cross a t, or something equally absurd, was considered sufficiently fatal to vitiate the whole proceedings. Substance was sacrificed to form, or rather form became substance, and substance mere form. A more correct and just appreciation of criminal justice has banished from English courts these legal absurdities, which answered no other purpose than to protect and screen the guilty from the just punishment of their crimes.<sup>2</sup> A like condition prevailed in the American courts to too great an extent, but has been, or is being, remedied by statutory enactments and reformed rules of practice.

Bad or awkward writing does not vitiate an otherwise good indictment, and constitutes no ground for a motion to quash.<sup>3</sup> Thus the fact that the name "Coats" looks like "Coots,"<sup>4</sup> or the time of the offense "ten" looks like "toe,"<sup>5</sup> will not vitiate the indictment or render it subject to motion to quash.

Mere clerical errors in an indictment otherwise good do not necessarily vitiate it,<sup>6</sup> and will not do so except in those cases in which the word is changed into one of a different import,<sup>7</sup> or into one which so obscures the sense that a person of ordinary intelligence can not with certainty ascertain the meaning,<sup>8</sup> and a defendant will not be permitted to take advantage of a mere clerical error which is corrected by the necessary intendments of the indictment.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>4</sup> When standing alone, but the "a" in the name being the replica of 14 other "a"s in the indictment, held not open to the objection of variance.—Lewis v. State, 55 Tex. Cr. Rep. 167, 115 S. W. 577.

"An" for "the," in an indictment for perjury, was held immaterial.—People v. Warner, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 271.

"And" for "of" in the clause alleging ownership, will not vitiate an indictment for larceny.—State

v. Perry, 94 Ark. 215, 126 S. W. 717.

— Instances: Thus, it has been held that an indictment will not be rendered bad by writing, inadvertently, “aganist” for “against,”<sup>10</sup> “cash” for “case,”<sup>11</sup> “clerk” for “court,”<sup>12</sup> “fifty-too” for “fifty-two,”<sup>13</sup> “frunk” for “drunk,”<sup>14</sup> “make” for “marke,”<sup>15</sup> masculine for a feminine pronoun,<sup>16</sup> “May” for “November,”<sup>17</sup> “monet” for “money,”<sup>18</sup> “Pittis” for “Petitis,”<sup>19</sup> “respectfully” for “respectively,”<sup>20</sup> “stael” for “steal,”<sup>21</sup> “Tebruary” for “February,”<sup>22</sup> “therefore” for “theretofore,”<sup>23</sup> and the like.

<sup>24</sup> “An” omitted before “unmarried” in a charge of having carnal knowledge of a female.—State v. Perrigan, 258 Mo. 233, 167 S. W. 573.

“Did” omitted does not vitiate (Krueger v. People, 141 Ill. App. 510, affirmed People v. Krueger, 237 Ill. 357, 86 N. E. 617). Thus, “did” omitted in an indictment for selling spirituous liquors by the small measure, when the auxiliary did should have joined the words “sell” and “dispose of,” is immaterial.—State v. Edwards, 19 Mo. 674; State v. Whitney, 15 Vt. 298. See, post, § 324. See, also, the text and authorities in the following paragraph treating of “Ungrammatical Indictment.”

However, an indictment which charged that the defendant “felotrue in those instances in which the omission is readily supplied by the context and the intendment of the instrument considered as a whole, does not impair the charge, or lead to confusion or uncertainty. Omission of letters,<sup>25</sup> niously utter and publish, dispose and pass," etc., etc., omitting the word "did" before utter, etc., the court arrested the judgment on the ground of uncertainty, no charge being made that the prisoner did the act.—State v. Halder, 2 McC. (S. C.) 377, 13 Am. Dec. 738. See State v. Hutchinson, 26 Tex. 111; State v. Daugherty, 30 Tex. 360; State v. Earp, 41 Tex. 487; Koontz v. State, 41 Tex. 570.

"Last" omitted between the words "year" and "aforesaid."—State v. Coleman, 8 Rich. (S. C.) 237.

"With" omitted after "defendant," in an indictment for murder, from the clause, "defendant, a certain pistol then and there charged with," not defective.—State v. West, 202 Mo. 128, 100 S. W. 478. See State v. Long, 201 Mo. 664, 100 S. W. 587.

In a bill of indictment with three counts, if in the third count it is omitted to be stated that the grand jury, "on their oath," present (the first two counts being regular in that respect), the objection is obviated by the fact that the record states that the grand jury was sworn in open court.—*Huffman v. <sup>25</sup> "Apprpriate" for "appropriate," does not affect validity of indictment for theft.—Hawkins v. State, 64 Tex. Cr. App. 480, 142 S. W. 917.

"Assalt" for "assault."—State v. Crane, 4 Wis. 400.

"Canally" for "carnally," in an indictment for incest, sufficient under statute.—Bailey v. State, 63 Tex. Cr. Rep. 534, 141 S. W. 224.

"Chil" for "child," in the phrase "female chil under 11 years of age," is not misleading, and sufficient.—State v. Griffin, 249 Mo. 624, 155 S. W. 432.

"Di" for "did."—Holland v. State, (Ala. App.) 66 So. 126, certiorari denied in Ex parte Holland, 191 Ala. 662, 66 So. 1008.

"Fertilize" for "fertilizer," in charging larceny of a pistol from the warehouse of a certain fertilizer company.—Kirk v. State, 13 Ala. App. 316, 69 So. 350.

"Gran" for "grand" jurors, in second count of indictment, word correctly spelled in first count, does not affect validity of indictment.—Gardner v. State, 56 Tex. Cr. Rep. 594, 120 S. W. 895.

"Inten" for "intent" does not vitiate indictment for assault with intent to murder.—Stinson v. State, 76 Tex. Cr. App. 169, 173 S. W. 1039.

"Make" for "marke."—State v. Davis, 23 N. C. (1 Ired.) 125, 35 Am. Dec. 735.

"On" instead of "one," in allegation of marriage, in indictment for bigamy.—Witt v. State, 5 Ala. App. 137, 59 So. 715.

"Secret" for "secrete," sufficient in indictment charging statutory offense against officer receiving public moneys.—Ferrell v. State, (Tex. Cr. Rep.) 152 S. W. 901.

"Stal" for "steal," in indictment for larceny.—Wills v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 457.

"Statement" for "statements," in or even of syllables,<sup>28</sup> does not vitiate. Thus, omission of a letter in the prisoner's name, in the title of a bill by the grand jury, is not a ground for a motion in arrest of judgment, as the prisoner had pleaded to it, and had been convicted upon it, especially where the name is properly stated in the body of the bill of the indictment itself.<sup>27</sup>

Misspelled word or words do not vitiate an indictment unless the meaning is thereby obscured or changed;<sup>28</sup> where it is evident what word was intended to be used,<sup>29</sup> and especially where the intended word and the word as spelled have the same sound when pronounced,<sup>30</sup> in which case the rule of idem sonans applies.<sup>31</sup> And this is true even though the word misspelled is a material word.<sup>32</sup> —Instances: Thus it has been held that the indictment is not affected by the spelling of "aforethough" for an indictment for perjury charging false swearing on two separate instances.—Freeman v. State, 44 Tex. Cr. Rep. 486, 72 S. W. 1001.

"Stree" for "street," in indictment for disturbing peace.—Hart v. State, 69 Tex. Cr. Rep. 417, 154 S. W. 553.

"t" omitted in the required clause "against the peace and dignity of the state," being manifestly a mere clerical error, will not vitiate an indictment.—State v. Duvenick, 237 Mo. 185, 140 S. W. 185; Hudson v. State, 10 Tex. App. 215.

Strict grammatical rules should not be enforced in court proceedings any more than in private and ordinary transactions.<sup>72</sup> Thus, it has been held that the relative pronoun must be referred to that antecedent which the principles of law and the tenor of the instrument require, even though in violation of the rules of syntax,<sup>73</sup> and even the use of the singular "it" for "them," in an indictment for stealing hogs does not invalidate it, the meaning being clear.<sup>74</sup> The same is true regarding the misuse of "ad" and "have,"<sup>75</sup> and "shoot and discharge" for "shooting and discharging," in an indictment for murder, it being a mere grammatical error.<sup>76</sup> The same is true regarding the phrase "with intent to injure and

"It," in indictment for stealing "hogs" with intent to deprive owner of their value "and appropriate said hogs to his own use," is not open to the objection that the word "it" should be used instead of "hogs," as referring to the value and not to the animals stolen.—Pate v. State, 47 Tex. Cr. Rep. 373, 83 S. W. 695.

Same rule applies in perjury indictment where the pleader in declaring on the falsity in two instances of alleged perjury inadvertently uses "it" for "them" (Hollis v. State, (Tex. Cr. Rep.) 69 S. § 323. QUESTIONS AS TO ABBREVIATIONS. Words written at length are not only more certain, but less liable to alteration, than figures; and, therefore, when the year and day of the month are inserted in any part of an indictment, they are more properly inserted in words written at length than in Arabic characters, but a contrary practice will not vitiate an indictment.<sup>1</sup> The terms anno domini, in an information or bill of indictment, are equivalent to the year of our Lord. good, and so is the want of either.<sup>2</sup> But some signs ("A. D.,"<sup>3</sup> or "in the year") must appear to show what the figures mean.<sup>4</sup> Hence it is not fatal that the date, instead of being written in full, is abbreviated, as A. D. 1830, if the figures are plainly legible.<sup>5</sup> And where a bill was found on the 2d of January, 1839, and the indorsement of the plea of not guilty was dated as of the 2d of January, 1838, this was held to be a mere clerical error, and amendable.<sup>6</sup> But when a written instrument in figures is copied, the figures are to be given.<sup>7</sup>

§ 324. OMISSION OF FORMAL WORDS MAY NOT BE FATAL. Where an indictment commenced, "the grand jurors within and the body of the county," etc., it was held, that the omission of the word "for" was not fatal.<sup>1</sup> And so of the omission of the word "present," in the commencement.<sup>2</sup> It is otherwise as to dropping an essential word; e. g., "did."<sup>3</sup>

§ 325. SIGNS CAN NOT BE SUBSTITUTED FOR WORDS. Mere signs, however, can not be substituted for words. Thus in Vermont under the statute requiring indictments to be in English, it was held bad on demurrer for an indictment to use the mathematical signs ( $^{\circ}$  '), in place of "degrees" and "minutes."<sup>1</sup> Where the substitution is purely arbitrary this holds good at common law.<sup>2</sup> And scientific abbreviations can not be used without explanation.<sup>3</sup>

§ 326. ERASURES AND INTERLINEATIONS ARE NOT FATAL. Erasures and interlineations in the body of an indictment will be presumed to have been made before the indictment was found and presented by the grand jury;<sup>1</sup>

It is not a fatal objection to an indictment that the name of a grand juror in the caption does not correspond with his name in the panel, nor that the indictment is stated as found upon the oaths, instead of the oath, of the inquest.—State v. Dayton, 23 N. J. L. (3 Zab.) 49, 53 Am. Dec. 270. Supra, § 92.

It was held, that it was error for the court to render sentence on the seventh and eighth counts of the indictment as found.—Woodford v. State, 1 Ohio St. 427.

Court will presume indictment with interlineations is exactly as and especially is this true when the interlineations are in the same handwriting and with the same colored ink as the body of the indictment,<sup>2</sup>—although a different colored ink and a different handwriting will not vitiate,<sup>3</sup>—where such erasures and interlineations are not contrary to the probable intendment and meaning of the indictment as it originally stood, but have a tendency to make the meaning more clear, the wording more definite, and the instrument accurate,<sup>4</sup> even though the interpolated word or words have the effect to change the nature of the offense charged and the degree of the punishment that may be inflicted—e. g., change a charge of manslaughter to one of murder.<sup>5</sup>

Pencil interlineations and corrections or additions of a letter or letters, before the indictment is found and returned by the grand jury, does not vitiate the indictment, and particularly so when the letter or letters added make no difference in the sense, sound or effect of the word to which joined.<sup>6</sup>

Blanks filled in in pencil, after the return of the indictment by the attorney prosecuting for the people, not as alterations but as a guide to himself, may be erased by order of the court.—Boslock v. State, 61 Ga. 635.

On motion in arrest of judgment, erasures and interlineations do not vitiate an indictment otherwise legible,<sup>7</sup> and interlineations may be read so as to make sense without regard to the caret,<sup>8</sup> though the caret will ordinarily be regarded as decisive of the point of introduction.<sup>9</sup>

On motion to quash defects of this kind may be sufficient for affirmative action of the court, although not fatal in motion in arrest of judgment.<sup>10</sup>

§ 327. TEARING OR DEFACING NOT NECESSARILY FATAL—LOST INDICTMENT. That an indictment has been defaced, or even torn into separate parts, does not affect its validity, if the record be preserved in a legible state,<sup>1</sup> and the question of legibility is for the court.<sup>2</sup>

Lost or destroyed indictment, at common law—there are authorities holding—may be prosecuted, after plea, when it is not practical to find a new bill, on parol proof of its contents, or by copy. § 328. PENCIL WRITING MAY BE SUFFICIENT. It is seen in another work<sup>1</sup> that a pencil writing may be a valid document, even under the statute of frauds. Objectionable as this mode of writing may be, and strong as may be the reason for quashing an indictment written in pencil in such a way as to be uncertain, it can not be said that after the jury has passed on the indictment, the fact that it is in whole or in part in pencil is ground for a motion in arrest. "Pencil" writing, in fact, it may be difficult to distinguish from "ink" writing. Some pencils write with what is virtually condensed ink. Some ink may be as pale and evanescent as the lead commonly used in pencils.<sup>2</sup>

XVI. Conclusion of Indictments.

State constitution, in most of the states of the Union, contains a provision requiring that all indictments shall conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state" or a similar phrase, and when so providing an indictment must so conclude,<sup>2</sup> with the possible exception above noted.<sup>3</sup> In the several states the conclusion is sometimes prescribed by statute, sometimes by constitution.<sup>4</sup> As a

In Arkansas, the omission of the words “contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided,” does not vitiate the indictment under the Code (Dig., ch. 52, § 98), though the offense be created by statute.—State v. Cadle, 19 Ark. 613.

In Kentucky, by the Code, an indictment is sufficient if it show intelligibly the offense intended to be charged, and need not conclude “against the form of the statute.”—Com. v. Kennedy, 54 Ky. (15 B. Mon.) 531.

In Massachusetts, a conclusion “against the peace and the statute,” is good.—Com. v. Caldwell, 14 Mass. 330.

Though in the same state it was held insufficient to charge the offense as committed against the law in such case made and provided.—Com. v. Stockbridge, 11 Mass. 279.

In the United States courts, a conclusion “contrary to the true intent and meaning of the act of Congress, in such case made and provided,” has been held sufficient.—United States v. La Costa, 2 Mas. C. C. 129, Fed. Cas. No. 15548; United States v. Smith, 2 Mas. C. C. 143, Fed. Cas. No. 16338.

Last averment of an indictment of a former conviction, does not constitute any objection to giving the indictment the ordinary conclusion.<sup>4</sup>

§ 332. — SUCH CONCLUSION DOES NOT CURE DEFECTS. An indictment in which the statute is defectively set forth is not cured by a statutory conclusion.<sup>1</sup>

§ 333. CONCLUSION NEED NOT BE IN PLURAL. Where the offense is governed or limited by two statutes, there have been various distinctions taken respecting the conclusion against the form of the statutes in the plural or the statute in the singular. The rule given by the older writers is, that where an offense is prohibited by several independent statutes, it was necessary to conclude in the plural; but now the better opinion seems to be, that a conclusion in the singular will suffice.<sup>1</sup> The common practice now is to conclude in the singular in all cases, Compare: United States v. Crittenden, Hempst. C. C. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 14980a.

Indictment charging A. with having committed an offense, made such by a statute, "in contempt of the laws of the United States of America," is bad.—United States v. Andrews, 2 Paine C. C. 451, Fed. Cas. No. 14455.

The proper office of the conclusion, contra formam statuti, is to show the court the action is founded on the statute, and is not an action at common law.—Crain v. State, 10 Tenn. (2 Yerg.) 390.

One count concluding "contra formam," etc., does not cure another without the proper conclusion.—State v. Soule, 20 Me. 19.

Though there is but one statute prohibiting an offense, it is not fatal for the indictment to conclude contrary to the "statutes."<sup>4</sup>

XVII. Joinder of Offenses.

§ 335. COUNTS FOR OFFENSES OF THE SAME CHARACTER AND THE SAME MODE OF TRIAL, MAY BE JOINED. A defendant, as has been already seen, can not generally be charged with two distinct offenses in a single count. It is otherwise, however, when we approach the question of the introduction of a series of distinct counts. Offenses, it is held, though differing from each other, and varying in the punishments authorized to be inflicted for their perpetration, and though committed at different times, may be included in the same indictment, and the accused tried upon the several charges at the same time, provided that the offenses be of the same general character, and provided the mode of trial is the same.<sup>1</sup> In misdemeanors, the joinder of several offenses will not vitiate the surplusage.—State v. Gore, 34 N. H. 510.

It is a prosecution in the king's name for the offense charged, and not in the nature of an action, where a person injured is to recover separate damages."<sup>3</sup>

So, by Judge Woodbury, it was ruled, that if there be two counts in one indictment for offenses committed at the same time and place, and of the same class, but different in degree, as one for a revolt, and another for an attempt to excite it, the judgment will not be arrested, though a verdict of guilty be returned on both.<sup>9</sup>

In New York, when by statute an offense comprises different degrees, an indictment may contain counts for the different degrees of the same offense, or for any of such degrees.—Rev. Stat., part iv, ch. 11, tit. 3, art. 2, § 51.

Under United States Revised Statutes, § 1024 (2 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., p. 337, 2 id., 2d ed., p. 676), separate offenses of the same class growing out of the same transaction may be united.—United States v. Jones, 69 Fed. 973; Anderson v. Moyer, 193 Fed. 499.

—Joinder of conspiracy and murder not authorized by this provision unless it appears upon the face of the indictment that the counts refer to the same act or transaction, or that they are acts or transactions connected together.—United States v. Scott, 4 Blas. C. C. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 16241; United States v. Durkee, Hoff. Op. 535, Fed. Cas. No. 15008.

Burglary and larceny may be joined. Where an indictment charges in one count a breaking and entering of a building, with intent to steal, and in another count, a stealing in the same building on the same day, and the defendant is found guilty generally, the sentence, whether that which is proper for burglary only, or for burglary and larceny also, can not be reversed on error, because the record does not show whether one offense only, or two were proved on the trial; and as this must be known by the judge who tried the case, the sentence will be presumed to have been according to the law that was applicable to the facts proved.—Crowley v. Com., 52 Mass. (11 Met.) 575; Kite v. Com., 52 Mass. (11 Met.) 581; Com. v. Birdsall, 69 Pa. St. 482, 8 Am. Rep. 283; People v. Garnett, 29 Cal. 622.

§ 342. JOINDER OF DIFFERENT OFFENSES NO GROUND FOR ERROR. It was formerly held, that if the legal judgment on each count would be materially different, as in felony and misdemeanor, then the joinder of several counts would be bad on demurrer, in arrest of judgment, or on error,<sup>1</sup> though this objection could be cured at the trial by taking a verdict on the counts only that can be joined.<sup>2</sup> At present, after a general verdict of guilty, it is considered no objection to an indictment, on motion in arrest, that offenses of different grades and requiring different punishments are charged in the different counts.<sup>3</sup> If any one of the counts is sufficient, the court, it has been argued, will render judgment upon such count; and if all the counts are sufficient, judgment will be rendered on the count charging the highest offense.<sup>4</sup> There is also high authority, to be hereafter noticed, to the effect that when there is a verdict of guilty on each of a series of counts, there may be a specific sentence imposed on each,<sup>5</sup> though it is otherwise in respect to counts which are defective.<sup>6</sup>

So far as concerns the jury, on the trial of an indictment charging distinct offenses in separate counts, the better course is to pass upon each count separately, applying to it the evidence bearing on the question of the defendant's guilt of the offense therein charged.<sup>7</sup> At the same time, where two counts are for successive stages of the same crime, the practice is to take a general verdict, which carries the greater offense; or where good and bad counts are joined, a verdict on the good counts.<sup>8</sup>

dence against one of them as to the libel, an election was required.<sup>11</sup> The defendant is entitled to an acquittal on the abandoned counts if there be no nolle prosequi as to them.<sup>12</sup>

§ 344. — OBJECT OF ELECTION IS TO REDUCE TO A SINGLE ISSUE. Abandoning the artificial and now in most jurisdictions obsolete distinction between felonies and misdemeanors, we may hold, therefore, summing up what has been already said, the following conclusions:

1. Cognate offenses may be joined in separate counts in the same indictment.

2. If this is done in such a way as to oppress the defendant, the remedy is a motion to quash.

3. It is permissible, in most States, to join several distinct offenses, to each of which fine or imprisonment is attachable; and upon a conviction on each count, to impose a sentence on each.<sup>1</sup>

4. Yet as to offenses of high grade in all States, and in some States as to all offenses, the court will not permit more than a single issue to go to the jury, and hence will require an election on the close of the prosecution's case,<sup>2</sup> except in those cases in which offenses are so blended that it is eminently for the jury to determine which count it is that the evidence fits.<sup>3</sup>

The object of the rule, it may be added, is, first, to enable the defendant to prepare properly for his defense; and, secondly, to protect him, by an individualization of the issue, in case a second prosecution is brought against him. On the other hand, we must remember that there are a series of minor offenses in which a joinder is a benefit to the defendant, even though he should be convicted on each count, as he is thus saved from an accumulation of costs that might have a crushing effect. There are numerous lines of cases in which, where separate indictments are introduced to cover a series of simultaneous or closely consecutive offenses (e. g., as in the cases of the famous tea suits before Judge Washington, in which a separate libel was brought for each of a thousand chests of tea alleged to have been smuggled), the court will require, in order to save the defendant from unnecessary vexation, if not ruin, that the cases be consolidated.<sup>4</sup>

§ 346. ELECTION MAY BE AT ANY TIME BEFORE VERDICT. The general rule is that where the indictment shows on its face that an election is proper, the motion to compel such election should be made at the time the indictment is read to the jury.<sup>1</sup> But in as much as the repugnancy may not appear until the evidence is developed, it is not in such a case just to compel an election until the prosecutor knows what to elect. Hence, when necessary to justice, the motion has been held to be in time where made before verdict.<sup>2</sup> To elect a count is virtually to withdraw the others from the consideration of the jury;<sup>3</sup> though ordinarily the motion should be made before the defendant opens his case.<sup>4</sup>

In Iowa it has been said that when the repugnancy is of record, the time for an application to compel election is before plea; that if the defendant has pleaded not guilty, he should be allowed to withdraw his plea in order to make a demand for such an election; but that there is no inconsistency in permitting him to require such an election while his plea of not guilty is still pending,<sup>5</sup> because where that plea is made to the whole indictment, it will still be good as to such charge as remains after an election is made.<sup>6</sup>

After verdict, the course is not to elect a particular count, but to enter a nolle prosequi as to those on which judgment is not asked.<sup>7</sup>

At any time before verdict it is within the power of the prosecution to make the election, though this should ordinarily be done before summing up.<sup>8</sup>

Reason for the rule is thus excellently stated by Chief Justice Shaw:

"To a person unskilled and unpracticed in legal proceedings, it may seem strange that several modes of death, inconsistent with each other, should be stated in the same document; but it is often necessary, and the reason for it, when explained, will be obvious. The indictment is but the charge or accusation made by the grand jury, with as much certainty and precision as the evidence before them will warrant. They may be well satisfied that the homicide was committed, and yet the evidence before them leave it somewhat doubtful as to the mode of death; but, in order to meet the evidence as it may finally appear, they are very properly allowed to set out the mode in different counts; and then if any one of them is proved, supposing it to be also legally formal, it is sufficient to support the indictment. Take the instance of a murder at sea: a man is struck down, lies some time on the deck insensible, and in that condition is thrown overboard. The evidence proves the certainty of a homicide, by the blow or by the drowning, but leaves it uncertain by which. That would be a fit case for several counts, charging a death by a blow, and a death by drowning, and perhaps a third, alleging a death by the joint result of both causes combined."—Bemis's Webster Case, 471; Webster Case, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 533; Pettes v. Com., 126 Mass. 245. See, also, State v. Johnson, 10 La. Ann. 456; United States v. Furlong, 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) 184, 5 L. Ed. 64.

Rule in England: How generally the same practice exists in England may appear from the very pertinent inquiry of Alderson, B., in a recent case: "Why may there not be as many counts for receiving as there are for stealing—one for each? It is really only one offense, laying the property in different persons. It is

Hence a verdict of guilty on four counts, charging the murder to have been committed with a knife, a dagger, a dirk, and a dirk-knife, is not double or repugnant, since the same kind of death is charged in all the counts.<sup>6</sup>

§ 348. TWO COUNTS PRECISELY ALIKE DEFECTIVE. As both in civil and criminal pleading two counts charging the same thing would be bad on special demurrer for duplicity—though the fault in civil pleading is cured by plead-one stealing, and one receiving; and because there was some doubt as to the person to whom the property really belonged, the property is laid five different ways. If a late learned judge had drawn the indictment, you would very likely had it laid in fifty more."—R. v. Beeton, 2 Car. & K. 961, 61 Eng. C. L. 960.

To same effect, see People v. Thompson, 28 Cal. 214; Beasley v. People, 89 Ill. 571.

—"In R. v. Silleem (2 H. & C. 431), an information (which might have been an indictment) charged certain persons in substance with having equipped for the Confederate States, then at war with the United States, a ship called the Alexandra. The information was framed upon 59 Geo. 3, ch. 69, and contained ninety-five counts. The first count charged an equipping with intent that the ship should be employed by certain foreign States, styling themselves the Confederate States, with intent to cruise against the Republic of the United States. The second count, instead of the Republic of the United States, mentioned the citizens of the Republic of the United States. The third count omitted all mention of the Confederate States, and called the United States the Republic of, etc. The fourth count was like the third, with the exception of returning to the expression 'citizens,' etc. After giving various names to the United States and Confederate States in the first eight counts, eight other counts were added substituting 'furnish' for 'equip.' Eight more substituted 'fit out' for 'furnish.' In short, the indictment contained a number of counts obtained by combining every operative verb of the section on which it was founded with all the other operative words."—Report of English commissioners of 1879.

—Lord Campbell in R. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. C. C. 38, and Lord Denman in R. v. O'Connell, 11 Cl. & F. 374, censure the undue multiplication of counts; though under common law pleading, this, in complicated cases, can not be avoided. To split the charge in distinct indictments would unduly accumulate costs, and would expose the prosecution to an application to consolidate.

See, also, supra, §§ 340 et seq.

ing over—it has been usual, by inserting the word “other” in a second count, to obviate this difficulty, through the fiction that the cause of action thus stated is new and distinct. The rule is clear, that when two counts setting out the same offenses occur, judgment will be arrested. “Neither, as we think,” says Lord Denman, in a case in 1846, “can one offense, whether felonious or not, be properly charged twice over, when with one indictment or two; and as special demurrers are not necessary in criminal cases, we think that if the two counts in an indictment necessarily appear to be for the same charge, the objection might be taken in arrest of judgment. But still the court would, if possible, hold them not to be for the same offense; and certainly the omission of the word ‘other’ would not of itself make the same; though the insertion of the word ‘other’ would make them different.”<sup>1</sup> In New Hampshire, however, it is said that where the same offense is described with formal variations in different counts, it is not necessary to allege the offense described in each of the several counts to be other and different from that described in the others.<sup>2</sup>

Even according to the strictest practice, the omission in an indictment, containing two counts, of an averment that they are for different offenses, is cured by a verdict of not guilty on one of the counts, or the entry of a nolle prosequi on that count.<sup>3</sup>

To same effect, see Jones v. State, 65 Ga. 621; Merrick v. State, 63 Ind. 637.

As to duplicity in such averments, see, supra, § 302.

Defendant can not use one count as evidence to disprove another count. See Edmonds v. State, 34 Ark. 720.

Indictment in first count charged defendant with the forging of a certain instrument, and in the second count charged another person with the uttering of the instrument, and then proceeded to charge the defendant with being an accessory before the fact to such uttering; it was ruled in Massachusetts that but two counts were charged. — Pettes v. Com., 126 Mass. 242.

The relative "said," used in one of the subsequent counts of an indictment referring to matter in a previous count, is always to be taken to refer to the count immediately preceding where the sense of the whole indictment does not forbid such a reference.<sup>4</sup>

§ 349. ONE BAD COUNT CAN NOT BE AIDED BY ANOTHER. Where the first count of an indictment is bad, or is abandoned by the prosecution, a subsequent count may be sustained, even though it refers to the first count for some allegations, and without repeating them.<sup>1</sup> Generally, however, one bad count can not help another bad count, which is defective in a distinct way.<sup>2</sup>

Even in good counts, it is unsafe to attempt to supply a material averment by mere reference to a preceding count. Time and place may be thus implied, but not, it seems, descriptive averments which enter into the vitals of the offense.<sup>3</sup>

§ 350. COUNTS MAY BE TRANSPOSED AFTER VERDICT. There may be cases, it seems, in which counts may be transposed after verdict, so as to invest the second with the incidents of the first, or vice versa. Thus, in an English case, A. and B. were indicted for the murder of C., by shooting him with a gun. In the first count A. was charged as principal in first degree, B. as present, aiding and abetting him; in the second count B. as principal in first degree, A. as aiding and abetting. The jury convicted both, but said they were not satisfied as to which fired the gun. It was held that the jury were not bound a confession implicating both, and which the prosecution intends to offer on trial.<sup>2</sup>

§ 362. IN CONSPIRACY AND RIOT, SEVERANCE. In conspiracy and riot, though it was once thought otherwise,<sup>1</sup> it is now held the defendants may claim separate trials. ### 3. Verdict and Judgment.

§ 363. JOINT DEFENDANTS MAY BE CONVICTED OF DIFFERENT GRADES. Joint defendants may be convicted of different grades.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where two or more defendants are jointly charged in the same indictment with murder, it is competent for the jury to find one guilty of murder, and another of manslaughter, and on such a verdict being rendered it will not be disturbed by the court as irregular.<sup>2</sup> So, also, in assault and battery, one may be found guilty of assault and another of battery.<sup>3</sup> A fortiori a verdict is good in ordinary cases where the jury convict one, and acquit or disagree as to the other.<sup>4</sup> victed, they should be sentenced severally,<sup>3</sup> and the imposition of a joint fine is erroneous.<sup>4</sup>

time has arrived. Statutes to this effect have been passed in England and in the United States, which we now proceed to consider. We should at first observe that a mistake is sometimes made in applying to statutes of limitation in criminal suits the construction that has been given to statutes of limitation in civil suits. The two classes of statutes, however, are essentially different. In civil suits the statute is interposed by the legislature as an impartial arbiter between two contending parties. In the construction of the statute, therefore, there is no intendment to be made in favor of either party. Neither grants the right to the other; there is therefore no grantor against whom the ordinary presumptions of construction are to be made. But it is otherwise when a statute of limitation is granted by the State. Here the State is the grantor, surrendering by act of grace its rights to prosecute, and declaring the offense to be no longer the subject of prosecution. The statute is not a statute of process, to be scantily and grudgingly applied, but an amnesty, declaring that after a certain time oblivion shall be cast over the offense; that the offender shall be at liberty to return to his country, and resume his immunities as a citizen; and that from henceforth he may cease to preserve the proofs of his innocence, for the proofs of his guilt are blotted out. Hence it is that statutes of limitation are to be liberally construed in favor of the defendant, not only because such liberality of construction belongs to all acts of amnesty and grace, but because the very existence of the statute is a recognition and notification by the legislature of the fact that time, while it gradually wears out proofs of innocence, has assigned to it fixed and positive periods in which it destroys proofs of guilt.<sup>2</sup> Independently of these views, it must be remembered

<sup>2</sup> This is well exhibited in a famous metaphor by Lord Plunkett, of which it is said by Lord Brougham (Works, etc., Edinb. ed. of 1872, iv 341) that "It can not be too much admired for the per that delay in instituting prosecutions is not only productive of expense to the State, but of peril to public justice in the attenuation and distortion, even by mere natural lapse of memory, of testimony. It is the policy of the law that prosecutions should be prompt, and that statutes enforcing such promptitude should be vigorously maintained. They are not merely acts of grace, but checks imposed by the State upon itself, to exact vigilant activity from its subalterns, and to secure for criminal trials the best evidence that can be obtained.<sup>2</sup>

§ 368. STATUTE NEED NOT BE SPECIALLY PLEADED. Although at one time it was thought otherwise, the rule is now generally accepted that the plea may be taken ad-

fect appropriateness of the figure, its striking and complete resemblance, as well as its raising before us an image previously familiar to the mind in all particulars, except its connection with the subject for which it is so unexpectedly but naturally introduced." "Time," so runs this celebrated passage, "with his scythe in his hand, is ever mowing down the evidences of title; wherefore the wisdom of the law plants in his other hand the hour-glass, by which he metes out the periods of that possession that shall supply the place of the munitments his scythe has destroyed." In other words, the defense of the statute of limitations is one not merely of technical process, to be grudgingly applied, but of right and wise reason, and, therefore, to be generously dispensed. The same thought is to be found in another great orator:

λαβὼν δὲ καὶ τὸν τῆς ἀπαγωγῆς νόμον
 . . . ἀποτὶ γὰρ καὶ ἡ πόλις οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἔστιν δίδωαι αὐτῷ, ἢ τοῦ μὴ συμπαρῆσαι vantage of on the general issue.<sup>1</sup> But the defense should be interposed before conviction, and can not, unless appearing on the indictment, be made subsequently.<sup>2</sup>

§ 369. INDICTMENT SHOULD AVER OFFENSE WITHIN STATUTE, OR, IF EXCLUDED BY STATUTE, SHOULD, BY STRICT PRACTICE, AVER FACTS OF EXCEPTION. Ordinarily, as we have seen,<sup>1</sup> the offense must be laid in the indictment within the time fixed by the statute of limitations. On the other hand, where the statute does not impose an absolute and universal bar, but only a bar in certain lines of cases, the prosecution may lay the offense outside the statute, and may prove, without averring it in the indictment, that the defendant was within the exceptions of the statute.<sup>2</sup> Where this view obtains, the fact that the offense

In United States v. Cook, 84 U. S. (17 Wall.) 168, 21 L. Ed. 538, an indictment charged the accused with the commission, more than two years previously, of certain acts amounting to an offense as defined by an act of Congress; another act limited prosecutions for this and other offenses to two years, unless the accused had been a fugitive from justice. On demurrer the indictment was held is on the face of the indictment prima facie barred can not be taken advantage of by demurrer, or motion to quash, nor a fortiori by arrest of judgment.<sup>3</sup> But where a statute exists limiting all prosecutions within fixed periods, the more exact course is to state the time correctly in the indictment, and then aver the exception, and this mode of pleading is now generally required.<sup>4</sup> Perhaps the conflict may be reduced by appealing to the tests heretofore asserted,<sup>5</sup> and holding that when the exception is part of the limitation it must be pleaded,<sup>6</sup> but when it is good, though it did not allege that the accused was within the exception.

§ 370. STATUTE, UNLESS GENERAL, OPERATES ON OFFENSES IT SPECIFIES, ONLY. Statutory words of description must be taken in their technical exclusive sense, when it appears they are used as specifications. Thus, "penalty" has been held to include only civil suits,<sup>1</sup> and "deceit" has been ruled not to include "conspiracy."<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, on reasoning already given, when an offense is described, not as the technical term for a species, distinguished from other specific terms, but as nomen generalissimum, then it is to have a wide and popular construction.

§ 371. STATUTE IS RETROSPECTIVE. As a rule, statutes of limitation apply to offenses perpetrated before the passage of the statute as well as to subsequent offenses.<sup>1</sup>

§ 372. STATUTE BEGINS TO RUN FROM COMMISSION OF CRIME—CONTINUOUS OFFENSES. The statute begins to run on the day of the commission of the offense.<sup>1</sup> This, as is well said, is to be dated from the period when the crime is consummated.<sup>2</sup>

Instantaneous crimes, such as killing and arson, are consummated when they reach the point of completion. When a distinct result is necessary to completion, i. e., death to homicide, it becomes part of the crime, no matter how long it may be delayed, and the offense is fixed

In Pennsylvania it has been held that an act extending a statute of limitation is not ex post facto as to a crime against which the statute had not run at the time of the extension.—Com. v. Duffy, 96 Pa. St. 506, 42 Am. Rep. 554.

In New Jersey it was at one time held that where a crime was committed more than two years before the repeal of a statute limiting prosecutions to two years after the commission of a crime prosecuted, the repeal of the statute and extension of the time of prosecution were not ex post facto as to such crime.—State v. Moore, 42 N. J. L. (13 Vr.) 208.

This, however, was subsequently overruled.—State v. Moore, 43 N. J. L. (14 Vr.) 203; 39 Am. Rep. 558. See Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, § 42. See criticism in Whart. Com. Am. Law, § 472.

in the moment of the killing. With instantaneous crimes, therefore, the statute begins with the consummation (Volendung); with continuous crimes, it begins with the ceasing of the criminal act or neglect.

Continuous offenses,—such as nuisances, the carrying of concealed weapons, use of false weights, etc.,—endure after the period of concoction, and as long as the offense by the defendant's action or permission continues to exist.<sup>3</sup>

In bigamy, the statute runs from the bigamous marriage, unless the offense is made by statute continuous.<sup>4</sup> In the latter case the statute does not begin to run while the bigamous marriage relation continues.<sup>5</sup>

The time of the commission of the offense is to be determined by parol proof.<sup>6</sup>

§ 373. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION SAVES STATUTE. The procedure which must be instituted in order to save the statute is, in the federal statutes, "indictment or information," and in the statutes of most of the States, "indictment." The finding of an informal presentment is not sufficient to take the case out of the statute;<sup>1</sup> nor will a former indictment on which a nolle prosequi was entered serve to take the case out of the statute.<sup>2</sup>

"Information," in the federal statutes,<sup>3</sup> means not "complaint" by a prosecutor, but the technical ex officio information filed by the government. Under such statutes, though the indictment must be found to prevent the bar of the statute, the defendant need not be sentenced within the limitation.<sup>4</sup>

§ 374. IN SOME JURISDICTIONS STATUTE SAVED BY WARRANT OR PRESENTMENT. In England, on the other hand, and in jurisdictions where "indictment" or "information" is not required, the usual warrant issued by a magistrate on a preliminary complaint is enough to save the statute,<sup>1</sup> and the same seems to be true in Alabama,<sup>2</sup> and South Carolina,<sup>3</sup> and perhaps in other states. And that is clearly the case with a presentment by a grand jury, though the indictment was not found until after the statute expired;<sup>4</sup> and so it is held to be with a commitment or binding over by a magistrate.<sup>5</sup>

One or two analogous cases under the English statute may not be here out of place. In R. v. Wallace, 1 East P. C. 186, it was holden upon the repealed statutes relating to coin, that the information and proceeding before the magistrate, upon the defendant's being taken, was to be deemed the "commencement of the prosecution" within the meaning of those acts. See, also, R. v. Brooks, 1 Den. C. C. 217, 2 Car. & K. 402, 61 Eng. C. L. 401.

But proof by parol that the prisoner was apprehended for treason respecting the coin, within three months after the offense was committed, was holden not to be sufficient, where the indictment was after the three months, and the warrant to apprehend or to commit was not produced.—R. v. Phillips, R. & R. 369.

§ 375. WHEN FLIGHT SUSPENDS STATUTE, IT IS NOT RE-NEWED BY TEMPORARY RETURN. Whether the exceptions to the statute must be specially averred in indictment, has been just noticed.

It is not necessary to constitute the exception of a person "fleeing from justice," that the defendant should have been unintermittingly absent from the jurisdiction. If he flees from a prosecution, mere occasional returns will not start the statute afresh.<sup>1</sup> The same rule applies to concealment of guilt.<sup>2</sup>

But to soldiers enlisting in the army and then remov-

In R. v. Killminster, 7 Car. & P. 228, 32 Eng. C. L. 585, an indictment for night poaching was preferred against the defendant within twelve months after the commission of the offense, and was ignored; four years afterward another bill was found against him for the same offense, and upon an objection that the proceeding was out of time, Coleridge, J., doubted whether the first indictment was not a proceeding sufficient to entitle prosecutor to proceed. He reserved the point, but the defendant was acquitted upon the merits. See, also, Tilladam v. Inhabitants of Bristol, 4 Nev. & M. 144.

In a remarkable case in Georgia, it was held that on an indictment for a major offense, to which the statute does not apply, but which includes a minor offense, covered and shielded by the statute, where the jury convicted of the minor offense, the statute may be applied to the major offense.—*Clark v. ing, this exception does not apply;<sup>3</sup> and the same reason would be good as to all removals under direction of the State.<sup>4</sup>

§ 376. FAILURE OF DEFECTIVE INDICTMENT DOES NOT REVIVE STATUTE. The failure of a defective indictment, and the presentation of a new and correct indictment after the statute has begun to run, does not revive the statute.<sup>1</sup> The statute, as to the particular offense, was put aside by the commencement of legal proceedings against the defendant, and remains inoperative until these legal proceedings terminate. And this termination can not be until a final judgment is reached on the merits.<sup>2</sup> It is possible, however, to conceive of a statute so couched as to make a judgment on mere technical grounds a termination of the prosecution, so that a new indictment would be regarded as a new prosecution. And it has been held that when an indictment is quashed, the time of its pendency is to be taken out of the statute.<sup>3</sup>

§ 377. COURTS LOOK WITH DISFAVOR AT LONG DELAY IN PROSECUTION. In cases of secret offense, where the prosecutor is the sole or principal witness, and where, after a short lapse of time, the defendant, unless previously notified, must in the nature of things have great difficulty, from the evanescent character of memory, in collecting evidence aliunde as to alibi, the policy of the law is to compel a speedy prosecution. Eminently is this the case with sexual prosecutions, especially those which are capable of being used for the extortion of money. Hence courts, as will hereafter be seen, look with disfavor on prosecutions for rape in which the prosecutrix does not make immediate complaint. And there are cases when the delay is marked and unexcused, when an acquittal will be directed. This course was taken by a learned English judge (Alderson) in a case of bestiality, where nearly two years (not quite the statutory limitation) was allowed by the prosecutor to pass before institution of proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

§ 378. STATUTE NOT SUSPENDED BY FRAUD. The enumeration of specific exceptions is exhaustive, and the statute can not be suspended in favor of the prosecution by any allegations of fraud on the part of the defendant. Thus, where it appears that an alleged misdemeanor was committed more than two years before the warrant was issued, and that the defendant was all the time a resident of the State, the prosecution can not save the bar of the statute by showing that the defendant put the prosecutor on a wrong scent, and concealed the crime until a few weeks before the arrest.<sup>1</sup>

§ 379. UNDER STATUTE, INDICTMENTS UNDULY DELAYED MAY BE DISCHARGED. In the federal courts and in the courts of several of the States restrictions exist requiring trials in criminal cases to take place within a specified period after the institution of the prosecution.<sup>1</sup> The power of § 380. STATUTES HAVE NO EXTRA-TERRITORIAL EFFECT. he shall have been committed, unless the attendance of the witnesses against him appear to have been prevented by himself, shall be discharged from imprisonment, if he be detained for that cause only, and if he be not tried at or before the third term after his examination before the justices, he shall be forever discharged of the crime, unless such failure proceed from any continuance granted on the motion of the prisoner, or from the inability of the jury to agree on their verdict."—R. C. of Va., ch. 169, § 28.

The excuses above enumerated are not exclusive. Whenever the commonwealth has just ground for delay, discharge will be refused.—Adcock's Case, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 662.

—When the accused has been tried and convicted, and a new trial awarded to him, although he should not be again tried till after the third term from his examination, he is not entitled to a discharge.—2 Va. or the United States, it could never be pretended that he could plead that in his own country the period for prosecution had expired. And so where jurisdiction is based on allegiance, as in case of political offenses against the United States committed abroad, the defendant, when put on trial in the country of his allegiance, would not be permitted to set up the limitations of the forum delicti commissi. In either case the law as to limitation is that of the court of process. And in this view most foreign jurists coincide.<sup>2</sup> Fœlix, however, seems to think, that in case of a difference in this respect in the codes of States having concurrent jurisdiction, the milder legislation is to be preferred.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XVII.

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Introductory.

§ 381. IN GENERAL. It is the purpose to collect in this chapter, under the various specific crimes and offenses, the principal cases giving the general rules governing the drawing and sufficiency of indictments and informations charging the respective crimes and offenses. As many of these crimes and offenses are purely statutory, the pleader must in all cases consult the statute of the particular jurisdiction denouncing the given crime or offense, and conform to its requirements. For example, the statutes in the various States denouncing and punishing abduction of a female, under a designated age, for purposes of prostitution, and the like, are as variant as the several States, almost. Some of these statutes specifically require that the female shall have been of previous chaste character,<sup>1</sup> or shall have been lawfully in the custody and control of the person or persons from whom taken,<sup>2</sup> and the like. The averments in an indictment or information charging such an offense must meet each of these varying requirements and conditions by alleging previous chaste character, lawful custody and control, and the like. What is true of abduction is also true of other specific crimes and offenses.

No general rules, applicable alike in all jurisdictions, can be given, because of the varying requirements under the different statutes; but it is thought, and trusted, that what is herein collected will prove both convenient and helpful, but should always be consulted in connection with the wording and provisions of the statute under which the pleader is acting, and the difference in this respect, if any, from the statute under which the decision given was made.

- § 385. For illicit sexual intercourse.
- § 386. Enticement to house of ill-fame.
- § 387. Joinder of counts and duplicity.

§ 382. IN GENERAL. The crime of abduction of a female for purpose of concubinage, prostitution, having sexual intercourse with her, compelling marriage, and the like, is a purely statutory offense, and the indictment or information must be drawn to meet the requirements of the particular statute by alleging that the abduction was for the purposes therein denounced and in the manner therein prohibited.<sup>1</sup> The indictment or information may follow the language of the statute<sup>2</sup> without setting out the manner of detention,<sup>3</sup> but must aver that the abduction or detention was against the victim's will.<sup>4</sup> Where the statute enumerates two or more things, of the same general nature but not of the same class, in the disjunctive, an allegation of them in the conjunctive will render the indictment or information vulnerable to the objection that it charges two offenses.<sup>5</sup>

As to forms of indictment for abduction in its various phases, see Forms Nos. 161-238.

Information held insufficient to charge the crime of abduction under S. D. Pen. Code, §§ 333-335.

Unlawfully, maliciously, etc. An indictment or information for abduction in any of its phases, as provided by the specific act, where the act denounced and prohibited, when unlawfully done constitutes the offense denounced, need not allege that the accused acted maliciously, wilfully, or feloniously.<sup>6</sup> But where the statute provides that the taking away of a woman unlawfully and against her will for specified purposes shall constitute the offense, then the indictment or information must allege that the taking away was unlawful and against the woman's will.<sup>7</sup>

Enticing from parents or guardian of an unmarried female under a designated age being charged, it need not be averred that accused knew the female was under the statutory age,<sup>8</sup> or that the parents or guardians had the legal custody,<sup>9</sup> in the absence of a statutory provision making legal custody an element; but it must be alleged that the taking was against the will and without the consent of such parents or guardian.<sup>10</sup>

Inartistically drawn indictment or information is sufficient as against an objection that it is unintelligible in those cases where it contains all the averments required by the statute.<sup>11</sup> in the statute, indictment or information charging "prostitution and concubinage." See, infra, § 387, footnote 2.

Forcible detention being charged in the indictment does not constitute an allegation that the detention was against the woman's will. — Wilder v. Com., 81 Ky. 591.

<sup>10</sup> Against will and consent of the parents. — Where the indictment charged that the accused enticed "the said female to leave the house of her parents" without averring the names of the parents or that the enticement was against their will and consent, it was held bad, in Jones v. State, 84 Tenn. (16 Lea) 466.

Surplusage does not vitiate an indictment otherwise good;<sup>12</sup> as, an indictment charging the abduction of a female under the statutory age from her parents for the purpose of concubinage which adds the unnecessary allegation "for the purpose of having sexual intercourse with him the said" defendant.<sup>13</sup>

§ 383. FOR PURPOSE OF COMPELLING MARRIAGE.<sup>1</sup> In an indictment or information charging the abduction or detaining<sup>2</sup> of a woman to induce or compel her marriage to the accused or to another, there must be an averment that the act was unlawful and against the woman's will; but neither the means by which the abduction was effected, nor from what place the woman was taken, nor the manner in which detained is required to be set out, such indictments being good where they merely follow the words of the statute.<sup>3</sup>

Taking from parents or guardian of girl under statutory age for purpose of, or of compelling, marriage to self or to another, being charged, neither the means by which the abduction was effected, from what place, nor from whose custody the girl was taken need be alleged,<sup>4</sup> neither need it be alleged to whom she was to be married, that the intention of accused was that she should be married before the statutory age, or that parents or guardian had the legal charge of her person.<sup>5</sup>

§ 384. FOR PURPOSE OF PROSTITUTION. An indictment or information charging abduction for purpose of prostitution should follow closely the language of statute under which drawn, although the use of words of equivalent import with those employed in the statute will suffice, if the instrument is otherwise sufficient;<sup>1</sup> but where the statutory words are "for purposes of prostitution,"<sup>2</sup> an allegation of abduction "for the purpose of having illicit sexual intercourse with her" charges no offense,<sup>3</sup> and the indictment or information must be quashed on motion therefor;<sup>4</sup> neither is an averment which alleges the act was done "for the purpose of unlawfully and feloniously prostituting her, and for the purpose of having carnal intercourse with her," sufficient within such a statute.<sup>5</sup>

Previous chaste character is not an element in the offense, in the absence of specific statutory provision, and need not be alleged or proven, for in such a case the chastity or unchastity of the female is wholly immaterial;<sup>6</sup> but where the provision of the statute relates to <sup>1</sup> Equivalent allegation.—An allegation that the female was enticed away "with the felonious intent of rendering" the female enticed "a prostitute" is equivalent to alleging that it was done "for the purpose of prostitution."—Nichols v. State, 127 Ind. 406, 26 N. E. 839.

Compare: State v. Overstreet, 43 Kan. 299, 23 Pac. 572, holding that an indictment or information otherwise good, charging the abduction of a girl under the statutory age from her parents for the purpose of concubinage, is not vitiated females of previous chaste character, the indictment or information must aver and the proof show that the female was of previous chaste character.<sup>7</sup> Under some statutes,<sup>8</sup> however, it is held that such an averment is not necessary,<sup>9</sup> the fact of previous unchastity being a matter of defense.<sup>10</sup>

neither is it necessary to allege any matter not an element of the offense.<sup>5</sup> An allegation that accused took female away without the consent of her parents or guardian is not necessary.<sup>6</sup>

Attempt to commit the offense may be properly alleged to have been by means of "persuasion, entreaty, advice, flattery, promises, and other means to the prosecuting attorney unknown,"<sup>7</sup> or, in case of an indictment, "to the grand jury unknown."<sup>8</sup>

§ 386. ENTICEMENT TO HOUSE OF ILL-FAME. Where the statute<sup>1</sup> makes it a crime to take or entice a female to a house of ill-fame, or elsewhere, for the purpose of prostitution, an indictment or information charging the offense must aver that the place to which the female was taken was a house of ill-fame, or a place of like character within the prohibition of the statute,<sup>2</sup> and the particular house or place must be alleged;<sup>3</sup> but it is sufficient to name one house of ill-fame or other prohibited place to which the female was taken.<sup>4</sup>

Previous chaste character of the female, under the California statute<sup>5</sup> and all with like provisions, must be alleged in the indictment or information, and proven on the trial.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>5</sup> That not an element of the offense.—State v. Knost, 207 Mo. 18, 105 S. W. 616.

§ 387. JOINDER OF COUNTS AND DUPLICITY. A count for the abduction of a daughter under the statutory age against the will of her parents, may be joined with a count for abducting the daughter and marrying her.<sup>1</sup> It has been said that where the statute denounces the abduction of a female for purpose of "prostitution or concubinage," an averment charging the abduction in the conjunctive as for purpose of "prostitution and concubinage" renders the indictment open to the objection of duplicity in that it charges two distinct offenses in one count;<sup>2</sup> but it is held that under the New York statute<sup>3</sup> the use of the copulative form of allegation charging as taken "for the purpose of prostitution and sexual intercourse," is not subject to demurrer.<sup>4</sup>

- § 396. Publishing information where abortion may be procured.
- § 397. Joinder of counts—Election.
- § 398. Duplicity.

§ 388. IN GENERAL.<sup>1</sup> An indictment charging the offense of procuring, or attempting to procure, an abortion, should follow the language or phraseology of the statute; but it is not fatal to depart therefrom, if the language or phrases used convey substantially the same meaning.<sup>2</sup> Thus, it has been held that the phrase “the procuring of a miscarriage” has practically the same meaning as “the procuring of an abortion”;<sup>3</sup> that “woman with child” is equivalent to “pregnant woman” in the statute,<sup>4</sup> and the like. And it has been said that an indictment or information is not defective because it charges an attempt to procure the miscarriage and abortion of the mother

People v. Quinn, 44 N. Y. St. Rep. 920, 18 N. Y. Supp. 569.

rather than that of the child, where the intent to cause the premature birth and destruction of the child is also charged.<sup>5</sup>

Alternative use of different means alleged in an indictment for abortion does not render it bad.<sup>6</sup>

§ 389. CHARGING GRADE OF CRIME. The act of producing, or attempting to produce, an abortion, where it does not result in death,<sup>1</sup> may be a misdemeanor or a felony, according to the provision of the statute; and the statute may provide degrees of the offense upon which different penalties are inflicted. Care should be taken in the drawing of the indictment so as to charge the highest grade or degree of the offense of which accused can be convicted under the facts in the case. Where by statute abortion is a misdemeanor, an indictment for the misdemeanor will be good for that offense, although it contains some averments but not all the facts which would show that the criminal act alleged was a felony.<sup>2</sup> For example, the offense of administering a drug to a pregnant woman to produce a miscarriage, and the administering of the drug to kill the child, are two separate and distinct offenses; an indictment which alleges that the medicine was administered to produce a miscarriage is sufficient for the misdemeanor offense, although insufficient to charge the crime of manslaughter in killing the child.<sup>3</sup>

In State v. Drake, 30 N. J. L. (1 Vr.) 422, however, it was held that an indictment charging that the defendant administered a certain poison or drug or medicine, or noxious thing, was defective in that it did not allege that he administered all of the prohibited things nor any one of them.

ploy means to procure miscarriage of a pregnant woman, the statute prescribing a penalty for the offense denounced, this fact will not take the criminal act out of the provisions of the statute making it manslaughter to kill another in the commission of an unlawful act, where death results from the abortion.—State v. Power, 24 Wash. 34, 63 L. R. A. 902, 63 Pac. 1112.

§ 390. AVERMENTS NOT REQUIRED. Neither the name, quality, quantity or the effect<sup>1</sup> of the drug administered need be named in an indictment for procuring an abortion; and whether the drug administered was liquid, solid, or gaseous need not be alleged.<sup>2</sup> It is unnecessary to allege that the drug was noxious,<sup>3</sup> and, consequently, there need be no averment that the accused knew the noxious character thereof.<sup>4</sup>

See Cave v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. Rep. 335, 26 S. W. 503, where the court expressed doubt as to the sufficiency of the indictment because it did not name the means or state that they were unknown, but held it sufficient, following Watson v. State, 9 Tex. App. 237.

Un-noxious character of drug used constitutes no defense, for, as has been well said, "a party who, with the necessary criminal intent uses any substance to produce a miscarriage, surely can not be held innocent because he mistakenly administered a drug or substance which did not produce the result intended. It is the intent and not the 'substance' used that determines the criminality."—State v. Fitzgerald, 49 Iowa 260, 31 Am. Rep. 148; State v. Watson, 30 Kan. 281, 1 Pac. 770; *State v. name or nature of the drug administered,<sup>1</sup> applies with equal force to the instrument used, where the offense is committed, or attempted, by the use of an instrument. The general rule is that the name of the instrument need not be averred;<sup>2</sup> but there are cases to the effect that the character of the instrument used should be averred whenever it is possible to do so,<sup>3</sup> or that the name thereof is unknown to the grand jurors.<sup>4</sup>

Description as "a certain metallic instrument calculated to produce an abortion" was held sufficient in Reum v. State, 49 Tex. Cr. Rep. 125, 90 S. W. 1109.

Allegation "did unlawfully use a certain instrument" is an insufficient description where there was no averment that the nature of the instrument was unknown.—Com. v. Sinclair, 195 Mass. 100, 11 Ann. Cas. 217, 80 N. E. 799.

In the above case the court say: "The gist of the offense charged is the use of the instrument with the specific intent stated; but the description of the instrument and the mode of its use are material to describe and identify the charge."

In Massachusetts the old precedents of indictments contained averments of the nature, kind and description of the instrument which the defendant was charged with having used.—Com. v. Brown, 80 Mass. (14 Gray) 419; Com. v. Jackson, 81 Mass. (15 Gray) 187; Com. v. Snow, 116 Mass. 47; Com. v. Boynton, 116 Mass. 343; Com. v. Brown, 121 Mass. 96; Com. v. Corkin, 136 Mass. 429, 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 15; *Com. v. <sup>4</sup> CAL.—People v. Guaragna, 23 Cal. App. 120, 137 Pac. 279. DEL.—State v. Quinn, 2 Penn. 339, 45 Atl. 544. ILL.—Baker v. People, 105 Ill. 452. MASS.—Com. v. Jackson, 81 Mass. Longstreth*, 19 N. D. 268, 121 N. W. 1114, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1317.

In People v. Guaragna, 23 Cal. App. 120, 137 Pac. 279, the court says that the information would have been good if it had alleged

Manner of use of instrument, however, is different, and this must be set out, where known;<sup>5</sup> but indictment may allege that the manner of use is to the grand jury unknown,<sup>6</sup> in which case there need be no averment regarding the manner in which the instrument was used.<sup>7</sup>

Remedy for failure to aver name or nature of instrument, or its manner of use, and also to state that the same is unknown to the grand jury, is to ask for a bill of particulars, to which defendant is entitled as a matter of right;<sup>8</sup> a motion to quash the indictment for such failure to aver is properly overruled.<sup>9</sup>

§ 392. — PREGNANCY AND QUICKENING OF WOMAN. It is unnecessary under statute<sup>1</sup> to aver that the accused knew or suspected the woman was pregnant,<sup>2</sup> or that that the character of the instrument was unknown, and obviously such an allegation would not render it more certain or efficacious than no averment at all.

<sup>5</sup> Cochran v. People, 175 Ill. 28, 51 N. E. 845; State v. Bly, 99 Minn. 74, 108 N. W. 833; Smartt v. State, 112 Tenn. 539, 80 S. W. 586.

Sufficient allegation as to use: An allegation that the instruments were used "in and about and within the body" of the woman, sufficiently indicates the manner of committing the offense.—People v. Guaragna, 23 Cal. App. 120, 137 Pac. 279.

An allegation charging the unlawful use by "forcing, thrusting, and inserting said instrument into the private parts" of the named woman is sufficient.—Baker v. People, 105 Ill. 452.

An indictment is sufficient where it alleges that accused forced and thrust the instrument up into the womb and body of a pregnant woman.—Rhodes v. State, 128 Ind.

But in People v. Wah Hing, 15 Cal. App. 195, 114 Pac. 416, it was held that it was unnecessary to allege how the instruments were used, as it would be presumed that they were used upon her body.

Indictment against accomplice of the physician sufficient without averring the physician knew that she had quickened,<sup>3</sup> although it was otherwise at common law;<sup>4</sup> and consequently in a charge of the administration, before the period of quickening, of a drug with the intent to produce an abortion or miscarriage, the pleader need not aver the drug was so administered for the purpose of causing a delivery before the period of quickening.<sup>5</sup>

§ 393. — MALICE. An indictment charging abortion is not defective because of a failure to aver that the act was maliciously done,<sup>1</sup> and without lawful justification;<sup>2</sup> neither is it necessary to allege that the offense was committed feloniously.<sup>3</sup>

§ 394. — NEGATING DEATH. In those cases where death did not result from the abortion, an indictment charging the offense in the words of the statute is sufficient without the negative averment that defendant did not cause the death either of the woman or of the child;<sup>1</sup>

the woman was pregnant. — Fondren v. State, 74 Tex. Cr. Rep. 552, 169 S. W. 411.

The general rule is that where, by the statute, there is a gradation of offenses of the same species, as in the degrees of punishment annexed to the offense, it is not required to set forth a negative allegation. It is no objection to the indictment that it charges the acts which constitute the minor offense unaccompanied by any averment that the aggravating circumstances do not exist. In such a case the offense charged is to be deemed the minor offense, and punishable as such. — State v. Ged

but where death occurs that fact should be specifically alleged to reach the greater crime and subject the accused, on conviction, to the greater punishment.<sup>2</sup>

§ 395. NEGATIVING STATUTORY EXCEPTIONS. The general rules governing the negating of exceptions have been already fully treated.<sup>1</sup> In an indictment charging the offense of abortion, where the exceptions constitute a part of the statutory offense, they must be negated,<sup>2</sup> otherwise there will be no offense charged.<sup>3</sup> But where

The negation is sufficient where it avers that the acts were done with a specific intent, it not being then necessary for the preservation of the life of the deceased.—Beasley v. People, 89 Ill. 571.

To charge that the act was "unlawfully" done sufficiently negatives or precludes any inference or possibility that the act was done under circumstances of justification.—Com. v. Sholes, 95 Mass. (13 Allen) 554. See Johnson v. People, 33 Colo. 224, 108 Am. St. Rep. 85, 80 Pac. 133.

Where the indictment alleged that the accused, with intent to procure a miscarriage, administered drugs to a pregnant woman, the same not being necessary to preserve her life, sufficiently negated not only the necessity of the drugs but also the necessity of the miscarriage.—State v. Brown, 26 Del. 499, 85 Atl. 797.

Where the indictment alleges "that the employment of the said instrument not being necessary to preserve the life of the woman" without alleging that the miscarriage was not necessary, is defective and must be quashed on motion.—Bassett v. State, 41 Ind. 303; Wiley v. State, 46 Ind. 363.

Insufficient negation.—An averment that the act was done "maliciously and without lawful justification" is not a sufficient negation of the exception "unless necessary to preserve her life."—State v. Stokes, 54 Vt. 178.

<sup>3</sup> State v. Meek, 70 Mo. 355, 35 Am. Rep. 427.

An indictment simply charging that the defendant produced an the exceptions set forth in the statute are merely matters of defense, which must be affirmatively proven, they need not be negatived in the indictment.<sup>4</sup>

§ 396. PUBLISHING INFORMATION WHERE ABORTION MAY BE PROCURED.<sup>1</sup> Many of the States have statutes making it an offense to in anywise give or publish information as to where an abortion may be procured.<sup>2</sup> Under such a statute a charge of making public by print and writing, words and language that gave notice and information where advice might be obtained for procuring an abortion, and charging the circulation of such notice and information, must allege the manner in which the print and writing were made public, and how the writing and information were circulated;<sup>3</sup> but where the charge is the distributing of such advertisements, the indictment need not specifically allege guilty knowledge of the contents of the advertisement, it being sufficient to charge that accused knowingly distributed such advertisement.<sup>4</sup>

abortion charges no offense; likewise it is insufficient to charge only that the abortion was produced when it was unnecessary to save the life of the mother.—State v. Meek, 70 Mo. 355, 35 Am. Rep. 427.

the same statutory crime of manslaughter by the use of different instruments, both of which are embodied in the statute, the counts are properly joined;<sup>2</sup> but if a fourth is added charging manslaughter at common law committed upon a day subsequent to the time mentioned in the former counts, two distinct and different offenses are charged, which are of a different nature, and on motion an election will be required by the court.<sup>3</sup>

§ 398. DUPLICITY. It is not duplicity in an indictment alleging abortion to charge, in the language of the statute, both the administration of drugs and the employment of instruments;<sup>1</sup> or to charge the use of drugs and medicines and by violence internally and externally applied to the woman;<sup>2</sup> or to charge both miscarriage and death, where the statute provides a penalty "if the woman miscarries or dies in consequence."<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XX.

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES,

Adultery.

- § 399. In general.
- § 400. Following language of statute.
- § 401. Name and description of particeps criminis.
- § 402. Time and place.
- § 403. Not husband and wife.
- § 404. Unnecessary allegation.
- § 405. Joinder of the parties.
- § 406. Joinder of offenses.
- § 407. Duplicity.

§ 399. IN GENERAL.<sup>1</sup> The common-law offense of adultery has been changed and modified by statute in most of the states, and in some of the states<sup>2</sup> the common-law crime of adultery no longer exists, but the offense is known by some other designation. In such a state if the indictment charges adultery that fact will not vitiate it where otherwise sufficient, for the reason that the sufficiency does not depend upon the name by which the prosecuting officer designates the crime, but upon the specific allegations of facts; a wrong designation of the crime charged, or the absence of all designation, does not vitiate an indictment or information otherwise sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

Adultery not defined by the statute. An allegation that the accused "did unlawfully commit the crime of adultery by then and there having unlawful intercourse" with a person named, has been held to be sufficient, although the words "sexual" and "carnal" are omitted.<sup>4</sup>

Surplusage will not render bad an indictment or information for adultery which is otherwise good, such as an unnecessary allegation that it was found on the complaint of the injured husband or wife.<sup>5</sup>

§ 400. FOLLOWING LANGUAGE OF STATUTE. An indictment or information charging adultery which follows the words of the statute creating or defining the offense, is sufficient.<sup>1</sup> The precise words of the statute need not be used, substantial compliance with the rule requiring the use of the language of the statute being sufficient;<sup>2</sup> but where the words of the statute are not followed, the indictment or information should allege the facts with certainty,<sup>3</sup> and certainty according to the common law is sufficient.<sup>4</sup> In such a case nothing can be taken by intend-on another point in 12 N. M. 84, 75 Pac. 30.

<sup>1</sup> Lord v. State, 17 Neb. 526, 6 Am. Cr. Rep. 17, 23 N. W. 507; State v. Clark, 54 N. H. 456, 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 34; State v. Tally, 74 N. C. 322; State v. Stubbs, 108 N. C. 774, 13 S. E. 90.

Charging party with adultery, alleging that it was committed by her by permitting the man to have carnal knowledge of her body, is sufficient.—State v. Moore, 36 Utah 521, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 284, 105 Pac. 293.

An indictment alleging that the defendants "did then and there unlawfully and illegally each with the other live together in an open state of adultery, the said C. being then and there a married man, having been previously married to one D., and the said L. S. being then and there a married woman, having been previously married to one E. S., contrary" etc., is sufficiently plain and certain.—Crane v. People, 168 Ill. 395, 48 N. E. 54, affirming 65 Ill. App. 492.

An indictment charging that the defendant, being a married man and having a wife alive, naming her, did commit adultery with a certain other woman, naming her, was held sufficient without alleging carnal knowledge and that the paramour was not his wife.—Helfrich v. Com., 33 Pa. St. 68, 75 Am. Dec. 579.

§ 401. NAME AND DESCRIPTION OF PARTICIPE CRIMINIS. In an indictment or information charging adultery, nothing can be taken by intendment; in the description of the person, and otherwise, the accused must be brought clearly within all the material words of the statute.<sup>1</sup> It is essential to the crime of adultery that at least one of the parties shall be married, and this fact must be distinctly alleged in the indictment or information.<sup>2</sup> The sex<sup>3</sup> or race<sup>4</sup> of the party charged or of the participe criminis need not be alleged, and the fact that the parties are described as "male" and "female," instead of "man" and "woman," as designated in the statute, is immaterial.<sup>5</sup>

In Pennsylvania, where a married woman is accused of adultery, the name of her husband must be set out,<sup>6</sup> but where a married man is charged, the name of his wife need not be set out.<sup>7</sup> In Texas, and perhaps elsewhere,

In Texas the indictment need not allege accused was not married to the participe criminis where it alleges lawful marriage to another party who is designated.—Lee v. State, 47 Tex. Cr. Rep. 464, 83 S. W. 1110.

Varying grades of the offense being named in the statute, e. g., adultery, living in a state of adultery, and lewd and lascivious conduct, an indictment or information so framed that accused may be convicted of either on the evidence, seems not to be open to the objection that it charges more than one offense.—State v. Nelson, 39 Wash. 221, 81 Pac. 721.

I. Crim. Proc.—29

As to sufficiency of allegation, see Com. v. Hussey, 157 Mass. 415, 32 N. E. 362.

the rule is that the name of the husband of a married woman charged with adultery need not be set out.<sup>8</sup>

Name<sup>9</sup> of particeps criminis must be alleged;<sup>10</sup> and it may be necessary, under statutory provision, to allege whether the party was married or single. Thus, under one section of the Vermont statute it is adultery for a man to have sexual intercourse with a married woman other than his wife,<sup>11</sup> and under another section of the same statute it is adultery for a man to have sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman;<sup>12</sup> hence, in this state, an indictment which fails to allege whether the particeps criminis was married, is fatally defective,<sup>13</sup> because it fails to allege a material and essential fact under either <sup>8</sup> Collum v. State, 10 Tex. App. 708; Hildreth v. State, 19 Tex. App. 195; Lenert v. State, (Tex. Cr.) 63 S. W. 563.

<sup>9</sup> Indicted by name under which known, a joint defendant not entitled to acquittal on showing true name of co-defendant not that under which indicted.—State v. Glaze, 9 Ala. 283.

"Roxcena Jones" properly amended by adding "otherwise known as 'Rosa Jones,'" such amendment in nowise changing the proof required of the prosecution, and not requiring any further or different proof on the part of the defendant.—State v. Arnold, 50 Vt. 731.

"With a certain woman, whose name to said grand jurors is unknown," etc., in connection with an allegation that accused is a married man and the woman was not his wife, has been held to be a sufficient description of the particeps

Under Illinois statute (Revised Stats. 1893, ch. 38, § 408), indictment is not defective for failure to state that the woman was married, there being an averment that the parties were not married to each other.—Lyman v. People, 98 Ill. App. 386, affirmed 198 Ill. 544, 64 N. E. 974.

"Lawfully married to another person" is sufficient under the Texas statute.—Lenert v. State, (Tex. Cr.) 63 S. W. 563.

In Massachusetts any form of words stating the woman was the wife of another, is sufficient.—Moore v. Com., 47 Mass. (6 Metc.) 243, 39 Am. Dec. 724; Com. v. Reardon, 60 Mass. (6 Cush.) 78.

In Illinois, however, on joint indictment for adultery it is immaterial that the indictment fails to state whether the woman was mar-of said sections of the statute,<sup>14</sup> and the defect is not cured by verdict.<sup>15</sup>

Indictment against two for fornication and adultery, the fact that the woman is designated as a "spinster," is not ground for arresting judgment.<sup>16</sup>

§ 402. TIME AND PLACE. Every material fact which serves to constitute the offense charged should be alleged and set forth with precision and certainty as to time<sup>1</sup> and place.<sup>2</sup> After the time has been once stated with certainty it may be referred to in respect to other facts alleged by the terms "then" and "there" without repetition.<sup>3</sup> The offense may be charged as having been committed on a certain day without a continuando.<sup>4</sup> When a continuing offense is charged it may be alleged as taking place between certain dates.<sup>5</sup>

It is enough to aver the crime was committed within the period of limitations without alleging specific acts on specific dates.—State v. Anderson, 140 Iowa 445, 118 N. W. 772.

Where the fact of committing the crime at a certain time and place with a certain woman is first alleged, but to the fact that she was a married woman and the wife of another no time was averred, the indictment is insufficient in not alleging the latter were facts at the time of the offense and not at the time of the indictment.—State v. Thurstin, 35 Me. 205, 58 Am. Dec. 695.

§ 403. NOT HUSBAND AND WIFE. There must be an averment that the parties were not husband and wife.<sup>1</sup> Any form of words stating that she was the wife of some person other than the accused is sufficient.<sup>2</sup> It has been held to be proper to charge in one count that accused was married to another person then living, and in another count that the particeps criminis was married to another person then living.<sup>3</sup>

but the fact is required to be indorsed on the indictment or information under the provisions of the statute<sup>11</sup> in some states, and where so required a failure to comply with the statutory provision is fatal.<sup>12</sup>

Marriage need not be alleged, it has been held, because that fact is necessarily implied by the term "adultery,"<sup>13</sup> but it is thought that the rule requiring marriage to be alleged is the better rule, as nothing can be taken by intendment;<sup>14</sup> and it has been said that it is not necessary to allege that the particeps criminis was married.<sup>15</sup>

§ 405. JOINDER OF THE PARTIES. It is not necessary that both parties to the offense in the crime of adultery shall be indicted,<sup>1</sup> and while they may be jointly indicted,<sup>2</sup> it has been said to be the better practice to indict the parties separately.<sup>3</sup> Where the parties are jointly indicted the jury may convict one and acquit the other,<sup>4</sup> and one party may be legally tried and convicted alone.<sup>5</sup>

§ 406. JOINDER OF OFFENSES. There may be a joint indictment for adultery and fornication<sup>1</sup> and these offenses may be charged in one count,<sup>2</sup> or in separate counts.<sup>3</sup> And a person may be tried at one time on two separate indictments, one charging abduction for purpose of unlawful intercourse, and the other charging adultery with the same girl.<sup>4</sup> But under an indictment charging adultery there can not be a conviction for fornication<sup>5</sup> unless all the elements of fornication have been charged.<sup>6</sup>

§ 407. DUPLICITY. An indictment or information is not open to the charge of duplicity because charging between the same parties different acts of adultery at different times,<sup>1</sup> provided the different acts charged are contained in separate counts; if they are all charged in one count the indictment or information will be bad.<sup>2</sup>

§ 408. Necessary averments.

§ 409. Charging mutual assault also.

§ 408. NECESSARY AVERMENTS. An affray is a common-law offense, but it is defined and the punishment prescribed in many if not most of the states of the Union. The indictment or information,<sup>1</sup> whether drawn under the common law or under statute, must distinctly aver that the offense was committed in a public place,<sup>2</sup> by two or more persons;<sup>3</sup> but it need not aver what kind of a pub-

<sup>2</sup> IND.—State v. Weekly, 29 Ind. 206; State v. Williams, 64 Ind. 553. MO.—State v. Warren, 57 Mo. App. 502. N. C.—State v. Baker, 83 N. C. 649; State v. Griffin, 125 N. C. 692, 34 S. An averment charging fighting occurred "in a certain public road and highway" is sufficient because the court will take judicial notice that "a public road and highway" is a public place.—State v. Warren, 57 Mo. App. 502.

Contra: State v. Weekly, 29 Ind. 206, holding that a "highway" is not necessarily "a public place," within the meaning of the statute.

An averment that the fighting occurred "in the town of Clarksville" is insufficient, because it might still have been in a private place there.—State v. Heflin, 27 Tenn. (8 Humph.) 84.

<sup>3</sup> State v. Woody, 47 N. C. (2 Jones L.) 335; Simpson v. State, 13 Tenn. (5 Yerg.) 336; State v. Priddy, 23 Tenn. (4 Humph.) 429.

Averment defendants fought in a public place, without alleging whom or what they fought, is bad.—State v. Vanloan, 8 Ind. 182.

"Did unlawfully and voluntarily fight together," is sufficient.—State v. Billingsley, 43 Tex. 39.

Charging that defendants "did make an affray by fighting" shows that the defendants fought against each other.—State v. Beuthal, 24 Tenn. (5 Humph.) 519.

It seems that the contrary has been held in State v. Washington, 19 Tex. 128, 70 Am. Dec. 323, wherein fighting was not alleged in express terms, but it was alleged that the defendants with force and arms at a named time lic place,<sup>4</sup> or describe it,<sup>5</sup> or even name any specific place.<sup>6</sup>

The facts constituting the offense must be specifically set out,<sup>7</sup> it not being sufficient to designate the offense by name merely;<sup>8</sup> but it is not necessary to allege in express terms that there was fighting, it being sufficient to charge that the defendants, at a certain time and place, were unlawfully assembled together, and being so unlawfully assembled and arrayed in a warlike manner, then and there did make an affray, to the great terror of divers good citizens,<sup>9</sup> or other like allegations showing the facts constituting the offense sought to be charged.<sup>10</sup>

Venue laid sufficiently where it is alleged that the offense took place within the county in which the indictment is found or information presented, without specifying the particular town or particular place where it occurred.<sup>11</sup>

Charging mutual assault need not set forth the place in order that the court may see that it was a public place.—State v. Baker, 83 N. C. 649.

Words alone do not constitute an affray, but accompanied by acts—e. g., mutually drawing knives or other weapons—and attempting to use them, does constitute the offense.—Hawkins v.

<sup>10</sup> "Beat, strike, kick, and bruise," "in an angry and quarrelsome manner, to the disturbance of others," etc., sufficiently alleges the facts.—State v. Dunn, 73 Mo. 586.

"Unlawfully and willingly fight together" in a public place is sufficient.—State v. Billingsley, 43 Tex. 93.

§ 409. CHARGING MUTUAL ASSAULT ALSO. It is thought to be good pleading to charge mutual assault as well as an affray, because where such assault is charged there may be a conviction of assault and battery where the evidence justifies, but does not warrant a conviction, of an affray;<sup>1</sup> but if mutual assault is not charged, there can be no conviction of the lesser offense.<sup>2</sup>

- § 429. Burning.
- § 430. Attempt to commit arson.

"Was" wilfully burned for "did" wilfully set fire to and burn, etc., held not to vitiate the indictment, on motion in arrest of judgment, it being a mere clerical error.—People v. Duford, 66 Mich. 90, 33 N. W. 28.

and the like.<sup>5</sup> Everything essential to be proved on the trial in order to secure a conviction must be alleged, and as the offense is now a statutory one in probably all the states of the Union, the indictment or information should conclude "against the form of the statute," etc., or it will be bad.<sup>6</sup>

§ 411. — NEGATIVING EXCEPTIONS. We have already seen that where there are provisos and exceptions in the enacting clause of a statute creating and punishing an offense,<sup>1</sup> or in the same clause,<sup>2</sup> they must be negatived in the indictment or information; but where they form no part of the definition of the offense,<sup>3</sup> and are not an element thereof, they need not be negatived.<sup>4</sup> Thus, an indictment or information charging arson need not negative the fact that the accused burned the building with the consent of the owner,<sup>5</sup> that being matter of evidence and defense.<sup>6</sup>

§ 412. — DEFINITENESS AND CERTAINTY. An indictment or information charging arson must state all the facts and circumstances with definiteness and certainty.<sup>1</sup> It has been said that an averment in an indictment in the alternative of "burned or caused to be burned" is bad, for the reason that the facts and circumstances of the

See, also, supra, §§ 143, 144.

<sup>4</sup> Under Florida statute (Gen. Stats. 1906, § 3276), an intent to injure is not an element of the offense, and the offense described in § 3278 has intent to injure as an element, an information under the former section need not negative that the building was burned with intent to injure the insurer.—Goff v. State, 60 Fla. 13, 53 So. 327.

offense are not sufficiently set forth;<sup>2</sup> but this holding has been overruled in a later case by the same court.<sup>3</sup> The careful pleader will follow the general rule already discussed,<sup>4</sup> and allege all disjunctive statements in the statutes in the conjunctive form in the indictment or information.

§ 413. — SURPLUSAGE AND IMMATERIAL AVERMENTS. An indictment or information charging arson following the form prescribed by code or statute,<sup>1</sup> or in the language of the statute,<sup>2</sup> is sufficient; and any unnecessary or immaterial allegation will not vitiate the indictment or information;<sup>3</sup> such additional and unnecessary matter will be treated as surplusage.<sup>4</sup> Thus where the burning constitutes arson, and is equally punishable, whether committed in the daytime or in the night-time, an allegation in the indictment or information charging the arson as having been committed "between the hour of sunset one day and the hour of sunrise the next day" will be treated the crime of conspiracy to burn and burning, for the reason that the conspiracy is merged in the burning.<sup>9</sup> Likewise an allegation in an indictment that the defendant "in the night-time" burned a warehouse does not charge two distinct offenses, where the statute makes it equally arson, and equally punishes, a burning in the daytime or night-time.<sup>10</sup>

Distinct counts may be used to set forth the various acts or steps in the consummation of the alleged offense, or the different ownership of the various buildings burned;<sup>11</sup> and there may be a count for burning a shed or barn under one section of the statute, and a count for doing the same act with intent to burn the dwelling-house under another section of the statute, without rendering the indictment or information open to the charge of duplicity.<sup>12</sup>

Objection that two offenses charged in an indictment or information, the defect can not be reached by demurrer.<sup>13</sup>

§ 415. — AVERMENT AS TO TIME. In the absence of any provision in the particular statute requiring it, an averment as to the time of the offense charged is unnecessary,<sup>1</sup> it is sufficient to allege that the crime was committed on or about a certain date;<sup>2</sup> and it has been said that in those cases where the statute<sup>3</sup> provides that arson in the daytime shall be punished with a shorter

§ 416. — AVERMENT OF DEGREE. The general rule of criminal pleading being that an indictment or information drawn substantially in the language of the statute, setting out all the acts or facts used by the legislature in defining the particular offense charged, is sufficient,<sup>1</sup> except it be as to those cases where particular circumstances are necessary to constitute a complete offense, in

§ 417. — UNNECESSARY AVERMENTS. We have already seen that in an indictment or information charging arson it is not necessary to aver that the burning was not with the consent of the owner;<sup>1</sup> also that averment as to the time of the commission of the offense is unnecessary, in the absence of a statute requiring it;<sup>2</sup> and also that the degree of the arson need not be averred, where the statute divides the offense into degrees, the indictment or information being otherwise sufficient.<sup>3</sup> It need not be averred that the offense was committed vi et armis;<sup>4</sup> and where the ownership of the property burned is laid in a corporation, naming it, there need be no averment as to its incorporation;<sup>5</sup> neither is it necessary to aver or prove that the insurer was a corporation,<sup>6</sup> or that it was authorized to do business in the state.<sup>7</sup>

§ 418. INTENT AND MALICE. Whether there should be a distinct averment of intent to burn, and of malice, in an indictment or information charging arson, depends upon the wording of the particular statute under which drawn. Thus, it has been held that under the statute in Maine,<sup>1</sup>

New York,<sup>2</sup> North Carolina<sup>3</sup> and Texas,<sup>4</sup> an intent to burn need not be alleged, because that fact will be presumed; on the other hand, it has been held that such averment is necessary in Arkansas,<sup>5</sup> California,<sup>6</sup> Maryland,<sup>7</sup> Mississippi<sup>8</sup> and Missouri,<sup>9</sup> and perhaps elsewhere.

§ 419. — SUFFICIENCY OF AVERMENT. At common law the indictment must aver the offense to have been committed wilfully and maliciously as well as feloniously;<sup>1</sup> the word "unlawfully" can not be substituted for "maliciously";<sup>2</sup> and it has been held that unless the burning is alleged to have been maliciously done a motion to quash will lie,<sup>3</sup> though some of the cases are to the effect that an averment that the accused "wilfully and feloniously" set fire to, is equivalent to an averment that the act was done "wilfully, maliciously, and unlawfully."<sup>4</sup>

Every intent an element of arson under the statute, must be alleged,<sup>5</sup> and for that reason an allegation of intent to destroy the building is necessary under the statute of California<sup>6</sup> and statutes similarly worded.<sup>7</sup> It has been said that an allegation that a burning was "wilfully and maliciously" done is sufficient without an averment that the act was done with "malice aforethought";<sup>8</sup> and that a charge that the act was "unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously" done, is sufficient, because this is equivalent to a charge that it was "wilfully" done.<sup>9</sup>

Statute in disjunctive, "wilfully or maliciously" burn, indictment or information in the conjunctive, "wilfully and maliciously" burn, is sufficient.<sup>10</sup>

§ 420. — INTENT TO INJURE OR DEFRAUD. At common law, or under a statute making wilful burning arson, the indictment or information need not allege intent;<sup>1</sup> but under many of the state statutes it is held that there must be an allegation of intent to injure by the setting fire to and burning,<sup>2</sup> although some cases hold that there need not be an intent to injure a particular person.<sup>3</sup>

On the other hand, it has been held to be an insufficient description of the building to allege the burning of "a building called a 'saloon,' " because of the fact that such allegation does not show the purpose for which the building was used;<sup>27</sup> the word "jail" is insufficient, without an averment that it is a dwelling-house, and fatally defective, under the Missouri statute in the case of a charge of first degree arson;<sup>28</sup> a "merry-go-round" charged to have been wilfully burned, the indictment will be insufficient to charge a crime under the Louisiana statute unless it contains averment that the outfit formed a part of a stock of goods, or that it was held as an article of trade;<sup>29</sup> and an allegation of the burning of "a saw-mill," has been held to be insufficient, for the reason that a saw-mill is not necessarily a building, and for that reason the indictment is not sufficient under a statute prohibiting the burning of "any building" other than a dwelling-house, in the absence of a distinct averment that the saw-mill was a building.<sup>30</sup>

§ 423. — AVERMENTS AS TO LOCATION. An indictment or information charging arson, aside from the averments as to location within the county, as specified in the last section, need contain no averments or allegations as to

§ 426. — SUFFICIENCY OF AVERMENT AS TO. Ownership of the building burned may be laid in one to whom a deed has been executed to indemnify him as surety on grantor's appearance bond;<sup>1</sup> in one holding the property in trust,<sup>2</sup> even though the accused had a contingent interest therein and was in the actual occupancy of the building;<sup>3</sup> in the owner of the fee<sup>4</sup> or, under statute,<sup>5</sup> in the <sup>2</sup> Ownership may be laid in the holder of the legal title, although he may not be in possession.—Hutchinson v. State, 28 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 595.

Trustee of property held in trust may be laid as the owner, although accused had contingent interest therein.—Lipschitz v. People, 25 Colo. 261, 53 Pac. 1111.

"Barn of one Laura Wolf," charged to have been burned, sufficiently alleges possession by her in her own right.—Wolf v. State, 53 Ind. 30.

Belonging to A & B, a partnership composed of A and B, sufficiently describes the ownership where A purchased the house burned and deeded an undivided half interest therein to B, his partner.—People v. Greening, 102 Cal. 381, 36 Pac. 665.

House "of" a named person charged to have been burned is sufficient allegation that it was the property of that person.—Jordan v. State, 142 Ind. 422, 41 N. E. 817.

"Owned by A" sufficient allegation of ownership of house burned by setting fire to rags in the cellar of the house, location particularly described; it does not allege ownership of the rags.—State v. Tenneborn, 92 Iowa 551, 61 N. W. 193.

Tenant on shares using barn on farm merely for purpose of storing crops raised, on charge of arson for burning the barn, property is properly described as belonging to the owner.—People v. Smith, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 226.

Title in A subject to dower-right of B, the indictment properly describes the property as belonging to A and B.—People v. Eaton, 59 Mich. 559, 26 N. W. 702.

Where indictment charges ownership in defendant and fails to aver its occupancy in possession by any one, the presumption is that the defendant was in possession.—People v. De Winton, 113 Cal. 403, 54 Am. St. Rep. 357, 33 L. R. A. 374, 45 Pac. 708.

Validity of title is not an element entering into the sufficiency of description of the property as to the ownership thereof. See Tuller v. State, 8 Tex. App. 501; Wyley v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. Rep. 514, 31 S. W. 393.

An averment that the building was "in the possession of and occupied by" accused alleges his tenancy sufficiently.—Kelley v. State, 44 Tex. Cr. Rep. 187, 62 S. W. 991.

Room leased as store in a building, balance of which is occupied leged in the alternative.<sup>7</sup> It has been said that the property may properly be described as that of the defendant, although not actually used or occupied by him.<sup>8</sup>

"No. 139 Dolores street, in the City of San Francisco, the property of one Ellen Bolton, and occupied by" the accused, has been said to be a sufficient description of the ownership, as the property is sufficiently identified regardless of the name of the owner, because the ownership of the house becomes immaterial as being a necessary part of the description of the crime charged.<sup>9</sup>

"Then and there the property of one A,<sup>10</sup> and was then and there the dwelling-house of one B," has been held to be a defective allegation, because of the uncertainty as to whether the building burned was the dwelling-house of A or B, and because the indictment could not be made good by the rejection of surplusage.<sup>11</sup>

§ 427. — OF PUBLIC BUILDING. In an indictment or information charging arson of a public building, the ownership of the building is not required to be alleged,<sup>1</sup> such as a public meeting house,<sup>2</sup> a county jail,<sup>3</sup> and the like; the court takes judicial notice that county jails and other public buildings are the property of the county where located.<sup>4</sup>

Jail a dwelling-house, under the statute, of any person having charge of it or of any person lodged therein, an indictment or information for burning it must allege ownership,<sup>5</sup> but such ownership is properly laid in the jailer or sheriff who occupies it.<sup>6</sup>

§ 428. OCCUPANCY OR POSSESSION—NECESSITY OF AVERMENT AS TO. No uniform rule obtains in the various states as to the necessity of averment in the indictment or information as to the occupancy or possession of the building, in some of the states such an averment being necessary,<sup>1</sup> while in others it is not<sup>2</sup> when the charge is that of burning a dwelling-house. Public building alleged to have been burned it is not essential that the indictment or information shall set out who, if anybody, occupied it at the time.<sup>5</sup>

Human beings in burned building being by statute an aggravation of the offense, there must be an allegation in the indictment or information that there was a human being in the building at the time of the burning, and the words of the statute should be set out in full.<sup>6</sup>

Joint occupancy is, in law, the possession of all who so occupy, and an indictment or information charging arson must so describe the occupancy.<sup>7</sup>

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Assault and Battery.

- § 431. Form, requisites and sufficiency in general.
- § 432. Allegation as to intent and malice. —
- § 433. Allegation of present ability.
- § 434. Allegation of acts constituting the assault.
- § 435. Allegation of matter in aggravation.
- § 436. Description of person accused.

- § 440. Joinder of persons.

An indictment or information charging assault, or assault and battery, which follows the language of the statute is sufficient;<sup>2</sup> the means by which the assault was committed need not be alleged.<sup>3</sup> It need not be alleged that the assault, or the assault and battery, was committed unlawfully,<sup>4</sup> although a different rule prevails in

Language of statute being "in a rude, insolent, and angry manner," an allegation that defendant "feloniously, purposely, and with premeditated malice did beat, strike, kick, tramp, trample upon, and wound," while sufficient under the statute, such departure from the statutory language is not approved.—Sloan v. State, 42 Ind. 2.

<sup>4</sup> GA.—Badger v. State, 5 Ga. App. 477, 63 S. E. 532. ILL.—People v. Cantwell, 160 Ill. App. 652, affirmed in 253 Ill. 57, 97 N. E. 287. ME.—State v. Creighton, 98 Me. 424, 57 Atl. 592. MO.—State v. Bray, 1 Mo. 180. TEX.—State v. Lutterloh, 22 Tex. 210; State v. Hays, 41 Tex. 526; State v. Hartman, 41 Tex. 562.

Committed in unlawful manner should be alleged.—State v. Mur-

Indiana;<sup>5</sup> neither need it be alleged that the offense was committed publicly or to the terror of citizens,<sup>6</sup> as in the case of an affray;<sup>7</sup> nor that the act was feloniously<sup>8</sup> or wilfully done.<sup>9</sup>

A simple assault charged, the indictment or information may be good without averments as to striking, beating or wounding.<sup>10</sup>

Battery charged, the material facts of the battery must be set forth in the indictment or information;<sup>11</sup> but an allegation that the defendant did intentionally and wrongphy, 21 Ind. 441; Cranor v. State, 39 Ind. 64.

"Made in a rude, insolent, and angry manner," should be alleged, under statute.—Cranor v. State, 39 Ind. 64.

"Shoot towards, at, and against the body of" person named held not sufficient because not necessarily importing that act was done in a rude, insolent, or angry manner.—McCulley v. State, 62 Ind. 428.

A charge that defendant "did unlawfully commit an assault and battery on the person of M., by then and there in a rude, insolent, and angry manner, touching, striking, beating," etc., is insufficient for failure to allege that the touching, etc., was unlawful.—State v. Smith, 74 Ind. 557.

An unlawful touching, etc., is sufficiently charged in the words that the defendant "did in a rude, violent, insolent, angry, and unlawful manner, touch, beat, and strike him the said W."—Parker v. State, 118 Ind. 328, 20 N. E. 833.

An averment that the act was feloniously done is equivalent to an averment that it was unlawfully done.—Hays v. State, 77 Ind. 450.

Where the information charged that defendants "unlawfully, wilfully, and purposely, and with premeditated knowledge, in a rude, insolent, and angry manner, touch" him with intent to "feloniously, wilfully, purposely, and with premeditated malice to kill and murder," there was a sufficient charge of assault and battery, the words attempting to charge a felonious intent being mere surplusage.—Barnett v. State, 22 Ind. App. 599, 54 N. E. 414.

fully assault, beat, cut, and wound a party named, sufficiently alleges the battery.<sup>12</sup>

Serious damage done to victim, such damage must be described as to character and extent so that the court may see from the face of the indictment or information the particular facts and that the offense designated in the statute is charged.<sup>13</sup>

Conclusion of indictment or information should be in the words "against the form of the statute," etc.,<sup>14</sup> otherwise it will be fatally defective in some jurisdictions,<sup>15</sup> though the contrary has been held in other jurisdictions.<sup>16</sup>

§ 432. ALLEGATION AS TO INTENT AND MALICE. The necessity of pleading intent and malice in an indictment or information charging an assault, or an assault and battery, depends entirely upon the wording and provisions of the statute under which drawn, and what is herein set forth must be taken in connection with the wording of the particular statute under which the decision is made. An assault being an intentional attempt to do injury by violence<sup>1</sup> to the person of another,<sup>2</sup> it has been held that an indictment or information charging an assault must

Assault being made a statutory offense, the word "assault" in the statute is to be given its established meaning in the criminal law, unless limited or qualified by the words and provisions of the statute;<sup>5</sup> and as intent is implied in "assault,"<sup>6</sup> the intent with which the act is done not being made an ingredient of the offense,<sup>7</sup> the intent need not be charged,<sup>8</sup> even in the case of an aggravated assault.<sup>9</sup>

§ 435. ALLEGATION OF MATTER IN AGGRAVATION. An indictment or information charging an assault to commit a felony should designate the felony attempted to be committed.<sup>1</sup> Aggravating circumstances alleged do not change the character of the assault made; the assault is the original offense and the intent with which made and the means made use of simply aggravate the original offense and affect the punishment to be inflicted, where the statute establishes different grades of the offense and attaches more severe punishment to some of the grades thus established than is affixed to other grades;<sup>2</sup> for this reason it is proper to insert various matters which tend to aggravate the original offense,<sup>3</sup> although such allegation is not essential to the validity of the indictment under perhaps a majority of the statutes;<sup>4</sup> e. g., it need not be alleged that the assault was with a deadly weapon,<sup>5</sup> or that it was done under such circumstances that, had death ensued, it would have been manslaughter,<sup>6</sup> or that the person assaulted was an officer of the law in the discharge of his duties as such;<sup>7</sup> but where there is an allegation that the person assaulted was an officer, there

Assault by force being charged, however, the indictment or information should set out the particular means used, under the statutory provisions in some states.<sup>9</sup>

§ 436. DESCRIPTION OF PERSON ACCUSED. An indictment or information charging an assault must describe the accused by naming him, and where he is known by two names he may be charged by either name,<sup>1</sup> but the name of the accused need not be repeated in the clause of the indictment reciting that "the said . . . then and there having," etc;<sup>2</sup> and where accused is indicted as "John B. Doe," the charge that the assault was committed by "John Doe," will not render the instrument bad,<sup>3</sup> it not being necessary to allege more than one Christian name, since the law knows one only, and where an initial of a second Christian name is given it may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>4</sup>

Name unknown to grand jury, indictment should allege that the name of the assaulted is to the grand jury unknown, and if the indictment is otherwise sufficient it will be good without the name of the person assaulted.<sup>8</sup>

§ 438. ALLEGATION AS TO TIME. It has been said that the general rule of criminal pleading which requires that the indictment or information must set out distinctly the time of the offense charged or the instrument will be fatally defective<sup>1</sup> applies to an indictment or information charging an assault or an assault and battery;<sup>2</sup> that allegation offense may be rejected without injuring complaint, where name of victim properly given in another part of complaint.—Com. v. Randall, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 36.

of a day within the period of limitation is material where the offense is subject to a limitation as to the time within which it may be prosecuted,<sup>3</sup> for it is an elementary rule of criminal pleading that when the time for prosecuting the offense is limited the indictment or information must lay the time of the act within the period limited or it will be fatally defective, even after verdict.<sup>4</sup> However, there is a line of cases holding—and this will apply with especial force to assault, it is thought—that the time at which an offense is committed is not material, unless time is of the essence or gist of the offense,<sup>5</sup> but that it will be sufficient if the evidence shows it to have been committed within the time limit fixed by statute for the prosecution of such offenses.<sup>6</sup>

Under statute the necessity of averring the time of an assault may be dispensed with.<sup>7</sup>

§ 439. ALLEGATION AS TO PLACE. The place or venue of an assault is a necessary averment in an indictment or information charging an assault in any of its phases,<sup>1</sup> but an averment that the offense was committed within the county sufficiently lays the venue.<sup>2</sup>

§ 442. Allegation as to place.

§ 443. Bill or note of particulars.

§ 441. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> An indictment or information charging barratry is an exception to the general rule requiring that a certain description of the offense charged be set out together with the facts constituting the same,<sup>2</sup> and an indictment is good which merely charges the accused generally as a common<sup>3</sup> barrator.<sup>4</sup>

Conclusion of the indictment or information should be "against the peace," and need not be "contrary to the form of the statute," etc., because the offense existed at common law, but if the indictment does so conclude it will not be vitiated thereby, it has been said, for the reason that the mode of trial is regulated by statute.<sup>5</sup>

§ 442. ALLEGATION AS TO PLACE. In an indictment for barratry it is not necessary to allege any particular place of the commission of the offense, because the crime con-

§ 443. BILL OR NOTE OF PARTICULARS.<sup>1</sup> A bill of particulars, or note of the particulars, as to the acts constituting the offense charged must be furnished by the prosecution when demand is made therefor by the accused, which bill must be a note of the particular acts upon which the prosecution will rely,<sup>2</sup> and such acts of barratry, only, as are contained in the bill of particulars or notice can be given in evidence at the trial.<sup>3</sup>

Technical nicety is not essential to the sufficiency of the bill of particulars or notice; if it identifies the several legal proceedings intended to be relied upon so that the defendant, by perusing the bill or notice, can readily find the records of the several proceedings, it is sufficient.<sup>4</sup>

The bill of particulars no part of record in the case, and for that reason can furnish no ground for motion in arrest of judgment.<sup>5</sup>

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Bastardy.

§ 444. Requisites and sufficiency of indictment.

§ 444. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> The offense of begetting bastard children being purely of statutory regulation, an indictment charging accused with being the father of a bastard child in the general terms of the statute, setting out all of the facts essential to constitute the offense and to enable the defendant to make his defense, stating the nature of the offense so plainly that it can be easily understood by the jury, is sufficient.<sup>2</sup> The indictment or information must distinctly allege that accused is the actual father,<sup>3</sup> not the putative father of the bastard child,<sup>4</sup> but it need not be averred that the accused has, in a bastardy proceeding, been adjudged to be the father of the child.<sup>5</sup>

Failure to provide maintenance and education being the charge, sufficient to allege accused the father, and that he refused to give security when required to do so "in terms of the law" by the magistrate, held to be sufficient.—Walker v. State, 5 Ga. 491. See Ogg v. State, 73 Ohio St. 59, 75 N. E. 943.

In South Carolina, it seems that it is necessary to charge mother a white woman.—State v. Clark, 2 Brev. (S. C.) 386; State v. Clements, 1 Speers (S. C.) 48.

Birth of child alive<sup>6</sup> or within the county,<sup>7</sup> need not be alleged, it being sufficient that the child was begotten within the county.<sup>8</sup> Under some statutes,<sup>9</sup> however, the offense is not complete until the birth of the child, yet under these statutes the time of birth need not be alleged, or may be alleged on a future date.<sup>10</sup>

Twins delivered at same time, the father may be charged with both in one indictment,<sup>11</sup> or may be separately indicted for each child, but where prosecuted on two separate indictments each indictment must contain a description of the sex,<sup>12</sup> complexion, etc., of each child sufficient for a separate identification.<sup>13</sup>

Child likely to become public charge need not be alleged,<sup>14</sup> it seems, unless the information by a person other than the mother.<sup>15</sup>

Residence of child and mother should be set out in the indictment so that accused, if convicted, may be compelled to give recognizance to the proper county,<sup>16</sup> although it has been said that an allegation as to the county in which the child is at the time of the indictment is sufficient without averring the residence of the mother.<sup>17</sup>

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Bigamy.

§ 445. Requisites and sufficiency of indictment.

§ 446. Unnecessary allegations.

§ 447. Negating exceptions in statute.

§ 448. Venue.

§ 445. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> To constitute the crime of bigamy, it being necessary to allege and prove that there were two distinct marriages to different persons, and that at the time of the second marriage the first spouse was living and undivorced,<sup>2</sup> an indictment or information charging the offense of bigamy should follow substantially the language of the statute under which drawn,<sup>3</sup> and must contain an averment of a

Under Illinois statute, it is sufficient where the indictment refers to the first wife as "being then living" and to the defendant as "well knowing" that she was then alive.—Hiller v. People, 156 Ill. 511, 47 Am. St. Rep. 221, 41 N. E. 181.

Under North Carolina statute, where the indictment alleges that at the time of the second marriage the accused knew that his first wife was living, that was a sufficient allegation.—State v. Davis, 109 N. C. 780, 14 S. E. 55.

Under Oklahoma statutes, 1893, § 2181, this averment is necessary, but under § 4551 it is unnecessary.—Niece v. Territory, 9 Okla. 535, 60 Pac. 300.

Under Texas Penal Code, an indictment alleging that defendant unlawfully married a named person, "he then and there having a lawful former wife then living," is fatally defective.—McAfee v. State, 38 Tex. Cr. Rep. 124, 41 S. W. 627; Bryan v. State, 54 Tex. Cr. Rep. 18, 16 Ann. Cas. 515, 111 S. W. 744.

In Kentucky it is held that is not in itself completely descriptive of the offense and it is insufficient to follow the words of the statute.—Davis v. Com., 76 Ky. (13 Bush) 318, 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 163.

Substantial compliance with form prescribed in code or statute sufficient.—Esser v. State (Tex. Cr.), 66 S. W. 776.

Polygamous marriage charged in the language of the statute, not bad because it charges in the same count polygamous cohabitation following such marriage.—United States v. Tenney, 2 Ariz. 29, 8 Pac. 295.

<sup>4</sup> Sauser v. People, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 302 (insufficient averment of); State v. Davis, 109 N. C. 780, 14 S. E. 55 (sufficiently stated); May v. State, 4 Tex. App. 424; McAfee v. State, 38 Tex. Cr. Rep. 124, 4 S. W. 627; Bryan v. State, 54 Tex. Cr. Rep. 18, 16 Ann. Cas. 515, 111 S. W. 744.

Felonious and unlawful marriage to another, "then and there being married," and the first spouse living and undivorced, sufficiently charges bigamy.—Com. v. McGrath, 140 Mass. 296, 6 N. E. 515.

First marriage is a mere matter of inducement.—Cathron v. State, 40 Fla. 468, 24 So. 496.

"Having a former wife living," held a sufficient allegation.—Par- ker v. State, 77 Ala. 47, 54 Am. Rep. 43.

Particulars of first marriage need not be stated.—Cathron v. State, 40 Fla. 468, 24 So. 496.

Enough as to the former marriage should be stated to apprise the defendant in general terms of the proof to be adduced by the state to establish it.—Bryan v. State, 54 Tex. Cr. Rep. 18, 16 Ann. Cas. 515, 111 S. W. 744.

Two women as and for wives at one and the same time being charged, the indictment was held sufficient in State v. Sherwood, 68 Vt. 414, 35 Atl. 352.

"Unlawfully" married a named woman "having another wife living," sufficiently charges the offense.—Com. v. Whaley, 69 Ky. (6 Bush) 266.

Contra: State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa 165, 11 N. W. 706.

As to sufficiency of allegation of wife living, see State v. Jenkins, 139 Mo. 535, 41 S. W. 220.

Allegation that at time of second marriage, defendant had a lawful wife, held sufficient.—Ferrell v. State, 45 Fla. 25, 34 So. 220.

Divorcees not permitted to marry within six months, indictment charging bigamy against person divorced within six months need not allege accused had former spouse living at time of second marriage.—Niece v. Territory, 9 Okla. 535, 60 Pac. 300.

statutes,<sup>6</sup> and must aver that the accused knew such first spouse was living at the time of the second marriage;<sup>7</sup> but the indictment need not aver that such former marriage was a lawful one,<sup>8</sup> that the parties had a legal right to marry,<sup>9</sup> or the date on which<sup>10</sup> or the place where<sup>11</sup> the first marriage took place. The indictment or information must also contain an allegation of a second marriage<sup>12</sup> and that it was unlawful,<sup>13</sup> stating the place of such second marriage<sup>14</sup> at a time prior to the finding of the indict-

Contra: King v. State, 40 Ga. 244.

Time and place of first marriage, while there are some reasons why it should be given, is not the important factor, which is the second marriage.—People v. Perriman, 72 Mich. 184, 40 N. W. 425.

As to effect of failure to allege place, see State v. Meyer, 13 Mo. App. 596.

<sup>12</sup> In re Watson, 19 R. I. 342, 33 Atl. 873; May v. State, 4 Tex. App. 424.

Existence of two marriages is the important factor.—People v. Perriman, 72 Mich. 184, 40 N. W. 425.

<sup>13</sup> Parker v. State, 77 Ala. 47, 54 Am. Rep. 43; Teston v. State, 66 Fla. 244, 63 So. 433.

Compare: Ferrell v. State, 45 Fla. 25, 34 So. 220.

An allegation that the defendant was lawfully married to the second wife simply means that the second marriage was performed lawfully according to the usual forms and ceremonies required by law.—Rice v. Com., 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1354, 105 S. W. 123.

"Felonious," allegation that second marriage was, sufficient without averment that it was "unlawful."—Kopke v. People, 43 Mich. 41, 4 N. W. 551.

<sup>14</sup> Cathron v. State, 40 Fla. 468, 24 So. 496.

Date and place of second marriage need not be stated under ment or filing the information,<sup>15</sup> and must set out the name of the person with whom the second and bigamous marriage was contracted.<sup>16</sup>

Bigamy a misdemeanor under the statute, an indictment charging that the accused acted "feloniously," will be bad.<sup>17</sup>

Polygamy by statute where party having a spouse living and undivorced cohabits as husband and wife with another, indictment charging the offense must bring the accused clearly within the statute;<sup>18</sup> and where the statute prohibits the guilty spouse divorced by the injured spouse from remarrying, making remarriage polygamy, an indictment charging the offense must allege the divorce, that the accused was the guilty cause thereof, and all the other facts necessary to bring the accused within the statute.<sup>19</sup> As the offense, under the statute, may be committed in divers ways, the indictment must state the particular manner of commission of the offense charged.<sup>20</sup>

Unlawful cohabitation continued within the state, or an unlawful marriage contracted out of the state, by statute, constituting the offense of bigamy, the indictment or information alleging the unlawful marriage<sup>21</sup> in another state, must also allege cohabitation continued

North Carolina statute, where the indictment follows the language of the statute.—State v. Long, 143 N. C. 670, 57 S. E. 349.

sufficient to charge the crime under the statute, because the phrase "while she was his wife" relates to the second marriage in Illinois and not to the cohabitation in Oregon.—State v. Durphy, 43 Ore. 79, 71 Pac. 63.

within the state,<sup>22</sup> because that fact constitutes the gist of the offense charged, and without such allegation there will be no offense charged under the statute.<sup>23</sup>

§ 446. UNNECESSARY ALLEGATIONS. As to what are and what are not unnecessary allegations in an indictment or information charging bigamy, is a matter depending almost entirely upon the wording of the statute under which the indictment or information is drawn. Because of the diverse and conflicting provisions of the statutes of the different states there is a want of harmony in the decisions on this question, and no general rule can be laid down which will be applicable to, and govern in, all jurisdictions. However, it is trusted that what is here collected and set forth may be of material assistance to pleaders in the various jurisdictions.

It has been held to be unnecessary in an indictment or information charging the offense of bigamy to allege that it was committed with force and arms;<sup>1</sup> to set out the name of the first spouse;<sup>2</sup> that the person thus married

As to sufficiency of allegation of continuous cohabitation after unlawful marriage in another state, while having lawful spouse living, see State v. Stuart, 194 Mo. 345, 112 Am. St. Rep. 529, 92 S. W. 878.

Continuous cohabitation not alleged where charge was unlawfully marrying in another state while first spouse still living, indictment held not to be bad for failure to allege same.—State v. Steupper, 117 Iowa 519, 91 N. W. 912.

Under Alabama Criminal Code, 1896, § 4902, it is unnecessary to aver in the indictment that the bigamous cohabitation occurred in the state or within the county.—Caldwell v. State, 146 Ala. 141, 41 So. 473.

Second marriage, alleged to have taken place "on — day of September, 1891," "he then and there having a wife living to whom he was married on September 19, 1891," held to be good and sufficient, the allegation as to date of first marriage being manifestly a clerical error.—*Faustre v. "Bigamy," eo nomine, need not appear in the indictment or information. The prudent pleader, however, will not omit that word, even though it has been frequently held that an indictment or information will be sufficient where the offense is charged therein in words of equivalent import with those used in the statute denouncing the offense sought to be charged;<sup>11</sup> and particularly is this true in those cases in which the words employed more particularly describe the offense than the word or words used in the statute.<sup>12</sup> Where the statute makes a common-law offense indictable, describing it by its technical term merely, e. g., "arson," "burglary," "murder," etc., we have already seen that it is not sufficient to charge the offense by its technical name merely;<sup>13</sup> and this rule applies in the case of bigamy.

Where terms used ultra technical, and their meaning not generally known, the rule is otherwise. Thus, in the case of the California crimes of "Fellatio" and "Cunnilingus" (Kerr's Cal. Pen. Code, 1915, § 288a), only the privileged few know what the statute defines and prohibits, consequently an indictment in the language of the

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Blasphemy.

§ 449. Form and sufficiency of indictment.

§ 449. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> Where the statutory offense of blasphemy may be committed in two or more ways—e. g., by profane swearing and also by denying or contumeliously reproaching the Deity—an averment of the commission of the offense in either of these ways is sufficient.<sup>2</sup> An indictment or information charging the offense of blasphemy in the language of the statute is sufficient;<sup>3</sup> the locality of the offense need not be averred,<sup>4</sup> except where swearing in a public place is charged, as pointed out in last paragraph of this section.

Averment of facts sufficient on the face of the indictment or information to make out, under the statute, the offense sought to be charged, is necessary,<sup>5</sup> and an indictment or information which fails to allege that the profane language was used or uttered in the presence and within the hearing of other persons,<sup>6</sup> and that it was heard by Complaint before justice need not aver oaths used "profanely."—Johnson v. Barclay, 16 N. J. L. (1 Harr.) 1.

General averment charging both ways but the specifications set out amount to the commission in but one way it is sufficient.—Com. v. Kneeland, 37 Mass. (20 Pick.) 206.

§ 450. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> The crime of bribery being a purely statutory offense in probably all of the states, an indictment or information charging the offense, which must not be argumentative,<sup>2</sup> must state the facts with such certainty and precision as to conform to the provisions of the statute under which drawn, and bring accused clearly within same,<sup>3</sup> and at the same time sufficiently inform the accused of the exact charge he is called upon to meet, under the constitutional guarantee that a person accused of crime shall be advised

To charge that the money received was "the pretended and ostensible price, consideration, and value of certain worthless and unmarketable shares of stock" was a mere matter of evidence.—State v. Meysenburg, 171 Mo. 1, 71 S. W. 229.

of "the nature and cause of action against him";<sup>4</sup> and to accomplish this constitutional requirement the indictment or information must set out the name of the person or corporation by or to whom the bribe was offered or received.<sup>5</sup>

Corrupt intent must be alleged,<sup>6</sup> but an averment that the money, or other thing of value, was wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously given, or offered, sufficiently charges the corrupt intent of the accused.<sup>7</sup>

Indictment following language of statute,<sup>8</sup> or substantially in the language of the statute,<sup>9</sup> is sufficient in those Accused, a member of the board of surgeons, is charged with asking "a gratuity, the nature of which is unknown," with intent to have his official action influenced, he is not sufficiently informed of what evidence he must meet.—United States v. Kessel, 62 Fed. 57.

Member of board of surgeons indicted under Federal Rev. Stats., § 5501, 1 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., p. 715, charging he did unlawfully ask a "gratuity, the nature of which is to the grand jury unknown," with intent to have his official action influenced thereby, held to be insufficient for the reason that it did not inform accused of what he was to meet in evidence.—United States v. Kessel, 62 Fed. 57.

Uncertainty as to whether charge under city ordinance or state statute can not be raised by demurrer under Kerr's Cal. Pen. Code, 1915, § 1004. See People v. Markham, 64 Cal. 157, 49 Am. Rep. 700, 30 Pac. 620.

cases in which the statute contains all the essential elements of the bribery sought to be charged;<sup>10</sup> but is insufficient in those cases in which all the elements are not set out in the statute.<sup>11</sup> Where the statute sets forth with clearness and precision all the things which constitute the offense of bribery, nothing further need be averred;<sup>12</sup> the subject-matter concerning which the accused attempted to corrupt, or consented to be corrupted, being mere matter of inducement, need not be described with certainty in the indictment or information.<sup>13</sup> To this general rule, however, there are some well-recognized exceptions, noted below:

out the particular thing offered, alleging that it had a certain specific value.<sup>16</sup>

— Bribing officer being charged by the indictment or information in the language of the statute, it must further be averred that the accused knew that the person to whom the bribe was given, or was offered, held a designated public official position;<sup>17</sup> but this express allegation is unnecessary when that fact is necessarily implied.<sup>18</sup> An indictment under the California Penal Code,<sup>19</sup> and statutes with like provisions, charging accused with having offered a bribe, or to whom a bribe was given, was "a member of the board of trustees of a corporation," naming it, which fails to allege that such corporation is either a public or a quasi-public corporation, is fatally defective.<sup>20</sup>

— Bribing witness, or attempting to bribe a witness, being charged in the language of the statute, it is necessary<sup>21</sup> that the indictment or information shall further allege that the accused knew that such person was a witness in the cause,<sup>22</sup> unless that knowledge is necessarily implied from the indictment.<sup>23</sup>

tion charging accused with soliciting a bribe must state the facts constituting the alleged offense;<sup>3</sup> these facts can not be inferred from the allegation of a conclusion of law;<sup>4</sup> but the means of solicitation need not be set out.<sup>5</sup> Thus, under a statute<sup>6</sup> defining bribery as any reward to a person, or to another "at his instance," an indictment or information charging accused, as a voter, with soliciting a bribe for his vote, need not allege that the reward was offered to another at the instance of the accused, where it is alleged that the offer was made to influence, and did influence, the accused as councilman in his vote at the election.<sup>7</sup> An allegation that a public officer wilfully, unlawfully and feloniously asked and agreed to receive a specified bribe, on an understanding that his action on a public matter pending before or coming before him should be influenced thereby, sufficiently charges the offense of soliciting a bribe.<sup>8</sup> A member of the legislature being charged with soliciting a bribe, the indictment or information need not allege that the matter to be voted or acted on was at the time pending in the legislature;<sup>9</sup> but an indictment against a town assessor charging an offer to receive a bribe to reduce the assessment of certain real estate, must aver that the real estate was situated in the town where the accused was acting as assessor.<sup>10</sup> A juror being charged with asking and agreeing to receive a bribe to vote for a particular verdict or for a specified party, is sufficient without charging that he asked for or agreed to receive it upon any agreement or understanding with the person approached that he would cast his vote in consideration thereof; it being sufficient to aver that the accused offered to or was ready to make such an agreement or understanding.<sup>11</sup> Where the accused is charged with soliciting a bribe to absent himself as a witness from the trial of the cause, the indictment need not directly aver that accused was a witness or about to be called at the time of the offense, where this must necessarily be inferred from the facts alleged.<sup>12</sup> accusation of the offense of bribery. We have already seen<sup>1</sup> that where several persons are jointly interested in the commission of a crime, and the evidence as to the acts constituting the crime applies equally to two or more persons, they may be joined in the same indictment;<sup>2</sup> the innocence or guilt of one is not affected by that of one or more of the others.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the House of Delegates, one of the branches of the municipal assembly of St. Louis, jointly made and entered into a corrupt agreement to vote for a measure to come before them in their official capacity, and for the commission of this act were charged with bribery and jointly indicted, the indictment was upheld, the court saying that "it was but one transaction, the same subject-matter, the same purposes were designed to be accomplished, the performance of the same functions rested upon all alike, and we are of the opinion that it is in harmony with the objects and purposes of good pleading, as well as with the spirit of the statute, to present the issue made by the charge to all who are interested by joining them in one indictment."<sup>4</sup>

§ 456. DUPPLICITY. The general rules of criminal pleading respecting duplicity are applicable in charges of bribery. The fact that an indictment or information alleges that the accused corruptly accepted a gift and gratuity and a promise to make a gift, does not render it duplicitous;<sup>1</sup> and where the accusing part of an indictment or information names the offense charged as bribery, and the descriptive part sets out an attempt to bribe, it will not be bad for duplicity.<sup>2</sup> In those jurisdictions in which, under the statute, the offense of bribery may be committed in one of many ways the indictment or information may charge, in one count, its commission in any or all of the ways mentioned in the statute.<sup>3</sup> An indictment charging that accused corruptly offered money to influence the official action of A, a member of the legislature and also a member of the house committee on public works, to vote for a certain bill, is not duplicitous;<sup>4</sup> and it has been held that an indictment is not duplicitous where the receiving of a bribe and the conspiracy to do an unlawful act are alleged in two counts, but it is stated in the second count that there is no intention to charge two crimes, the object being merely to so vary the charge as to meet the proof.<sup>5</sup>

all the elements of the offense, and does not set forth with clearness and reasonable certainty the particular offense sought to be charged so as to (1) apprise the accused of the nature and circumstances of the accusation against him so that he may prepare his defense, and (2) may plead any judgment that may be rendered as a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense;<sup>4</sup> in such cases a more particular statement of the facts and circumstances must be averred.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where the statute specifies particular acts and things as constituting burglary, and then declares, in alternative words, that the offense may be committed otherwise by acts and things which are not specifically designated, but are described or classified generally as having something in common with those, or with some of those, which are specified, an indictment in the language of the statute will not be sufficient to cover the offense in a manner or by a means other than those particularized in the statute as sufficient to constitute the offense;<sup>6</sup> in such a case the indictment

or information must particularize the things or means other than those specifically mentioned in the statute which are relied upon;<sup>7</sup> in other words, must in addition to the language of the statute contain an averment setting forth the facts and circumstances constituting the offense charged.<sup>8</sup>

§ 459. — NEGATIVING EXCEPTIONS. The general rules already discussed<sup>1</sup> relative to the necessity and sufficiency of negativing exceptions, applies to an indictment or information charging burglary, and such exceptions and provisos, only, as are descriptive of the offense need be negatived.<sup>2</sup> Thus, under the California statute<sup>3</sup> exempting children under fourteen years of age from the class capable of committing crime, an indictment or information charging burglary need not allege that accused is not under fourteen years of age;<sup>4</sup> and under the Wisconsin statute<sup>5</sup> establishing a lower grade of burglary and providing a less punishment where the building burglarized is "not adjacent to or occupied with a dwelling," and other like provisions as to entering in

The necessity for the pleader to make use of certain technical averments in charging burglary has been already discussed;<sup>1</sup> it is sufficient to state here that at common law an indictment or information charging burglary must allege the breaking and entering to have been "burglariously" done with "felonious" intent,<sup>2</sup> but under statute neither word need be used, particularly when the indictment or information is

Tully v. Com., supra, deciding that the Massachusetts definition of burglary does away with the common law requisites of an indictment charging that offense, so that the word "burglariously" is no longer essential to validity, was declared by George Bemis (in Law Reporter, Jan., 1847, p. 387) to be "an important one, because in connection with a class of cases which have begun to form a line of precedents in the Massachusetts courts (that is, Com. v. Squires, 42 Mass. (1 Metc.) 258; Devoe v. Com., 44 Mass. (3 Metc.) 316; Josslyn v. Com., 47 Mass. (7 Metc.) 236). The old landmarks are fast vanishing in the jurisprudence of that respectable commonwealth before the supposed efficacy of statute phraseology—phraseology, too, which has hardly changed a whit for the last half century, and under which common law technicalities have been deemed hitherto indispensable."

"Feloniously" qualifying word "steal" in the statute, its omission in an indictment charging conspiracy to break and enter the storehouse of another with intent to steal, is fatal.—Scudder v. State, 62 Ind. 13.

—In Louisiana the common law crime of burglary is unknown by name, while the statutory offense is what would be burglary at common law, and it is sufficient in the indictment to charge that the offense was done "feloniously" without the use of the term "burglariously."—State v. Curtis, 30 La. Ann. 413; State v. Newton, 30 La. Ann. 1253; State v. Jordan, 39 La. Ann. 340.

"Property of another" omitted in an indictment charging accused did "unlawfully, feloniously and burglariously break and enter" with intent to steal certain meat therein, held fatal.—Barnhart v. State, 154 Ind. 117, 56 N. E. 212.

"Wilfully and maliciously, and with force" being the language of the statute, an indictment charging the accused "feloniously, wilfully, and burglariously did break and enter" is sufficient, those words being the equivalent of the statutory language.—Shotwell v. State, 43 Ark. 345.

An allegation that accused maliciously, feloniously, and burglariously broke and entered is equivalent to saying that the breaking was with force.—Parnell v. State, 86 Ark. 241, 110 S. W. 1036.

—"Forcibly" omitted does not vitiate where the charge is that accused "wilfully, feloniously, and maliciously broke and entered."—Cunningham v. Com., 11 Ky. L. Rep. 783, 13 S. W. 104.

—"Maliciously" omitted will not vitiate where it is charged accused "wilfully, forcibly and feloniously" did the act, as these words import and in effect charge malice.—Johns v. State, 88 Neb. 145, 129 N. W. 247.

such cases the act should be charged to have been unlawfully done.<sup>4</sup>

Entering without breaking, either in the daytime or night-time, with intent to commit a misdemeanor, not constituting the offense of burglary, the indictment or information need not charge that the offense was done burglariously or wilfully and feloniously.<sup>5</sup>

§ 464. — ALLEGING WANT OF CONSENT. The general rule is that an indictment or information charging burglary and larceny from a building need not allege want of consent to the entry or want of consent to the taking of property therefrom, that fact being implied from the language necessary to be used in charging the offense; but in Texas, under the statute, it seems that it is necessary to negative consent to entry<sup>1</sup> and to allege want of consent to the taking of the property,<sup>2</sup> and where the property is jointly owned consent must be negatived as to each of the owners;<sup>3</sup> but where the entry is alleged to have been by force, the want of the owner's or occupier's consent need not be specifically alleged,<sup>4</sup> and the same is true when there is a charge of breaking and entering.<sup>5</sup>

§ 465. — ATTEMPT TO COMMIT THE OFFENSE. In those cases where the statute defining and punishing burglary also defines and punishes an attempt to commit the crime, or attempts to commit crime generally are defined and punishment prescribed in another statute or section of a code,<sup>1</sup> an indictment charging an attempt to commit burglary framed in the language of the statute is sufficient,<sup>2</sup> where as thus framed the indictment contains all the elements of the crime sought to be charged, otherwise these elements must be specifically alleged.<sup>3</sup> The indictment or information must allege, not only the intent<sup>4</sup> to commit burglary, but also the overt acts relied upon as constituting the attempt.<sup>5</sup>

Attempt to commit burglary involves guilty intent, but the law does not punish a mere guilty intent; some overt act to carry out that intent must be alleged and proved. See Gray v. State, 63 Ala. 66; State v. Wilson, 30 Conn. 500; Cunningham v. State, 49 Miss. 685; People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254, 20 Am. St. Rep. 732, 10 L. R. A. 109, 8 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 105, 25 N. —"Attempt implies more than an intention formed. Some step toward consummation must be taken before the intention becomes an attempt" (Gray v. State, 63 Ala. 66, 73), and "the act must reach far enough toward the accomplishment of the desired result as to be the commencement of the consummation of the offense after the preparations are made."—

Particular felony intended to be committed in the unlawful breaking and entering must be alleged.<sup>6</sup> It is not sufficient to aver an unlawful breaking and entering with intent to commit one of the felonies mentioned in a designated statute, or a specified section of the code, under which the indictment is drawn,<sup>7</sup> or to allege an attempt to commit a felony, the nature of which is to the grand jurors unknown.<sup>8</sup> However, the felony intended to be committed on the unlawful breaking and entering need not be as fully and specifically set forth as is required in an indictment charging the actual commission of the felony.<sup>9</sup>

§ 466. INTENT MUST BE ALLEGED. The general rule, both at common law and under statute, is that an averment of the existence of an intent, at the time of breaking into and entering the building, to steal, or to commit some other felony, is essential to make an indictment or information charging burglary sufficient,<sup>1</sup> although there are to the grand jurors unknown" was intended to be committed by the accused,<sup>5</sup> or charging an intention to commit a crime designated in a particular section of the code or statute.<sup>6</sup> This is the general rule of the adjudicated cases, and the only safe course for the pleader to follow. The mere allegation of an intent to commit a felony, without specifying a particular felony, is a mere conclusion of the pleader.<sup>7</sup> The facts constituting the elements of the particular felony need not be alleged, it being sufficient to name the felony;<sup>8</sup> yet the mere allegation of an intent to commit a designated felony, without an averment of the overt acts tending towards its accomplishment, is said not to be sufficient; those overt acts must

State v. Lewis, 42 Wash. 672, 85 Pac. 668.

"Broke and entered a railroad car with intent to commit a felony," though substantially in the language of the statute, is insufficient because it contains no description of the overt acts of the accused in attempting to commit the crime charged, nor any specification of the particular felony which the accused is charged with attempting to commit after breaking into the car, fails to apprise the defendant of the specific offense with which he is charged as required by the constitution (Me. Const., art. 1, § 6), and for that reason is fatally defective.—State v. Doran, 99 Me. 329, 105 Am. St. Rep. 278, 59 Atl. 440.

§ 468. — ARSON. An indictment or information charging that accused entered a designated building or store with the felonious intention then and there to commit arson, sufficiently specifies the felony which it is charged the accused intended to commit,<sup>1</sup> without stating the facts constituting the crime of arson.<sup>2</sup> But it has been held that under the Alabama statute,<sup>3</sup> an averment that the accused broke and entered a described building or store "with intent to set fire to or burn" the property or store of a person named, without averring that accused broke and entered with the intent "wilfully" to set fire to and burn, is bad on demurrer.<sup>4</sup>

"Broke into and entered" a building described, being charged without the allegation of an "intention to steal, take and carry away," but further alleging that accused "feloniously took and carried away" certain specified articles of personal property of a specified person "of the value of more than one hundred dollars," does not charge burglary, but grand larceny only, by reason of the omission of the allegation of an intent to steal.—Bell v. State, 48 Ala. 684, 17 Am. Rep. 40.

Charge of breaking into and entering need not be in the words of the statute.—Josslyn v. Com., 47 Mass. (6 Met.) 236.

Charging intent to steal in general terms insufficient under Texas Penal Code.—Webster v. State, 9 Tex. App. 75.

Degree of larceny intended to be committed by accused need not be alleged.—People v. Smith, 86 Cal. 238, 24 Pac. 988.

"Did feloniously and burglariously break and enter" with intent to commit the crime of larceny therein, being duly charged, the indictment is insufficient unless it further charges an intent to "feloniously and burglariously take and carry away" specified goods and chattels in such house.—Draughn v. State, 76 Miss. 574, 25 So. 153.

"Did steal, take, and carry away" designated goods from a dwelling-house, held to be a sufficient averment of felonious intention.—State v. Neddo, 92 Me. 71, 42 Atl. 253.

"Feloniously" or "feloniously and burglariously" need not be used in an indictment charging a breaking and entering "with intent to steal, take, and carry away by fraud and stealth" certain described goods of another person set out the acts required to constitute the crime of steal-

"with intent to deprive," etc.—State v. Lewis, 13 S. D. 166, 82 N. W. 406. See, also, Jones v. State, (Tex. Cr.) 55 S. W. 491.

General intent to steal completes the offense, and an indictment averring such general intent, without setting out facts or particulars, has been held sufficient in Massachusetts.—Com. v. Doherty, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 52.

Intent to "feloniously steal" must be charged in an indictment alleging conspiracy to commit burglary.—Smith v. State, 93 Ind. 67.

"Intent to steal and commit a felony therein" sufficiently charges the intent with which building burglarized.—State v. Powell, 61 Kan. 81, 58 Pac. 968.

"Intent to steal, take and carry away" the "drygoods, groceries and money of said A, of the value of one hundred dollars," sufficiently defines the felony intended to be committed.—State v. Shelton, 90 Tenn. (6 Pick.) 539, 18 S. W. 253.

"Intent to steal the goods, chattels and money of A, and also with intent to steal the goods, chattels and money of B," in an indictment alleging burglary, does not charge two distinct offenses.—State v. Christmas, 101 N. C. 749, 8 S. E. 361.

"Larcey" charged as the crime accused intended to commit in breaking into and entering a stable, the indictment was held bad, because no such felony as "larcey" is known to the law. The court say: "'Larcey' is certainly not 'larceny,' nor does the maxim of idem sonans apply."—People v. St. Clair, 56 Cal. 406.

Mere clerical errors or misspelled words, in an intelligent and efficient administration of the criminal law, are not permitted to defeat the ends of justice, where it is reasonably manifest that the error is a mere clerical one, or the misspelling does not change the force and effect of the indictment. It is just such petty quibbles or unjustifiable and inexcusable ultra technical decisions as the above—and it is a reproach to the judiciary of the country that there are so many of them—which bring the administration of the criminal law into deserved disrepute in various parts of the country; not being based upon any sound principle of law or established rule of construction, maintaining no vital principle, protecting no fundamental personal right, they are indefensible from any view, and the sole and only purpose they serve is to debauch the administration of the criminal law, defeat the ends of justice, and to turn loose to prey upon society unwhipped of justice persons who have been proven to be guilty of the crime charged, and richly meriting punishment. The decisions, collected elsewhere in this treatise, show that in an enlightened and efficient administration of the criminal law, such trifles as the obvious clerical error of omitting an "n," is not permitted to defeat the ends of justice. See, supra, § 322.

"Larceny" employed instead of statutory term "felony and other infamous crime," objection can not be taken after verdict on motion to quash.—State v. Tytus, 98 N. C. 704, 4 S. E. 29.

ing at common law,<sup>3</sup> the object charged to be the intention of the accused to steal must be the subject-matter of a larceny,<sup>4</sup> and it must be alleged that the property intended to be thus taken was the property of another.<sup>5</sup>

§ 470. — RAPE. An indictment or information charging breaking into and entering a dwelling-house in the night-time with the intent to commit therein the crime of

"Larceny," in statute punishing breaking into and entering a shop adjoining a dwelling-house "with intent to commit 'larceny,'" is not a "term of art" which is indispensable in an indictment charging the offense, and for which no substitute, description or definition is permissible.—Josslyn v. Com., 47 Mass. (6 Metc.) 236.

Larceny need not be alleged in an indictment for burglary in Georgia.—Jones v. State, 12 Ga. App. 813, 78 S. E. 474.

Taking away with the felonious intent to deprive the owner permanently of his property and converting it to the use of the accused without the owner's consent, being omitted from an indictment in the language of the statute charging burglary with the intent to steal, does not render the indictment defective.—Mitchell v. Com., 88 Ky. 349, 11 S. W. 209; McRea v. Com., 20 Ky. Law Rep. 1199, 49 S. W. 22.

Compare: Com. v. Doherty, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 52, holding that the felony intended to be committed need not be set forth fully and technically.

"Burglariously" a term of art necessary to be used in West Virginia.—State v. Cottrell, 45 W. Va. 837, 32 S. E. 162.

Theft of specific articles alleged in a charge of breaking and entering "with intent to commit theft," sufficient without setting out the essential elements of the theft.—Williams v. State, 24 Tex. App. 69, 5 S. W. 838; Bigham v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. Rep. 244; 20 S. W. 577.

rape, will be sufficient where the accused is informed by it of the nature of the offense with which he is charged, without setting forth the offense of rape<sup>1</sup> technically and fully,<sup>2</sup> and need not aver under which set of circumstances specified in the statute<sup>3</sup> the crime was committed or intended to be accomplished.<sup>4</sup> In North Carolina a charge that accused so entered the dwelling-house of a named female, "with the intent feloniously and violently, and against her will, the said" female "to carnally know and abuse," has been held to be a sufficient allegation of the intent;<sup>5</sup> but in Illinois an allegation of a like entry "with intent violently and against her will to ravish" said female, has been held to be insufficient to support a conviction.<sup>6</sup>

§ 471. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY STOLEN OR TO BE STOLEN—OWNERSHIP AND VALUE. In an indictment or information charging burglary with the intent to steal, take and carry away goods and chattels<sup>1</sup> or personal property<sup>2</sup> of another, it is not necessary to describe the property, or aver what particular or specific goods, chat-

Charging accused unlawfully and forcibly broke and entered into a dwelling house in the night-time "with intent then and there to commit the crime of rape," has been held not to sufficiently charge an intent to commit rape under Texas statute.—State v. Williams, 41 Tex. 98.

"Then and there" intended to commit the rape, need not be alleged in an indictment charging breaking and entering with intent

§ 472. BREAKING AND ENTRY—NECESSITY OF ALLEGING. Breaking into and entering<sup>1</sup> a dwelling-house or other designated building, being an essential element of the crime of burglary, must be alleged in an indictment or information charging that offense.<sup>2</sup> The manner of breaking must be specified;<sup>3</sup> but an allegation of an entry by force has been said to be sufficient without an averment of entry by means of breaking,<sup>4</sup> because any act of physical force, however slight, by which any obstruction to an entry is overcome or removed and entry effected, constitutes the crime of burglary.<sup>5</sup> The indictment or information may charge in one count an entry without breaking, and in another count charge the entry by means of breaking.<sup>6</sup>

Breaking without entry,<sup>7</sup> or entry without breaking,<sup>8</sup> being charged, the indictment will be fatally defective.

Negating right to enter, on the part of the accused, is essential to the validity of an indictment or information charging burglary; that is to say, the indictment must Burglary of an out-house being charged, it is necessary to allege that it was adjoining to and occupied in connection with the dwelling-house.—State v. Randall, 36 Wash. 438, 78 Pac. 998.

"House" is a sufficient description of the building alleged to have been burglarized, when it is intended to allege and prove that it was a dwelling-house, under a statute making the breaking and entering of a "dwelling-house" burglary, because the term "house," in its primary and common signification, and in indictments charging burglary, imports a "dwelling-house."—See Reed v. State, 66 Ark. 110, 49 S. W. 350; Com. v. Elliston, 14 Ky. Law Rep. 216, 20 S. W. 214; Thompson v. People, 3 Park. Cr. Rep. (N. Y.)

W. 359, under a statute making it a distinct crime of burglary to enter a "private residence" "by force, threats, or fraud at night," the charge being sufficient as an allegation of breaking and entering a "private residence" in the day-time.

Contra: Ford v. State, 112 Ind. 373, 14 N. E. 241; Daniel v. Coulsting, 7 Man. & G. 122, 125, 49 Eng. C. L. 122, 125.

"Mansion house" is sufficiently descriptive of a dwelling-house in an indictment for burglary.—Devoe v. Com., 44 Mass. (3 Metc.) 316; Com. v. Pennock, 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 199; Armour v. State, 22 Tenn. (3 Humph.) 379; Fletcher v. State, 78 Tenn. (10 Lea) 338.

A description of the building entered as that in which the United States post office at G is located, is a sufficient description, as there is but one post office there, and where it lays the ownership in a named person it is certainly good. People v. Warner, 25 Cal. App. 775, 145 Pac. 543.

mill of a named person "in which said mill was kept for use and deposit" by said person "goods, wares and valuable things," sufficiently shows accused broke into a "building."—State v. Haney, 110 Iowa 26, 81 N. W. 151.

"In the state and county aforesaid, broke and entered a certain house therein situate, and being used and possessed by one A," is a sufficient description of the house burglarized.—Reed v. State, 66 Ark. 110, 49 S. W. 350.

Insufficient description.—Dunn v. Com., 119 Ky. 457, 27 Ky. Law Rep. 113, 84 S. W. 321.

Because the indictment described the house as "dwell-house" instead of "dwelling-house," it was held fatally defective in Parker v. State, 114 Ala. 690, 22 So. 791, on the ground that the omission of "ing" was matter of substance, when it was manifestly simply a clerical error, and should have been regarded as a harmless one.

Breaking and entering smoke-house being charged, without an allegation that the building was used in connection with any dwelling-house, indictment fatally defective.—Dunn v. Com., 119 Ky. 457, 27 Ky. Law Rep. 113, 84 S. W. 321.

Where the house was described as "occupied S" instead of "occupied by S," it is fatally defective.—Scroggins v. State, 36 Tex. Cr. Rep. 117, 35 S. W. 968.

been burglarized is not thus particularly described and individuated the indictment or information will be insufficient.<sup>5</sup> Where the description follows the language of the statute, and specifically names the owner of the car, the consignor and the consignee, it will be sufficient, it seems.<sup>6</sup>

§ 477. — OFFICES, SHOPS, STORE-HOUSES, WAREHOUSES, ETC. Under statutes providing that where a person breaks into and enters any office, shop, store, booth, tent, warehouse, or other building<sup>1</sup> in which goods, wares, merchandise, or other things of value are kept, with intent to steal, it constitutes the crime of burglary, an indictment or information charging accused did break and enter premises designated must, by descriptive allegations, bring the premises designated within the provisions of the statute.

<sup>5</sup> People v. Webber, 138 Cal. 145, 13 Am. Cr. Rep. 698, 70 Pac. 1089, in which the information alleged accused "did unlawfully, feloniously and burglariously enter a certain railroad car and train, to-wit, a railroad car and train owned and operated by the Southern Pacific Company (a corporation)."

In holding the indictment insufficient the court say: "One may commit other offenses on a train of cars, but one can only commit burglary of a railroad car of a train. Each car is separate and distinct from every other car of the train. Cars are being added to and detached from the train at points along the line during its trip; and then, too, on through lines, such as the line of the Southern Pacific Company, there are many trains, freight and passenger, running daily. The defendant should be informed with some degree of certainty at least as to the particular car he is charged with having feloniously entered. There is no difficulty in ascertaining the fact, for all cars bear some distinguishing mark or number. The Penal Code does not relieve the prosecuting attorney from the necessity of informing the defendant with reasonable certainty of the nature and particulars of the crime charged against him, that he may prepare for his defense, and upon acquittal or conviction, plead his jeopardy against further prosecution." <sup>1</sup> As is provided by Mo. Rev. Stats., 1889, § 3526, and those of similar provisions.

Barn charged to have been burglarized, the description will be insufficient where that term is not by allegation brought within the provision of the statute, the word "barn" not appearing in the statute.<sup>2</sup>

Chicken-house or hen-house charged as premises burglarized by accused, indictment or information need not describe the building as especially constructed or made for the use to which it was put, such building being of a substantial kind, and well known, in communities where poultry is raised, as the building where chickens and other poultry are housed.<sup>3</sup>

Office charged to have been burglarized by accused, it is not necessary to allege that the premises were not adjacent to or used in connection with a dwelling-house, even in those cases where there are two statutes, one providing as to offices adjoining, and the other as to offices not adjoining, a dwelling-house, both statutes imposing a similar punishment.<sup>4</sup>

"Shop" used in statute, indictment charging accused with breaking and entering a "store," is sufficiently descriptive of the premises in Louisiana,<sup>5</sup> but not in Massachusetts.<sup>6</sup>

did steal, take and carry away," is bad on demurrer, for the reason that "store" and "shop" in the statute are not synonymous, and "shop," being descriptive of the place of the larceny, can not be rejected as surplusage.<sup>7</sup>

Store charged to have been burglarized, the indictment must allege the premises to be a "building," under the Missouri statute.<sup>8</sup> "Store-house" of a designated person charged to have been broken and entered, is a sufficient description.<sup>9</sup> "A store-house commonly called a drug-store," is a proper description of the premises on the charge of burglarizing a drug-store.<sup>10</sup>

— "Store-room" charged to have been broken into under a statute using the word "store-house," has been held to be insufficient under the Ohio statute, and that objection is available after verdict;<sup>11</sup> but under amendment<sup>12</sup> the same court holds that "a certain store-room, then and there the property of" a person named, is a sufficient description.<sup>13</sup>

Warehouse charged to have been burglarized, it is sufficient to designate and describe it by that name;<sup>14</sup> and a description as a "granary, warehouse, and building" of a person named, "a building in which divers goods, merchandise and valuable things were then and there kept for sale and deposited," is a sufficient description of a warehouse, the word "granary" may be treated as surplusage.<sup>15</sup> "Warehouse-building," is a good description of a "warehouse," the word "building" added in no-wise changes the meaning.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>2</sup> A man can not burglarize his own house is the general rule of law (see Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, § 1019), unless he has parted with the right of entry (State v. Mish, 36 Mont. 168, 122 Am. St. Rep. 343, 92 Pac. 459; Davis v. State, 38 Ohio St. 506); and it may possibly be, though it is not so declared on principle, that having a right of entry, if the owner enters for the purpose of, and with the intention of, committing a felony therein, such act will constitute burglary, for it was resolved in 8 Jacobi 1, in one of Lord Coke's most famous reports, uniformly followed alike in England and in this country, that "if a man abuse an authority given to him by law, he becomes a trespasser ab initio."—Six Carpenters' Case, 8 Co. Rep. 146, 77 Eng. Repr. 695.

The right of a man to enter his own house is "an authority given by law," and if he "abuse that authority" and becomes "a trespasser ab initio" in his own house, will that fact make his act of entry "with the felonious intent" an act of burglary? It is suggested as a possibility, but not so maintained from principle. It is said, inter ises the accused is charged with having entered,<sup>3</sup> and this ownership must be alleged with reasonable certainty.<sup>4</sup> It has been said that there are two reasons, only, for requiring the ownership of the premises to be alleged in an indictment or information charging burglary. First, for the purpose of showing on the record that the building alleged to have been broken into and entered is not the dwelling-house of the accused, inasmuch as he can not commit the offense of burglary by breaking into his own house.<sup>5</sup> Second, for the purpose of so identifying the property and the offense that the accused will be protected against a second prosecution or punishment for the same offense, and when the ownership is alleged to be in a person who is not the accused, and that allegation is proved upon the trial, the reasons for this requirement are fully met.<sup>6</sup>

Ownership need not be alleged in those cases in which the premises are otherwise sufficiently described and identified<sup>7</sup> to meet the purposes for which the ownership is required to be alleged as above set forth,<sup>8</sup> and the ac-alia arguendo, and must be regarded as pure dictum, in State v. Mish, 36 Mont. 168, 122 Am. St. Rep. 343, 92 Pac. 459, that "the unlawfulness of his intentions with regard to acts contemplated by him after entry can not, in a criminal case, characterize his rightful act of entry."

ership.—Davis v. State, 54 Fla. 34, 44 So. 757.

Grave is opened at night and the grave-clothes are stolen, the ownership must be laid in the executor or administrator of the deceased. —2 Hale's P. C. 181.

cused can not be misled as to the property referred to,<sup>9</sup> as where the premises are described by street and street number,<sup>10</sup> and also as a designated club-house, occupied by persons to the district attorney unknown.<sup>11</sup> And where the indictment avers that the entry of a designated public house was a trespass, the ownership of the room or building need not be specifically alleged, although, when known, it is safer practice to allege the ownership.<sup>12</sup>

Ownership unknown, that fact must be averred,<sup>13</sup> and this will constitute a sufficient averment of ownership of premises otherwise sufficiently described.<sup>14</sup>

§ 479. — SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGATION. It is sufficient allegation of ownership where it is laid in the person having the actual and visible occupancy or possession and control at the time of the breaking and entry,<sup>1</sup> or in one having the present right to the use and occupancy,<sup>2</sup> although the real ownership is in another;<sup>3</sup> the occupancy, or the claim to the right of occupancy, being the legal title to the property is in the wife;<sup>1</sup> and this has been said to be true even though the wife is at the time living separate and apart from her husband in a house provided out of an estate vested in trust for her sole use, and the husband had never been in the house burglarized.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the indictment charged the burglarizing of a smoke-house used in connection with a dwelling-house occupied by a husband and wife as their home, which was on the same premises as the dwelling-house, and subject to the ordinary family use, the ownership was properly laid in the husband, although both the dwelling-house and the smoke-house were the separate property of the wife.<sup>3</sup>

Community property charged to have been burglarized by the accused, ownership of the property is properly laid in the husband;<sup>4</sup> but can not be laid in the wife, unless the husband has abandoned her.<sup>5</sup>

the premises burglarized are her separate property;<sup>6</sup> but where title is in the husband ownership can not be laid in the wife,<sup>7</sup> except in those cases where the husband has abandoned his wife.<sup>8</sup>

§ 482. — LANDLORD AND TENANT. It has already been seen that it is sufficient to lay ownership of burglarized property in the person in possession and control at the time of the offense.<sup>1</sup> Ownership should be laid in the occupant of the premises and not in the holder of the legal title,<sup>2</sup> unless the occupant is a mere servant.<sup>3</sup> Leased property should be described as the house of the tenant,<sup>4</sup> but may also be described as that of the landlord.<sup>5</sup>

"If A comes to an inn of B and there has a chamber appointed for his lodgings, and this chamber is broken up burglarly, it shall suppose it to be domus mansionalis of B, the inn-keeper, because the interest is in him, and A hath only the use of it for his lodging, without any certain interest."—1 Hale P. C. 557.

"If several persons dwell in a house, as servants, guests, tenants at will, or otherwise, having no fixed or certain interest in any part thereof, and burglary be committed in any of their apartments, it seems clear that the indictment shall lay the offense in the mansion-house of the proprietor."—1 Hawk. his dwelling-house;<sup>7</sup> and where ownership is thus laid in such occupant of the room, it is not necessary to allege a hiring for any definite length of time.<sup>8</sup>

§ 484. — CORPORATION AS OWNER. The sufficiency of an allegation in an indictment or information of the corporate ownership of premises burglarized has been already discussed,<sup>1</sup> and it remains to add here that it is pretty generally held that it is not necessary to allege that a corporation is the owner of premises burglarized, or that, as a corporation, it was capable of holding property.<sup>2</sup> Thus, an indictment charging burglary describing the ownership of the premises as that of "the San Diego and Coronado Water Company," without alleging whether it was a corporation or an association, was held to be a sufficient allegation of the ownership.<sup>3</sup> But there are cases to the effect that the indictment should allege whether the "company" was a corporation or an unincorporated association, and if the latter, that the individuals composing the association should be designated by name.<sup>4</sup> Where ownership is laid in a corporation, the incorporation should be alleged, under the Missouri statute,<sup>5</sup> but this does not seem to be required elsewhere.<sup>6</sup>

§ 485. — PARTNERSHIP AS OWNER. The sufficiency of allegation as to joint and partnership ownership of property broken into and entered has been discussed,<sup>1</sup> and it remains to add here that ownership of the burglarized premises may be laid in a partnership<sup>2</sup> by the firm name,<sup>3</sup> or ownership may be laid in one of the partners.<sup>4</sup> If ownership is alleged in a partnership, the names of the copartners must be alleged under the Missouri statute.<sup>5</sup>

§ 486. — DECEDENT'S ESTATE. It has been held in Alabama that an indictment for burglary charging the accused with breaking and entering the house of a person at the time deceased may properly describe the premises as the property of the estate of a person deceased, naming him,<sup>1</sup> on the ground that the identification of the house by description as to ownership is so far necessary, only, as is requisite to protect the accused from being put a second time in jeopardy for the same cause or being a second time punished for the same offense;<sup>2</sup> but that doctrine has been overruled,<sup>3</sup> and it is now held in that state that the ownership can not be laid in the estate of a person deceased,<sup>4</sup> and this seems to be the doctrine in Missouri, also.<sup>5</sup> But in Iowa, in a case where it was averred that the premises was the property of the estate of a named decedent, "in which his widow and children kept goods and valuable things," the court held this to be a sufficient description of the ownership of the premises under the statute.<sup>6</sup>

At common law the premises burglarized must be the mansion-house or dwelling-house of the person in whom ownership is laid in a charge of burglary,<sup>7</sup> and to constitute the premises his dwelling-house the same, or some portion of it, must be occupied by him as his dwelling place and home.<sup>8</sup> As a decedent's "estate" is incapable of measuring up to the requirements of the common law as respects residence and occupancy, it would seem, on principle, the inevitable conclusion that ownership can not justly be laid in the estate of a decedent. However, it may properly be laid in the administrator or executor of his estate, under the American statutes, doubtless, as well as under the common law.<sup>9</sup>

§ 487. OCCUPANCY OF PREMISES. An indictment or information charging accused with breaking and entering a dwelling-house, in the absence of provision in the statute to the contrary, need not allege that any one was in the house at the time,<sup>1</sup> or set out the names of the dwellers therein,<sup>2</sup> and where the pleader undertakes to set out the names of the occupants an error in this regard will not be fatal where the allegations are otherwise sufficient.<sup>3</sup> But where the statute divides the offense into grades or degrees and inflicts punishment varying according to the degree, and it is sought to charge the higher grade or degree there must be an allegation that some one was in the house at the time of the commission of the offense.<sup>4</sup>

§ 488. POSSESSION OF BURGLAR'S TOOLS. An indictment or information charging accused with having possession of burglar's tools, with the intent to use such implements for the purpose of breaking open houses and other depositories of goods or money, to steal from the owners thereof goods, money and things of value, must contain a statement of the facts constituting the offense in plain and concise language so that the accused may be fully apprised of the exact nature of the charge against him,<sup>1</sup> but need not describe either the buildings intended to be broken into and entered,<sup>2</sup> the property intended to be taken and carried away, or the name of the owner or owners.<sup>3</sup>

§ 489. JOINDER OF BURGLARY AND SUBSIDIARY OFFENSE.

The crime of burglary and the crime of larceny following the burglarious breaking and entry are an exception to the general rule that two distinct crimes can not be charged in an indictment or information.<sup>1</sup> The reason for this seems to be that the burglarious entry with the intent to steal, and the consummation of that intent by actual theft, are so intimately connected that the two crimes may be charged in the same count,<sup>2</sup> or in separate counts of the same indictment,<sup>3</sup> without laying the indictment open to the objection that it is bad for duplicity.<sup>4</sup> This joinder is allowed, it is said, in order that there may be a conviction of the one if there is a failure

Two offenses growing out of same transaction can not be charged in same indictment, but there is no objection to charging various phases of the crime in separate counts in the same indictment—e. g., charging in three counts respectively robbery, larceny, and receiving stolen goods.—*Tobin v. Burglary and larceny forming one transaction can not be charged to establish the other.<sup>5</sup> It has been said that such an indictment charges but one offense, and that offense is burglary,<sup>6</sup> the larceny being merged in the burglary,<sup>7</sup> and that on a general verdict of guilty the sentence must be for burglary.<sup>8</sup> The better doctrine is thought to be, and the one that is supported by the weight as well as the number of adjudicated cases, is that two crimes are charged,<sup>9</sup> and that the accused may be convicted on the charge of burglary and acquitted on the charge of larceny, and vice versa;<sup>10</sup> where there are two or more defendants jointly charged in such an indictment, some may be convicted of the burglary and acquitted of the larceny, while others are acquitted of the burglary and convicted on the charge of larceny.<sup>11</sup> However, a conviction of the charge of burglary has been held in one indictment under a statute providing that one offense only may be charged in the same indictment.—State v. Smith, 2 N. D. 515, 52 N. W. 320.

to be no bar to a subsequent prosecution on the charge of larceny connected therewith.<sup>12</sup>

Other subsidiary felonies committed or intended to be committed in connection with a burglarious entry, it follows on principle, may likewise be joined in the indictment, although such subsidiary offense is not necessary to the completion of the crime of burglary, the mere breaking and entering with the intent to commit the subsidiary offense being sufficient.<sup>13</sup>

§ 490. DUPPLICITY. An indictment or information charging accused with burglariously breaking and entering a dwelling-house with the intention of committing two distinct crimes, e. g., to commit adultery<sup>1</sup> and to steal,<sup>2</sup> is not bad for duplicity, for the reason that the intent does not constitute the crime of burglary, although it is an essential ingredient thereof; the offense consists in breaking into and entering with the intent to commit any one of the crimes denounced by the statute, and if there exists an intent at the time of the entry to commit two or more of them, the act of breaking and entering is none the less the crime of burglary.<sup>3</sup> And it has been said that, under the Texas statute, it is not duplicitous to charge breaking and entering in the day-time and also in the night-time, when the two charges

§ 491. AMENDMENT OF INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION. An indictment or information charging burglary may be amended as to form where the defendant is not prejudiced thereby.<sup>1</sup> Thus there may be a change in the description of the building burglarized,<sup>2</sup> or in the name of the owners of the building,<sup>3</sup> and the court may allow a change showing the date of the commission of the offense;<sup>4</sup> but where accused is charged with breaking and entering in the day-time, the indictment or information can not be amended so as to charge the breaking and entering to have been in the night-time, to conform to the proof;<sup>5</sup> neither can there be an amendment to an indictment changing the venue of the location of the building burglarized, without a resubmission to the grand jury.<sup>6</sup>

§ 492. OBJECTION TO INDICTMENT—MANNER OF MAKING AND WAIVER. An objection to an indictment or information charging burglary must be raised in the manner prescribed by statute or code, or it is deemed to have been waived.<sup>1</sup> Where the indictment or information

CHAPTER XXX.

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Champerty and Maintenance.

§ 493. In general.

§ 494. Indictment—At common law.

§ 495. — Under statute.

§ 496. — Conclusion.

§ 493. IN GENERAL. A distinction is drawn between "barratry" and "champerty and maintenance," and for that reason we have treated the two offenses separately.<sup>1</sup> The former offense consists in frequently exciting or stirring up suits and quarrels, either at law or otherwise,<sup>2</sup> while the latter offense is the unlawful maintaining or prosecution of a suit, in consideration of a bargain or contract to have part of the thing in dispute, or some profit out of it,<sup>3</sup> and was not only an offense at common law,<sup>4</sup> but was considered, in the earliest times and in all

<sup>3</sup> 4 Bl. Com. 135; Co. Litt. 368b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 172; Hawk. P. O. b. I, ch. 84; 2 Inst. 208; Reg. Orig. 183; Stat. Westm. I, ch. 25; Key v. Vattier, 1 Ohio 132; Weakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio 175.

Distinction between champerty and maintenance consists in this: Where there is no agreement to divide the thing regarding which the suit is brought, the party intermeddling is guilty of maintenance only; where there is a bargain or contract to receive part of the thing in suit, the offense is champerty. 4 Chitty's Bl. Com. 135.

Lord Coke's rule is: Every champerty is maintenance, but every maintenance is not champerty.—2 Inst. 208.

Lord Coke commenting on Westm. I, ch. 25, the first English statute on the subject, says that it was against the common law maxim "culpa est immiscere se rei ad se non pertinenti" (it is culpable conduct for a man to meddle with a thing not belonging to or concerning him), and this other, "pendente lite nihil innovatur" (pending the suit nothing should be changed), and cites Bracton, who wrote before the enactment of Westm. I, ch. 25, to show that it was one of the articles inquirable by the justices in Eyre, before the reign of Edward I, whether suits had been stirred up by certain officers by which countries, as an offense of great mischief to the public.<sup>5</sup> The crime was indictable at common law, and still is in some of the states of the Union.<sup>6</sup>

In American states the common-law doctrine of champerty and maintenance, as defined by Blackstone, became a part of the law of the land in the original thirteen colonies and those states of the Union<sup>7</sup> which adopted the common law<sup>8</sup> as the basis of their jurisprudence,<sup>9</sup> except in those of the colonies and states in which the courts have declared that the common-law doctrine of champerty and maintenance is not applicable to their circumstances,<sup>10</sup> among these California,<sup>11</sup> Iowa,<sup>12</sup> Vermont,<sup>13</sup> justice and truth might be suppressed or delayed. See 2 Inst. 208.

Distinction between attorney and advocate drawn by New Jersey court, and common-law doctrine of champerty held not to apply to the former either in "legal history or adjudicated cases."—Schomp v. Schenck, 40 N. J. L. (11 Vr.) 195, 29 Am. Rep. 219.

See, also, Kerr's Whart. Crim. L., § 2212.

§ 494. INDICTMENT—AT COMMON LAW. The distinction between champerty and maintenance has already been pointed out, as has also the fact that all champerty is maintenance, but that every maintenance is not champerty.<sup>1</sup> An indictment for maintenance may allege that, at a certain time and place, the accused did unjustly and unlawfully maintain and uphold a certain suit which then was depending in a named court, describing it, and setting forth the particular acts of accused which are complained of, contrary to the policy of the law, or if under the statute, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided, and to the manifest hindrance and disturbance of justice, and in contempt, etc., and against the peace and dignity, etc.<sup>2</sup>

§ 495. — UNDER STATUTE. An indictment under the New York statute, against an attorney charging him with buying a promissory note need not allege that the note was purchased with intent to institute and prosecute suit thereon;<sup>1</sup> nor is it necessary to allege that a prosecution has been begun; neither need the date, amount, nor time of maturity of the note be alleged.<sup>2</sup>

§ 496. — CONCLUSION. In this country, where prosecution is at common law, the conclusion need not be “against the form of the statute,” etc., notwithstanding the fact that the offense was prohibited by various English statutes,<sup>1</sup> on pain of fine and imprisonment, because those old statutes formed a part of the common law, in so far as applicable, adopted into this country. Where the prosecution is under statute, and the act complained of comes within the provisions of two separate statutes, the conclusion may be simply “contrary to the form of the statute,” in the singular.<sup>2</sup> or growing<sup>2</sup> or matured<sup>3</sup> crops, are as variant, almost, as the states themselves; the particular provisions of any particular statute must be carefully consulted in applying the rules set forth in this subdivision.

Acknowledgment and filing of mortgage for record is required to be alleged in an indictment charging sale, removal or concealment of mortgaged chattels, according to the rule in some of the cases,<sup>4</sup> while in others it is held not necessary either to allege or prove that the mortgage was recorded or filed for record.<sup>5</sup>

Language of the statute, or its equivalent,<sup>6</sup> may be followed in the indictment or information, even though it involves a disjunctive allegation, e. g., "did sell, remove or conceal."<sup>7</sup>

Mortgage may be set out in hæc verba, or according to tenor and effect; but strict exactness in setting forth by tenor must be met by strict exactness of proof.<sup>8</sup>

Ownership of the debt secured by the chattel mortgage should be set forth; but laying title in the administrator of a deceased mortgagee, instead of in his heirs, has been held not to render the indictment defective.<sup>9</sup> And in a case where the chattel mortgage is executed to a person as the trustee for another, to whom the debt secured is owing, it is sufficient to allege that such person acting as trustee is the legal owner of the mortgage, without alleging that he is the real holder of the debt secured.<sup>10</sup>

Venue is required to be laid in the county in which the crime occurred, is a general rule of criminal pleading, and in a prosecution charging the fraudulent sale of mortgaged property, the action must be brought in the county in which the fraudulent sale was made, not in the county in which the mortgage was given, or the county from which the property was brought.<sup>11</sup>

gage was a valid one,<sup>2</sup> was a subsisting lien<sup>3</sup> and unpaid<sup>4</sup> at the time the fraudulent sale is alleged to have been made,<sup>5</sup> and that the sale was made without the consent<sup>6</sup>—under some statutes, written consent,<sup>7</sup> under other statutes, of the owner and holder of the debt secured by the mortgage, and under some statutes the manner of disposition must be alleged,<sup>8</sup>—but the name of the purchaser or transferee need not be set out.<sup>9</sup> It seems that it is not necessary to allege that the accused owned the property or that he had a mortgageable interest therein.<sup>10</sup> Where the charge is the sale of property that had been conditionally mortgaged, the indictment or information

An averment that accused sold property falsely representing it to be free from liens and encumbrances, he well knowing that the property was not free from liens and encumbrances, but that a designated corporation held a chattel mortgage on the property to secure the payment of a specified sum, is sufficient as a basis to show a valid chattel mortgage held by the designated corporation.—Keyes v. People, 100 Ill. App. 163.

Charging that accused "heretofore, to wit, on a named date, executed and delivered to the said A a valid mortgage in writing," is a sufficient allegation that accused executed and delivered a valid mortgage to A previous to the alleged fraudulent sale.—Haile v. State, (Tex. Cr. Rep.) 43 S. W. 999.

Contra: Richter v. State, 4 Ga. App. 274, 61 S. E. 147, wherein it is held that the indictment need not specifically set out how the property was disposed of, to whom disposed of, or how loss was sustained by the mortgagee.

must allege that the mortgage had become absolute by the happening of the designated condition before the sale, or it will be insufficient.<sup>11</sup>

Duplicity can not be successfully urged against an indictment or information alleging that accused did "sell and dispose of, to one A, and to divers other persons" not known to the grand jury "the personal property described in said mortgage, to wit, four thousand bushels of No. 2 wheat," for the reason that but one sale is charged—one sale to divers persons, not divers sales to divers persons.<sup>12</sup>

Fraudulent intent is the gist of the offense, and must be sufficiently averred<sup>13</sup> and proved,<sup>14</sup> but it need not be specifically alleged that the act was done with intent to defraud, although such intent is necessary to make the offense complete.<sup>15</sup> Thus, it has been held that an information charging accused with having sold mortgaged property without notification to the mortgagee, or giving information of the existence of the mortgage to the purchaser, need not charge an intent to defraud,<sup>16</sup> and that where such intent is specifically charged it may be regarded as surplusage.<sup>17</sup>

Growing crop,<sup>18</sup> or prospective crop before planted,<sup>19</sup> we have already seen, may be mortgaged. Where a mortgage is executed upon a prospective crop as yet unplanted, indictment or information must allege this fact, that accused thereafter planted or had the crop planted, and that when growing or grown the said mortgage became a lien thereon, and that accused fraudulently disposed of such crop after the mortgage lien attached.<sup>20</sup> Where an indictment or information charges accused executed a chattel mortgage on designated acres of a growing crop, naming it, to secure a debt, and without the consent of the mortgagee, sold all the crop raised on the designated acreage, with intent to defraud, is insufficient because it fails to sufficiently describe the property alleged to have been mortgaged and sold.<sup>21</sup>

<sup>13</sup> "Dispose of" is a sufficient description of the intent in Arkansas (under Sand. & H. Dig. § 1868), when there is an allegation in the stating part that accused sold the property.—State v. Crawford, 64 Ark. 194, 41 S. W. 425.

Name of purchaser or transferee need not be set out in an indictment or information charging sale or other disposition of mortgaged property.<sup>22</sup>

§ 499. REMOVING MORTGAGED CHATTELS.<sup>1</sup> According to the general rule, an indictment or information charging fraudulent removal of mortgaged chattels with intent to defraud the mortgagee should contain all the averments,—as validity of mortgage, existence of lien, and nonpayment of debt at the time of the alleged removal,—required in an indictment or information for selling mortgaged chattels;<sup>2</sup> but there are authorities to the effect that indictment need not allege that the mortgage was in writing,<sup>3</sup> or contain any description or special mention of the mortgage,<sup>4</sup> that it was recorded in the county where the mortgagee was the owner of the mortgage,<sup>5</sup> or state the value of the property at the time of the removal.<sup>7</sup> Under the statute, removal shall not be made until the mortgage debt and thus the indictment or information did not immediately discharge the mortgagee, because it fails to state the value of the property.

Language of statute making removal a crime.—The language of the statute making removal a crime,<sup>9</sup> or language of equity, is not sufficient. Thus, under the Texas statute, "remove" mortgaged chattel from the county where the mortgage was made, "run" the mortgagee from the county, or "remove" the mortgagee from the county, was held to be insufficient.

§ 500. CONCEALING MORTGAGED PROPERTY.—An indictment or information charging the mortgagee with concealing mortgaged chattel from the mortgagee need not allege that the mortgagee did so for such concealment.<sup>1</sup> Where the indictment charges concealment of mortgaged property, the charge "concealment" will be rejected as surplusage.

can be convicted of concealing the property on proof that he aided in so doing.<sup>2</sup>

§ 501. DESCRIPTION AND VALUE. The indictment or information should contain a full and definite description of the property alleged to have been fraudulently sold, removed, or concealed—as the case may be; such as would enable an officer with a writ to locate and identify the property. Thus, it has been held that an indictment describing the property as “twelve acres of cotton,” without further description of the property, is bad for want of a sufficient description of the property mortgaged.<sup>1</sup> In a case where the property mortgaged is incorrectly described in the mortgage, an indictment or information charging the fraudulent sale, etc., of such property should allege the description as contained in the mortgage, aver that this description was incorrect, setting out wherein it was incorrect, and then allege the true description of the mortgaged property.<sup>2</sup> Where the indictment or information does not set out the chattel mortgage in hæc verba, or according to tenor, but alleges that certain fully described personal property was then and there under the lien of a valid chattel mortgage, in writing, executed by the accused, on a date named, to a specified corporation, firm or individual; that accused thereafter sold said property, the said chattel mortgage being then and there a valid lien on said property, and owned by the corporation or firm or individual named as mortgagee, is sufficient, not being open to the objection that it does not sufficiently describe the mortgaged property.<sup>3</sup> Fraudulent concealment of mortgaged property being charged, which was described as consisting of "a large quantity of ready-made clothing, the whole of the value of five hundred dollars; a large quantity of dry goods, the whole of the value of five hundred dollars; and a large quantity of hats and caps, the whole of the value of five hundred dollars—which said property the grand jurors can not more particularly describe," and alleging that the goods described belonged to A, who had mortgaged the same, giving the mortgage—the description of the property was held to be sufficient and the indictment valid.<sup>4</sup>

Value of mortgaged chattels charged to have been sold or removed or concealed is required to be alleged under some statutes, and especially is this true where the statute<sup>5</sup> provides that where the property is under a named value a designated punishment shall be inflicted, and where the value is over the designated amount another and greater punishment shall be inflicted—thereby providing two distinct offenses, with different punishments attached, distinguishable by the value of the property involved.<sup>6</sup> In the absence of such a provision and distinction in the grade or degree of punishment to be inflicted on conviction, value need not be alleged in the indictment or information<sup>7</sup> or found by the jury.<sup>8</sup>

§ 502. VARIANCE. An indictment or information charging concealing, disposing of or removing mortgaged chattel property with the intent to defraud the mortgagee, should set out particularly the specific offense, and the exactness in setting forth must be met with the same exactness in the proof<sup>1</sup> or there will be a fatal variance. Thus, under an indictment or information charging fraudulent removal and concealment of mortgaged chattels, the only question involved and submitted to the jury being whether the accused was guilty of removing and concealing such property, a conviction of disposing of mortgaged property is not warranted and can not be sustained.<sup>2</sup> In those states where the name of the person to whom mortgaged chattels were sold is required to be set forth,<sup>3</sup> an allegation that the property was disposed of "to a person unknown to the grand jury," is insufficient where the evidence shows that the name was known or could have been ascertained by the exercise of slight diligence.<sup>4</sup>

Describing the property mortgaged, without setting out the mortgage in hæc verba but according to its tenor,<sup>5</sup> though not as fully as in the mortgage, the latter is admissible in evidence;<sup>6</sup> and the fact that the mortgage covers more property than is alleged to have been disposed of, does not constitute a variance.<sup>7</sup>

Describing mortgage as having been executed by the accused, the fact that it was executed by accused and another does not constitute a variance;<sup>8</sup> and neither does the fact that the instrument was a trust deed instead of a mortgage,<sup>9</sup> or the fact that the mortgage was executed to the designated person as a trustee.<sup>10</sup> Where the description charged the debt secured was a note signed by accused and his wife, and the note offered in evidence was signed by accused alone, this was held not to constitute a variance.<sup>11</sup>

Disposing of property subject to two mortgages, being charged, both of which were alleged to have been executed by the accused, is supported by evidence of a chattel mortgage executed by accused and another and defendant as manager of a company, and another mortgage executed by a company and the accused in his individual capacity and as treasurer of a company;<sup>12</sup> and a failure of the evidence to show an unlawful disposition under one of the chattel mortgages will not warrant an acquittal where there is evidence tending to show an unlawful disposition under the other chattel mortgage.<sup>13</sup>

Description of live stock mortgaged which sets out the age, brand and color of the animal or animals, being descriptive of the identity of the animals, such descriptions are material, and must be established by the proof.<sup>14</sup> Thus, it has been held that a charge describing the mortgaged property as "one bull five years old," is not supported by evidence that the accused sold "a red but-headed bull."<sup>15</sup> But a charge that two cows and two calves were sold while subject to the lien of a chattel mortgage is sustained by a mortgage covering the two cows, for the reason that the offspring of mortgaged stock, born after the execution of the mortgage, are subject to the lien of the mortgage.<sup>16</sup>

It is to be noted, however, that the punishment now inflicted is that for a minor public nuisance,<sup>4</sup> and not the old punishment of the ducking stool.

§ 504. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT. According to the old rule, an indictment or information charging this offense must allege that at a stated time in a given place, the accused was a common scold,<sup>1</sup> to the

In Com. v. Hutchinson, 5 Clark (Pa.) 321, 3 Am. L. Reg. 113, Judge Galbraith denied the indictability of a common scold, on the ground of the uncertainty of the punishment to be inflicted; but this holding has been overruled in Com. v. Mohn, 52 Pa. St. 243, 91 Am. Dec. 153.

§ 505. ANGER AND MALICE. The indictment or information need not allege either anger or malice, neither of these being necessary to constitute the offense,<sup>1</sup> it being sufficient simply to aver that accused is a common scold.<sup>2</sup>

§ 506. ALLEGATION OF SPECIFIC ACTS. The offense consisting in a course of conduct,<sup>1</sup> the specific act constituting the alleged offense need not be set out in the indictment or information,<sup>2</sup> though the specific facts or particulars necessary to show a course of conduct should be set out.<sup>3</sup>

§ 507. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS. From the very nature of the offense it is peculiar to the accused, and another can not be involved therein. Another may be guilty of a like offense, but can not be guilty of the same offense. Hence two defendants can not be joined in an indictment or information charging the offense of being a common scold.<sup>1</sup>

§ 508. IN GENERAL—CHARGING THE OFFENSE.<sup>1</sup> The general rules in criminal pleading govern in the case of a charge of conspiracy. The indictment or information should allege an intent to do an unlawful act, or to accomplish a lawful purpose by unlawful means;<sup>2</sup> and where the act or end to be accomplished is in itself lawful, but the means to be used are unlawful, the means intended to be or actually used must be set out as a component part of the offense.<sup>3</sup> In those cases in which the offense consists in the conspiracy itself, and not in the acts done or means used to accomplish the purpose, an indictment charging in general terms will be sufficient where it describes an unlawful conspiracy for the accomplishment of a bad purpose by an unlawful act.<sup>4</sup>

Certainty to a common intent sufficient to identify the offense is all that is required.—Williamson v. U. S., 207 U. S. 447, 52 L. Ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

"All facts necessary to constitute the conspiracy, including the overt act, must be averred with all the particularity required in criminal pleadings, because conspiracy is the crime with which the defendants stand charged, and with the nature and character of which they, under constitutional safeguards, are entitled to be advised. But when the conspiracy charged is one to commit an offense, and that offense (as in the case of all offenses against the United States) is clearly defined by statute, no high degree of particularity is required in describing it. If enough is shown to make it appear that an offense against the United States has been committed it is sufficient."—Thomas v. United States, 84 C. C. A. 486, 156 Fed. 906, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

§ 509. — FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT. It is thought that where the conspiracy charged is in itself a misdemeanor or to accomplish an end which is a misdemeanor, or the combination and end being legal to accomplish the object by acts which are a misdemeanor, the prosecution may be by information; but that in those cases in which the conspiracy itself or the object to be attained is a felony, or the combination and object being legal, the means to be used being a felony, the prosecution should be by indictment.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it has been said that inasmuch as a conspiracy to defraud the United States is an infamous crime,<sup>2</sup> there must be a presentment or in-charged, being necessary to a valid indictment or information under such a statute.<sup>7</sup>

Code form prescribed, an indictment or information in language analogous thereto will be sufficient.<sup>8</sup>

"Falsely and maliciously" are said to be indispensable to a valid indictment charging conspiracy in some jurisdictions, and are required to be used, not in connection with the allegation of conspiracy, but in connection with the allegation of the act done. However, it seems that where the falsity and malice of the act are sufficiently shown by an averment that the conspirators "well knew," etc., the omission of the words "falsely and maliciously," or their use in the wrong connection, will not vitiate the indictment or information.<sup>9</sup>

Conclusion "contrary to law" is in effect to charge a common-law conspiracy.<sup>10</sup>

§ 511. — PLACE OF CONSPIRACY. — It is well as the time when,<sup>1</sup> a conspiracy is required to be set forth in an indictment charging a criminal conspiracy. The indictment should be done with such fullness and certainty that it will be sufficient to confer on the jury the power to try the offense;<sup>2</sup> and inasmuch as the place of the act may be the place of jurisdiction, it is where the conspiracy was effected, or where it is alleged,<sup>4</sup> for it is now the well-known rule that the

§ 512. — NAMES OF CONSPIRATORS. In the absence of a statutory requirement to that effect, an indictment or information need not allege the names of the conspirators<sup>1</sup> is the better doctrine, although there are authorities to the contrary;<sup>2</sup> and this is true even though the names of all of the conspirators are known to the grand jury,<sup>3</sup> in which case it may even be alleged that the names are to the grand jury unknown,<sup>4</sup> except in case of an indictment or information charging a conspiracy in restraint of trade,<sup>5</sup> in which case the names of all the known parties to the conspiracy must be alleged.<sup>6</sup> Hence it follows that it is sufficient for an indictment or information to allege that the names of the conspirators are to the grand jury unknown, when in fact they are unknown.<sup>7</sup>

§ 513. — AIDER OF INSUFFICIENT CHARGE BY OTHER AVERMENTS. In those cases in which an indictment or information imperfectly or insufficiently sets out the unlawful combination, the instrument can not be aided by a subsequent averment of overt acts done in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy.<sup>1</sup> When the criminality of a conspiracy consists in an unlawful agreement of two or more persons to compass or promote some criminal or illegal purpose, that purpose must be fully and clearly stated in the charging part of the indictment or information; and if the criminality of the offense which is intended to be charged consists in the agreement to compass or promote some purpose, not in and of itself criminal or unlawful, by the use of falsehood, force, fraud, or other criminal or unlawful means, such intended use of falsehood, force, fraud, or other criminal or unlawful means must be fully set out in the charging part of the indictment.<sup>2</sup> Matter preceding or following such charging part, or qualifying or descriptive words used, will not be sufficient to cure the defect.<sup>3</sup>

Charging conspiracy to do an act so another person named should commit a felony, held not to be a sufficient allegation that the purpose of the act was to induce such person to commit a felony.—Com. v. Barnes, 132 Mass. 242.

Conspiracy to commit arson attempted to be charged by an indictment alleging that the accused and others "feloniously, wilfully and maliciously did conspire, co-operate, and agree together to burn . . . a certain residence building," the court held that the words "feloniously, wilfully and maliciously" applied to the act of conspiracy and not to the act of

§ 517. KNOWLEDGE AND INTENT. A conspiracy being unlawful, and every citizen being presumed to know the law, it is unnecessary in an indictment or information charging conspiracy to allege knowledge on the part of the accused of the wrongful character of the act of conspiring and combining;<sup>1</sup> when the combination and the object to be accomplished thereby are alike lawful, but the end is to be attained by unlawful means,<sup>2</sup> it is unnecessary to allege that the accused knew the means to be used to be criminal, because where an act is in its characteristics and quality wrongful, knowledge of its wrongful character is presumed and need not therefore be alleged,<sup>3</sup> except in those cases where the act becomes wrongful and criminal by reason of the presence of accidental or fortuitous features not necessarily attendant upon it,<sup>4</sup> in which case knowledge must be alleged.<sup>5</sup> A person is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act;<sup>6</sup> yet where intent is or becomes a necessary element in a conspiracy charged, or in the means adopted to carry it out, intent should be alleged,<sup>7</sup> but this may be done either in the language of the statute or in language of equivalent import.<sup>8</sup> Where an intent to defraud is alleged, the facts showing the intent need not be alleged;<sup>9</sup>

§ 519. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS. We have already seen<sup>1</sup> that an indictment or information charging conspiracy need not set out the names of all the conspirators, except in the case of an indictment or information charging a conspiracy in restraint of trade;<sup>2</sup> neither is it necessary to join all the conspirators as parties in the indictment or information,<sup>3</sup> for they may be indicted and prosecuted either jointly<sup>4</sup> or separately,<sup>5</sup> in the absence of anything peculiar to the particular case requiring a joint prosecution.<sup>6</sup> The usual, and probably the better, practice is to indict and prosecute jointly.<sup>7</sup> Where there is a conspiracy to defraud the United States, in which a federal officer is a party to the corrupt combination, the officer may be joined with the private persons in the indictment and prosecution.<sup>8</sup>

§ 520. JOINDER OF COUNTS. The joinder of counts in an indictment or information, and the general rules governing the same, have been already sufficiently discussed.<sup>1</sup> We have also seen<sup>2</sup> that the judicious pleader will insert counts to meet and provide for every contingency of the evidence. These general rules govern in an indictment or information charging a criminal conspiracy, and the pleader may set forth the offense in all the various ways thought prudent to meet the possible phases of the evidence,<sup>3</sup> even though the counts may involve transactions constituting offenses of different grades,<sup>4</sup> some of which may not attain to the degree of felonies, and not include a charge of conspiracy;<sup>5</sup> and where all the counts in an indictment or information are manifestly based on the same transaction, the court will assume that the intention was to charge one offense, only.<sup>6</sup> Thus, it has been said that the indictment or information may contain a count charging the criminal conspiracy, and another count charging the criminal act committed in pursuance of such conspiracy,<sup>7</sup> in those cases in which the two offenses are similar in nature and mode of trial and in punishment to be inflicted on conviction.<sup>8</sup> Each count in such an indictment or information should directly and fully charge the conspiracy, and not plead the same by reference to a former count in which the charge of conspiracy is set out.<sup>9</sup>

§ 521. — DUPPLICITY. An indictment or information charging a conspiracy which is in and of itself criminal or is to compass the commission of acts which are criminal, is not open to the objection that it is duplicitous because it charges the overt act or acts done in pursuance of such criminal conspiracy,<sup>1</sup> and especially is this the case where no conviction is sought on account of such overt act or acts;<sup>2</sup> neither will an indictment or infor-

Thus, it has been held that an indictment charging a conspiracy to burn property and to commit arson is not bad for duplicity, because it alleges overt acts constituting arson.—State v. Madden, (Iowa, Oct. 6, 1914) 148 N. W. 995.

The reason for this rule is the fact that the conspiracy may be complete without any overt act in pursuance thereof;<sup>8</sup> and although the offense of criminal conspiracy—even where the overt act is committed, and the object or purpose of the conspiracy accomplished—is complete before the overt act, in the sense that nothing more is necessary to be done to constitute the act of combining and agreeing to a crime, yet the conspiracy must be deemed to continue during the commission of the overt act or acts.<sup>9</sup> Charging the overt act or acts in pursuance of the conspiracy does not necessarily make the design of the pleader, or the effect of the instrument, charge anything more than the conspiracy;<sup>10</sup> the fact that the conspirators carried out the object of the conspiracy may be alleged by way of aggravation of the offense,<sup>11</sup> and given in evidence to prove the conspiracy.<sup>12</sup>

Where the statute provides the definition and punishment of a felonious conspiracy, and also further provides punishment of an additional character for the overt act of a higher criminal nature where the latter is committed in pursuance of the conspiracy, it being one transaction, the description of the crime as an entirety in the indictment is not only proper but necessary.<sup>13</sup>

Instances. Accordingly, it has been held that a count charging a single conspiracy or combination to commit several crimes is not multifarious or duplicitous;<sup>14</sup> that an indictment charging defendants "did wickedly and maliciously conspire together to injure the person and character" of a designated individual, and to assault him "with the felonious intent<sup>15</sup> to inflict upon him a great bodily injury, in violation of law; and in pursuance of said conspiracy together said defendants did in the night-time feloniously decoy said" named person

But the refinements of the objection did not appeal to the court; the indictment was held to be good and to state the statutory offense of conspiracy. — State v. Ormiston, 66 Iowa 143, 5 Am. Cr. Rep. 113, 23 N. W. 370.

“away from his home and family and in way, and did then and there feloniously and tar and feather” said person, in ground of duplicity,<sup>16</sup> the charge being conspiracy only and not a charge of the other acts, which were recited by way that a charge of a conspiracy to do an act at night-time, while wearing white caps, not make the indictment duplicitous;<sup>18</sup> charging a conspiracy to injure, oppress, intimidate a citizen in the free exercise of his constitutional right, and in the carrying out of a murder is charged to have been committed for duplicity;<sup>19</sup> that an indictment charging a conspiracy to commit acts which are prohibited disjunctively in the statute, is not duplicitous.<sup>20</sup>

It is duplicitous, however, to charge in an indictment a conspiracy to commit a designated crime and to count charge the commission of the same.

§ 522. SURPLUSAGE. We have already seen that it is not necessary to a full and adequate indictment that all the ingredients of the offense sought to be proved be incorporated in an indictment or that all be included in a proper and sufficient charge of the alleged offense, may be treated as surplusage and is applicable to an indictment or information.

bination.<sup>4</sup> The reason for this rule is the fact that the offense consists in the unlawful combination and agreement, not in the acts following in pursuance thereof, such overt acts being merely evidence of the agreement.<sup>5</sup> However, an overt act or acts may be charged by way of aggravation;<sup>6</sup> and it is usual to set out the overt act or acts done or committed in order to effect the common purpose of the conspiracy.<sup>7</sup>

Overt act alleged, it need not be charged that all the accused, or all the conspirators, participated therein. The fact of conspiracy must be alleged as to all the accused, but the overt act or acts done in furtherance of such conspiracy may be charged against those who committed them, only.<sup>8</sup> More than one overt act may be charged in the same indictment or information, without laying the instrument open to the objection of duplicity.<sup>9</sup> While the time<sup>10</sup> and place<sup>11</sup> of the conspiracy are required to be set out, the time of an overt act, or of the last overt act, need not be alleged.<sup>12</sup>

Remoteness of overt act will not, in and of itself, vitiate an indictment charging a conspiracy. Thus, where the conspiracy alleged was to store away goods with the intent thereafter to go into bankruptcy and conceal the goods from the trustee appointed in the bankruptcy proceedings to be subsequently commenced, not only the subsequent filing of a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, but also the concealing of the goods before the petition was filed, being alleged as overt acts, the indictment was upheld, notwithstanding the fact that at the time when the goods were stored away the act was not criminal;<sup>13</sup> and where the charge was that there was a conspiracy to bring Chinese into the United States who were not entitled to admission, by means of a named vessel, it was said that the provisioning of the vessel, the sailing of the vessel from a named port in Mexico in order to accomplish a return voyage, and the sending of a telegram giving instructions regarding such return voyage, were overt acts which were not too remote under the statute,<sup>14</sup> and the indictment alleging them as such was upheld.<sup>15</sup>

§ 524. — UNDER STATUTE OR COURT RULE. The common law form of indictment charging a conspiracy has not met with the approval of many of the courts of this country, and in the most of the states of the Union an overt act done in pursuance of the conspiracy is required to be alleged, although the gist of the offense still remains the unlawful combination,<sup>1</sup> which must be proved against all the accused, each one of whom then becomes responsible for the act of any other of the co-conspirators,<sup>2</sup> where done in pursuance of the conspiracy and the reasonable and natural result of an attempt to carry it into effect.<sup>3</sup>

The reason for the rule requiring an overt act in pursuance of the conspiracy to be alleged has been said to be merely to furnish a locus pœnitentiæ, something before the act done; either one or all of the parties may abandon their design, and thus avoid the penalty prescribed by the statute;<sup>4</sup> for if such were not the law, indictments for conspiracy would stand upon a different footing than indictments for any other crime, as it is a general principle that a party can not be punished for an evil design, unless he has taken some step toward carrying it out.<sup>5</sup> While it is true that an overt act is regarded as evidence of, and admissible in evidence to show, a conspiracy, and that matters of evidence need not be set forth in an indictment,<sup>6</sup> this is manifestly an exception to the rule in so far as the requirement that an overt act shall be alleged is concerned; the requirement, however, is not for the purpose of showing that the cor-

§ 526. SPECIFIC INSTANCES. The limits of this treatise will not permit of a systematic treatment of the requisites and sufficiency of an indictment or information charging a conspiracy to commit each and every crime and offense in relation to which a criminal conspiracy may be entered into; attention is necessarily confined to the main groups or classes of crimes and offenses to accomplish which criminal conspiracies are entered into most frequently. The discussion already given and rules laid down in this title, together with what follows herein, are thought to be sufficient to guide the pleader in any particular instance which may arise in practice. It is sufficient to state in this place that in each particular crime or offense the purpose or object of the corrupt combination must be set forth by alleging the particular crime or offense that was to be accomplished or committed under and in pursuance of the agreement;<sup>1</sup> a statute dispensing with such allegation has been held to be unconstitutional,<sup>2</sup> for the reason that the accused would have no means of knowing

Crime against United States being charged as the object of the conspiracy, such conspiracy must be sufficiently alleged in the charging part; any defect in such allegation can not be aided by an averment of an act done under or in pursuance of the conspiracy;<sup>16</sup> but it has been held that it is not necessary to show in the indictment why or how the overt act could or did aid in carrying out the conspiracy,<sup>17</sup> though other cases hold that the indictment must show a connection between the act done and the plan or method of the conspiracy,<sup>18</sup> on the ground that it is for the court and not for the pleader to determine relevancy.<sup>19</sup> of the indictment in what manner the act described would tend to effect the object of the conspiracy, and there is considerable authority to the effect that if any act is set forth and is alleged by the pleader to have been done pursuant to the conspiracy or to effect its object, this is enough, though there is no apparent connection between the overt act and the object. This seems unsound in principle, for relevancy is for the court and not for the pleader. If the act must be qualified by circumstances to make it relevant it should be pleaded, not simply, but with the circumstances which make it relevant." See, also, *United States v. Trespass a felony does not merge in meanor<sup>24</sup> or felony.<sup>25</sup> In those cases where a conspiracy to commit a felony is regarded as an attempt to commit the felony, the authorities very largely predominate which hold that there is no merger in the accomplished felony;<sup>26</sup> and where, under the statute, some overt act is necessary to constitute the crime of conspiracy, the conspiracy is not merged in the executed crime.<sup>27</sup>

§ 528. — CONSPIRACY TO CHEAT AND DEFRAUD GENERALLY.<sup>1</sup> It has been said that cheating and defrauding a person of property or money, though never right, was not necessarily an offense at common law; the transaction might be dishonest and immoral, and still not be unlawful in the sense in which that term is used in criminal law.<sup>2</sup> The general rule in this country, however, is that a conspiracy to cheat and defraud another out of his mitted in connection with the trespass.—White v. Fort, 10 N. C. (3 Hawks.) 251.

<sup>24</sup> People v. Richards, 1 Mich. 216, 51 Am. Dec. 75; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 265, 21 Am. Dec. 122. See, also, State v. Murphy, 6 Ala. 765, 41 Am. Dec. 79; State v. Murray, 15 Me. 100; Com. v. Gillispie, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 469, 10 Am. Dec. 475; Com. v. Delany, 1 Grant Cas. 224; Com. v. McGowan, 2 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 341.

<sup>25</sup> Thus, it has been held that a conspiracy to cheat and defraud by false pretenses and devices is not merged in the actual cheating and defrauding thereby (State v. Mayberry, 48 Me. 218); that a conspiracy to impede an officer in the discharge of his official duties is not merged in the crime of actually impeding him in those duties (State v. Noyes, 25 Vt. 415), and the like.

<sup>2</sup> State v. Hewett, 31 Me. 396. In this case the indictment charged the defendants with "devising and intending to injure and defraud, and did unlawfully conspire, combine, confederate and agree together the said A to injure, cheat and defraud of a certain horse, the property of the said A," etc.; which was held in-money or property is an indictable offense,<sup>3</sup> whether the object or means to be employed in its consummation is punishable as a crime or not.<sup>4</sup>

At common law an indictment or information charging a conspiracy to cheat and defraud need not set out the means to be used in effecting the object,<sup>5</sup> a general charge being sufficient—e. g., by means of divers false and fraudulent devices.<sup>6</sup> This doctrine has been followed by some of the courts in this country,<sup>7</sup> but the better doc-sufficient because it stated the purpose only, without setting out the means to be used.

16 United States v. Wupperman, 215 Fed. 135.

An indictment for a conspiracy to misuse the mails in a scheme to defraud is sufficient where it alleges the conspiracy to defraud by using the post office and that in carrying out the scheme they did the acts subsequently charged, and where it further sets out that they deposited a letter in the post office, setting out the letter.—Ex parte King, 200 Fed. 622.

Letter should be set out if possible or sufficiently identified or described, but it is not necessary to allege how the letter would or was intended to aid in the scheme.—United States v. Wupperman, 215 Fed. 135.

Under U. S. Rev. Stats., § 5480 (5 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., p. 973), there must be alleged in the indictment and proved on the trial: (1) That the accused had devised a scheme or artifice to defraud; (2) that they intended to effect this scheme by opening, or intending to open, correspondence with persons through the post office; (3) that in carrying out such scheme such persons must either have deposited a letter or packet in the post office or taken or received one therefrom. And the indictment must allege a combination between the accused to do the things required to constitute the offense denounced by the statute.—Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. Ed. 667, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

The above ruling is considered in McConkey v. United States, 96 C. C. A. 501, 171 Fed. 829, and the language construed to mean simply that the acts which the indictment charges the accused to have conspired to commit must, if committed, constitute an offense under Rev. Stats., § 5480; that it does not mean that it must be distinctly and separately charged that the accused conspired to commit each separate element of the offense, such elements being separately stated.

county<sup>4</sup> or state.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a conspiracy to issue a pay certificate on the state treasury for the purpose of getting money out of the state treasury without an equivalent rendered therefor is a criminal conspiracy which is complete on the corrupt combination, and the indictment or information charging the same need not set forth specifically the date, number, amount, and so forth, of the pay certificate issued in pursuance of such conspiracy.<sup>6</sup>

§ 530. — CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.<sup>1</sup> It being the settled doctrine of our jurisprudence that there are no common law crimes against the government of the United States, an act or omission, to be criminally punishable in the federal courts, must have been declared to be an offense by an act of congress.<sup>2</sup> This fact materially modifies the common law rule as to conspiracies to defraud the government.<sup>3</sup> Such offense, being purely a matter of statute, the offense, as well as the form and sufficiency of the indictment charging the same, is controlled entirely by the federal statute relating to and denouncing the crime,<sup>4</sup> and the require-persons not rendering any services. — Madden v. State, 57 N. J. L. (28 Vr.) 324, 30 Atl. 541.

Combination of individuals to cause municipality to pay largely in excess of actual value of work of constructing a public works, and divide the excess among themselves, by means of predetermined bids, all in excess of what they should be, held not to charge a criminal conspiracy to cheat and defraud under Indiana statute. — *State v. ments of that statute must be fully met and complied with in every essential regard. It is sufficient to follow the language of the statute,<sup>5</sup> where that statute contains a definition of the crime and sets out all the essential elements going to constitute such crime; but the offense must be sufficiently set forth in the charging part of the indictment, for it can not be aided<sup>6</sup> by a subsequent averment of an overt act done by any one of the conspirators in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy.<sup>7</sup> The federal statute<sup>8</sup> not containing a definition, and not setting forth the constituent elements of the crime of conspiracy to defraud or injure the United States government, an indictment following the language of that statute, simply, will be wholly insufficient; it must, in addition, set forth fully and clearly all the acts and elements necessary to constitute the crime sought to be charged.<sup>9</sup>

Instances of sufficient and insufficient indictments, under court rulings, may be of practical utility; but space will not permit of an exhaustive citation or discussion. A charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States by "certifying that certain false and fraudulent accounts and vouchers for materials furnished for use in the construction of" a named public building in the course of erection in a designated city, "and for labor performed on said building, were true, genuine, and correct," held to be bad for uncertainty.<sup>17</sup> Charging conspiracy to defraud by presenting false, fictitious and fraudulent claims to the United States surveyor-general for allowance and payment, must further allege that the surveyor-general was authorized and empowered to allow and approve such claims;<sup>18</sup> but a charge of conspiracy to defraud by bribing a board of examining surgeons to make a false report, on an application for a pension, to the commissioner of pensions, need not allege that such commissioner had power to grant the pension, because that power is conferred by federal statute, of which statute the court must take judicial notice;<sup>19</sup> and a charge is sufficient which alleges accused conspired to procure a pension for one of them in the name of a dead soldier, and in pursuance thereof knowingly made and presented to the commissioner of pensions a false affidavit in support of such claim to a pension, such false affidavit and the pre-

The defendant accused tendered an agreement to pay money to United States officials, to-wit, the President of the United States, acting under the authority of the United States in and for the defense of a named state, is insufficient to constitute an overt act to effect the object of the conspiracy to defraud the United States, not being sufficient to identify either the agreement or the person to whom the tender was made. To determine whether the tender was made to some one else.<sup>24</sup> Charging a conspiracy in a particular manner between accused and another, whereby accused was to pay money in consideration on the purchase price of each of a certain articles purchased by the government, under the influence of said officer, is sufficient to establish the fact that the officer's assent is necessary to the commission. prosecuted for an attempt to kill, "of which said crime the said" person named "was innocent," is sufficient without an allegation that the accused knew, or had reasonable ground to believe, that he was innocent,<sup>4</sup> for the reason that it is not necessary to allege the innocence of the person against whom the conspiracy is directed.<sup>5</sup> Charging an officer making the arrest, the person prosecuting, and other persons concerned in the proceeding, with conspiracy by criminal process to cause the false imprisonment of a named person for an improper purpose, is good;<sup>6</sup> but the indictment must allege and the proof show an actual conspiracy, because of the fact that if each of the accused acted illegally and maliciously in the premises, but without previous concert and combination, it will not be sufficient.<sup>7</sup>

Common slander may display as much baseness and malignity of purpose, as much falsehood in its perpetration, and be as pernicious in its dissemination as any of the other crimes mentioned in this section, but though contra bonos mores is not indictable;<sup>8</sup> however, a charge of a conspiracy to slander another by accusing him of an indictable offense, charges a crime, and is good.<sup>9</sup>

Thus, charging a conspiracy to bring a named person into disrepute by spreading the accusation that he is the father of a bastard child<sup>10</sup> or of a child likely to become a bastard,<sup>11</sup> or with keeping a bastard,<sup>12</sup> has been upheld as charging a crime; but a charge of conspiracy in prosecuting another in bastardy proceedings, can not be sustained where the prosecution was on behalf of the woman interested, and the accused honestly believed from her statements that the accusation was true, and were thereby induced to act in the matter.<sup>13</sup>

Seduction of a female being an indictable offense,<sup>14</sup> an indictment which charges a conspiracy to seduce a named female from her virtue and to enable one of the accused to carnally know her, by effecting a pretended marriage with her and thus gaining her own and her parents' consent thereto, in the belief that the marriage was legal, and in furtherance of such conspiracy with procuring and presenting a false and forged marriage license, representing it to be true and genuine, and falsely and fraudulently representing that one of the accused was a justice of the peace and authorized by law to solemnize marriages, who actually performed a pretended marriage ceremony, in consequence of all of which the said female and her parents were deceived, etc., is a good indictment, both in matter and form.<sup>15</sup>

Corporations are within the protection of the rule of law treated in this section, and an indictment charging a conspiracy to injure business and property through causing a decline in the market-value of named stocks by spreading divers false and injurious rumors, "well knowing the premises, and that the said false and injurious rumors would occasion a decline of the stock," sufficiently states a criminal conspiracy and offense under a statute<sup>9</sup> denouncing and prohibiting the circulation of such false and injurious rumors and statements;<sup>10</sup> charging conspiracy to falsely represent to the members and shareholders of a corporation named that it was insolvent, for the purpose of securing a sufficient number of members to petition for a receiver, with the fraudulent intent to injure the business and property of the corporation, sufficiently charges a criminal conspiracy to injure business and property.<sup>11</sup> A charge of conspiracy to obstruct the business of a corporation, and so forth, under statute,<sup>12</sup> need not allege specific overt acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy;<sup>13</sup> and an allegation of conspiracy to prevent a corporation from taking into its employment certain designated persons or class of persons, need not set out the terms of the intended employment.<sup>14</sup>

§ 533. — CONSPIRACY TO BLAME MONEY. An indictment or information for conspiracy to blackmail and to extort money is an offense at common law, and need not allege any means to be used in carrying the offense out, but an allegation as to the means is sufficient.<sup>2</sup> The allegation should be that the defendant conspired to extort money from a person;<sup>3</sup> it is unnecessary to aver that the victim was innocent or in terms that he was not. Thus, an indictment charging a man and a woman to extort money from a person by "charging and accusing" that he was guilty of adultery with the woman, "with the intent to extort from him there unjustly and unlawfully to him divers sums of money from him," is good, although the usual "for compounding the said offense" is omitted, and falsely and maliciously charged on him.

Chief Justice Shaw in the view that the preamble and introduction to this indictment, being mere recitals, are not traversable, and therefore could not be looked to in aid of an imperfect averment of the facts constituting the description of the offense sought to be charged; but that, stripped of the introductory recitals and unnecessary qualifying epithets attached to the facts, the averment is good. The manifest intention of the association as set out was an unlawful purpose.

was held to sufficiently charge the offense of conspiracy to extort money.<sup>6</sup>

Surplusage<sup>7</sup> in an indictment charging a conspiracy to extort money will be disregarded. Thus where the allegation charged accused conspired "by false pretenses and subtle means and devices, to extort from" a named person designated moneys, and the proof failed to show that accused employed any false pretenses in the attempt to obtain the money, the court held that the allegation as to the use of false pretenses should be rejected as surplusage.<sup>8</sup>

Conspiracy to extort money under cover of office being charged in an indictment, by taking from certain named persons and others unknown, "as and for fees and rewards, emoluments, and pay for obtaining and procuring the electing of them," naming the persons, "to the position of school teachers" in a designated public school or schools, is sufficient without an allegation that the payment and payments was and were not made voluntarily, or stating that the money was exacted and taken as and for a fee for official services.<sup>9</sup>

§ 534. — CONSPIRACY TO INTERFERE WITH CIVIL RIGHTS. An indictment charging a conspiracy to "injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate" a named person in the free exercise of any right or privilege secured by the constitution or laws of the United States, must allege that the person or persons conspired against were citizens of the United States;<sup>1</sup> and the indictment must show on its face such acts that, if proved as alleged, will support a conviction for the offense charged.<sup>2</sup>

must set out the acts constituting the conspiracy;<sup>12</sup> but an indictment charging a conspiracy to prevent a named person from exercising his right to secure a homestead upon the public domain, by accused who went disguised upon the land upon which he had made a homestead entry, and with force and arms drove him from the same, was held to sufficiently charge the offense under this statute.<sup>13</sup>

§ 535. — CONSPIRACY IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE OR COMMERCE.<sup>1</sup> Agreements or combinations in restraint of trade, or contrary to public policy, though invalid, are not necessarily illegal in the sense of giving a right to an injunction or a right to an action for damages by a third party for injury,<sup>2</sup> or laying the parties liable to a criminal prosecution for conspiracy. The test of legality, under the federal anti-trust law of 1890,<sup>3</sup> is whether it is the necessary effect of such agreement and combination to stifle, or directly and substantially restrict, free competition in commerce among the states;<sup>4</sup> undue restraints

This act condemns combinations in restraint of interstate or foreign trade or commerce, or the monopolization, or any attempt to monopolize, any part of such interstate or foreign trade or commerce; but the court's judicial interpretation goes far to nullify the wholesome provisions of the act by declaring and giving a meaning which does not destroy the individual's right to contract to the injury and restraint of free competition in interstate and foreign trade and commerce. within the meaning of the federal constitution,<sup>3</sup> and for that reason can be prosecuted in the federal courts on information instead of by indictment;<sup>4</sup> and these cases have misled some editors<sup>5</sup> and text writers<sup>6</sup> into the error of declaring such doctrine to be the law. This precise question having been presented to the federal supreme court in 1884, that court discussed and rejected the doctrine of the circuit and district court cases, specifically holding that (1) a charge of counterfeiting is a charge with an infamous crime, and (2) the charge can be prosecuted on presentment by indictment only.<sup>7</sup>

Offense against whom. It has been said that an indictment in a state court for the crime of counterfeiting may charge the offense to have been committed against the sovereignty of the people of the state instead of against the sovereignty of the United States.<sup>8</sup>

§ 539. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS. The general rules of law, already discussed,<sup>1</sup> governing joining defendants in criminal cases, apply in a charge of counterfeiting; and two or more persons may be jointly indicted on a charge of making counterfeit money,<sup>2</sup> or on the charge of utter-

§ 540. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF THE INDICTMENT—IN GENERAL. In an indictment charging counterfeiting in any of its branches or phases, as in an indictment charging any other common-law or statutory offense, certainty and clearness are essential to sufficiency;<sup>1</sup> all the elements<sup>2</sup> of the particular branch or phase of counterfeiting sought to be charged must be set forth<sup>3</sup> so plainly that the accused will understand<sup>4</sup> and the court will judicially know with what particular offense he stands charged<sup>5</sup> and the jury will not be misled.<sup>6</sup> The offense must be charged by direct averment and not by way of recital.<sup>7</sup>

Amendments and corrections before returned into court will not vitiate an indictment charging counterfeiting in any of its branches.<sup>8</sup> Thus, where the indictment charged accused with uttering and publishing a counterfeit $10 bank note purporting to be issued by the Lafayette Bank of Cincinnati, and before the indictment was returned into court the prosecuting attorney added, in pencil, an "s" to the word "promise" in "promise to pay," the amendment was held to be immaterial.<sup>9</sup>

Conclusion, in those cases in which the counterfeiting charged was created by statute, must be contrary to the form of the statute,<sup>14</sup> but it is otherwise where the offense was indictable in the state at common law prior to the passage of the statute;<sup>15</sup> and where the indictment is in the state court it may charge the offense to have been against the sovereignty of the people of the state.<sup>16</sup>

§ 541. — FOLLOWING LANGUAGE OF STATUTE. The general rule is that an indictment charging a statutory offense may do so in the words—or substantially in the words, or in words of the same legal import<sup>1</sup>—of the statute describing and denouncing the offense;<sup>2</sup> and an indictment is good which follows the form prescribed by code or <sup>14</sup> The general rule regarding statutory offenses, and not peculiar to counterfeiting. See People v. Enoch, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 159, 27 Am. Dec. 197; Hess v. State, 5 Ohio 5, 22 Am. Compare: State v. Toadvine, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 16 (a conclusion contrary to the statute is insufficient).

"Against the form of the statute" sufficient, although the offense charged is inhibited by several statutes.—State v. Wilbor, 36 Am. Dec. 245.

Where a statute creates or prohibits an offense and inflicts a punishment therefor, the indictment must conclude "against the form of the statute." But where the statute only inflicts a punishment on what was an offense before, there is no necessity of mentioning the statute.—Com. v. Searle, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 332, 4 Am. Dec. 446.

statute.<sup>3</sup> An indictment charging counterfeiting in any of its branches, may follow the language of the statute under which drawn in those cases where such statute sets forth clearly and fully all the essential elements of the particular crime sought to be charged;<sup>4</sup> but in those cases in which such statute does not clearly and fully set forth, and explicitly, set forth all the essential elements of the offense sought to be charged, an indictment following the language of the statute will be insufficient, unless it further sets forth and properly charges those essential elements.<sup>5</sup> Where the language of the statute describes the offense, but contains a proviso or exception—e. g., possession without “lawful authority”—passing “ignorantly, innocently,” and the indictment omits the proviso or exception must be expressly and negatively negated.<sup>7</sup>

§ 542. — INTENT TO DEFRAUD. In the absence of a statutory provision or requirement, an indictment charging counterfeiting in any of its branches or phases must allege the act complained of was done “with intent to defraud”;<sup>1</sup> but in those cases where the statute makes it an offense to defraud an element of the particular crime charged, such intent must be alleged.<sup>2</sup> In the latter case, it is thought, an indictment that the particular act complained of was done

An indictment charging the crime of counterfeiting may join any two or all of the branches or phases of the crime in one count, where the indictment pursues the words of the statute,<sup>1</sup> or it may combine in separate counts all the branches or phases of the crime;<sup>2</sup> and where the act complained of constitutes an offense under two or more statutes there may be a count under each statute,<sup>3</sup> even though the punishment under one of the statutes or for the crime charged in one of the counts is imperative and for another it is discretionary.<sup>4</sup> This is on the general prin-

Repugnancy in criminal pleading,<sup>4</sup> like repugnancy in civil pleading, consists in an inconsistency or disagreement between the statements of material fact or facts<sup>5</sup> in the allegation or charging part. Thus, it has been held that an indictment alleging that a bank-bill was "false, forged, altered and counterfeited" is bad for repugnancy;<sup>6</sup> and a like holding has been made as to an indictment charging "a certain false, forged and counterfeit paper, partly written and partly printed, purporting to be a bank-bill of the United States for ten dollars, signed by A, president, and B, cashier."<sup>7</sup> Charging coun-

Criticised in United States v. Howell, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 432, 20 L. Ed. 195, in which Mr. Justice Miller says: "In this statement 'signed' and 'purporting' are italicised, and the court may have held the indictment bad because terfeiting "a good and legal coin of the state of Missouri," "called a Mexican dollar," is too plainly repugnant to require animadversion;<sup>8</sup> but charging the passing of a "base and counterfeited" coin, the language of the statute being "base or counterfeited," is not repugnant.<sup>9</sup>

Uncertainty that vitiates consists in leaving a material fact or element to be conjectured or surmised or inferred instead of positively stating it specifically and distinctly. Thus, it has been held that the omission of the word "did" from the material allegation "did feloniously utter and publish" a designated counterfeit, vitiates for uncertainty;<sup>10</sup> and the like holding has been made in regard to an allegation that the accused "had in his possession the former word was used, thus sustaining the objection made in Rex v. Birch, 2 East P. C. 980. Or it may have held that the language of the indictment amounted to an averment that the bill charged to be forged was signed in fact by the president and cashier of the bank, in which case it could not be a forgery" or a counterfeit bill.

<sup>10</sup> State v. Halder, 2 McC. L. (S. C.) 377, 13 Am. Dec. 738. The court say: "You are left to conjecture what is intended. If you state to a special pleader that the prisoner is indicted for passing a counterfeit bank-note, his learning will readily supply all the averments as to time, place and manner, necessary to a perfect indictment; and according to this course of reasoning no formal indictment is necessary. But the ignorant, as well as the learned, are sometimes, and indeed more frequently, the subjects of criminal prosecutions; and it is as important that they should be apprised of the charge against them. Nothing ought, therefore, to be left to conjecture. It might be conjectured from what appears in the indictment that the charge intended was that the prisoner was present when another did the act; that he heard what he did; that the prisoner did not do the act, and fancy might conjecture a thousand other things equally appropriate and innocent in themselves. Omission of the positive averment that the prisoner did the act is not supplied by the concluding averments in the indictment, and is fatal."

§ 550. HAVING COUNTERFEIT MONEY IN POSSESSION. An indictment charging accused with having in his possession a counterfeit bank-bill or bank-note,<sup>1</sup> must be drawn in conformity with the particular statute; must describe the bill or note, and some authorities are to the effect that this description need not be with the same minuteness required in a charge of passing such a bill or note,<sup>2</sup> while other cases hold that it should be set out in the indictment,<sup>3</sup> the latter doctrine being probably the better one, as it is surely the safer practice. Guilty knowledge, being an ingredient of the offense, must be distinctly averred in the indictment.<sup>4</sup> Intent to defraud must also

§ 552. BARTERING OR SELLING COUNTERFEIT MONEY.<sup>1</sup> Selling counterfeit money is one form of uttering and passing the same, and an indictment charging the offense is substantially the same as the indictment charging uttering and passing, treated in the preceding section. § 554. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> The offense of disorderly conduct, or of persons being disorderly, is a statutory offense in practically all the states in the Union, and an indictment or information charging such offense must set forth all the facts which, by the statute under which the indictment is drawn, are made constituents of the offense,<sup>2</sup> with sufficient particularity to show that the accused has been guilty of an infraction of the statute.<sup>3</sup> Thus, it has been said that a charge of disturbing the peace "by loud and unusual noise" must fully set forth the acts complained of;<sup>4</sup> a charge of disturbing a family "by offensive conduct" must set out the acts constituting the conduct complained of,<sup>5</sup> and the like. Where the alleged disorderly conduct was an offense at common law, and there is no statutory form of indictment prescribed, the offense should be charged as at common law.<sup>6</sup> But whatever the form of the indictment, it must be sufficiently specific to inform the accused with certainty as to the exact charge he is called upon to meet.<sup>7</sup>

Intent to break the public peace need not be alleged, unless the statute requires such an allegation, a wilful or malicious intent being imparted by the character of the act.<sup>8</sup>

Following language of statute setting forth all the essential elements of the offense sought to be charged, has been said to be sufficient;<sup>9</sup> but where the statutory words

§ 556. DISCHARGING FIREARMS NEAR PUBLIC HIGHWAY.<sup>1</sup> Many of the states of the Union have statutes prohibiting and punishing the discharge of firearms in or near a public highway. Where these statutes contain any exceptions, an indictment or information charging the offense must negative and the proof must show that the shooting charged did not fall within the exception in the statute. Thus, the Georgia statute<sup>2</sup> provides that "if any person shall, between dark and daylight, wilfully and wantonly fire off or discharge any loaded gun or pistol on a public highway, and within fifty yards of a public

§ 557. EAVESDROPPING. The offense of eavesdropping is disorderly conduct indictable both at common law<sup>1</sup> and under statute;<sup>2</sup> but to be indictable at common law it must be an habitual course of conduct, and combine the lurking about a dwelling-house and other places where persons meet for private discourse,<sup>3</sup> secretly listening to

"Incumbent on the state to negative each of these things in order to make out the offense. All are negatived in the accusation, and the fact that the shooting was not done on the premises of the accused was proved, but the state wholly failed to exclude the other two. The line is sometimes very closely marked between what exceptions need be proved and what need not. It is safe to say, however, that whenever the exception constitutes a part of the offense itself, and not merely an exception to a general offense previously defined, it is necessary to allege and prove that the case is not within the exception. Or, to state it differently, whenever a statute makes penal an act when committed by a particular class of persons, or when committed under particular circumstances, it must appear that the person accused was within the particular class, or committed the act under the particular circumstances."—Id. See Herring v. State, 114 Ga. 96, 39 S. E. 866.

"When the statute provides that the commission of an act by any person, or under any circumstances, shall constitute an offense, and then declares that the provisions of the act shall not apply to a particular class of persons, or to a specified set of circumstances, the burden is on the accused to show that he comes within some of those exceptions."

An indictment which fails to describe the conduct as habitual, allege facts from which such habit may be inferred, fails to allege that anything heard while thus listening was repeated in the hearing of divers other persons, is insufficient.<sup>5</sup>

§ 558. NIGHT-WALKING.<sup>1</sup> Night-walking or walking is an indictable offense at common law,<sup>2</sup> and consists in being abroad at night for the purpose of committing some crime,<sup>3</sup> or for the purpose of disturbing the peace,<sup>4</sup> or of doing some wrongful or wicked act, but the term is usually applied to women who stroll on streets at night for the unlawful purpose of picking up men for the purpose of lewd intercourse, whether with or without the expectation of gain therefrom.<sup>6</sup> An indictment or information charging the offense should describe the acts complained of, but need not allege that the offense was done for the purpose of gain.<sup>7</sup>

§ 560. PUBLIC NUISANCE. Disorderly conduct or language of accused charged as a public nuisance, the indictment or information must show that the whole community was affected; it will not be sufficient to allege designated persons were disturbed thereby.<sup>1</sup> Disorderly conduct in uttering loud cries and exclamations in a public street charged as a common nuisance, it is necessary to allege that it was such to all the citizens of the commonwealth there inhabiting, being and residing,<sup>2</sup> an allegation that it disturbed “divers citizens” being insufficient.<sup>3</sup>

Profane swearing is indictable as disorderly conduct<sup>4</sup> and also as a public nuisance,<sup>5</sup> but is not per se a public nuisance,<sup>6</sup> and an indictment charging profanity as a public nuisance must properly allege facts showing it to be such, such as continued public use in a loud and boisterous manner<sup>7</sup> and in the hearing of divers persons.<sup>8</sup>

tuting the "other misbehavior."<sup>5</sup> The general rule is that in a charge of keeping a disorderly house it is not necessary to specify the particular acts of disorderly conduct complained of, it being sufficient to follow the language of the statute,<sup>6</sup> when sufficient to set out so much of the facts as to show the criminal character of the offense charged against the accused;<sup>7</sup> but there are cases which hold that such acts are a necessary part of the indictment,<sup>8</sup> and that a general charge of keeping a disorderly house is insufficient.<sup>9</sup>

A common nuisance by statute to keep a disorderly house, the indictment must allege that the house was a public place, or that the public were affected thereby,<sup>10</sup> and the omission is not supplied by the concluding allegation that it was "to the great damage and common nuisance of all the citizens of the state."<sup>11</sup> Yet it has § 565. PLACE. In a charge of keeping a disorderly house the location of the house is sufficiently laid as being within the county;<sup>1</sup> the name of the street on which the

Where it is alleged that on Feb. 2, 1907, and on each and every day from then to March 1, 1907, the accused unlawfully kept a disorderly house for public prostitution and as a common resort for prostitutes and vagabonds, it is sufficient.—Wimberly v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. Rep. 11, 108 S. W. 384.

<sup>8</sup> Com. v. Clark, 145 Mass. 251, 13 N. E. 888; People v. Russell, 110 Mich. 46, 67 N. W. 1099.

An indictment charging the keeping of a disorderly house "on the ..... days of ..... 1894, and before the finding of this indictment," without charging a repetition or frequency of the acts of disorder, etc., is insufficient.—

Com. v. Bessler, 97 Ky. 498, 30 S. W. 1012.

Thus it has been said that time is sufficiently charged where it is averred "that on, to wit, the twentieth day of April" in a named year the accused did keep a house for the purpose of public prostitution, etc.—Lane v. State, 4 Tex. App. 34.

<sup>11</sup> Com. v. Bessler, 97 Ky. 498, 30 S. W. 1012; Com. v. Myers, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1770, 56 S. W. 412; Com. v. Wood, 70 Mass. (4 Gray) 11; People v. Russell, 110 Mich. 46, 67 N. W. 1099.

Where the indictment alleges a nuisance by openly permitting persons to congregate at her an indictment charging arson or burglary;<sup>2</sup> and it has been said that a failure to allege the location of the house is not fatal to the indictment.<sup>3</sup> The indictment or information must aver that the accused was the owner or in control of the property at the time of the letting,<sup>4</sup> must set out the name of the lessee or properly excuse the failure to do so, and must also aver that the lessee accepted the lease,<sup>5</sup> but need not state the time of the commencement or termination of the lease,<sup>6</sup> or specifically aver that the premises were in fact used for purposes of prostitution.<sup>7</sup> Although some day is required to be alleged as the time of making the lease,<sup>8</sup> where such time is not given as a part of the description of the offense it need not be proved as laid.<sup>9</sup>

Repugnancy is not created by an indictment charging the leasing of a house knowing that the lessee intended to use it for purposes of prostitution, or knowingly permitting the lessee to use the house for purposes of pros-

Allegation that defendant did "suffer and permit an indecent and disorderly house to be kept on his plantation or premises" is insufficient in not charging with sufficient certainty that he kept the house, or had leased it to another knowing its intended use, or that the house was within his occupancy and control. — Taylor v. Com., 62 Ky. (1 Duv.) 160.

No conviction at common law can be had on an indictment charging letting a house for bawdy, etc., purposes unless it is charged that the accused was the keeper of the house. — State v. Lewis, 5 Mo. App. 465; State v. Vette, (Mo. App.) 78 S. W. 1133.

Where the indictment described the offense substantially as in the statute, with the further averment that the accused unlawfully and knowingly permitted the lessee to keep certain females in said house for purposes of prostitution, with intent that such females should therein have illicit intercourse with men, it is sufficient. — Crofton v. State, 25 Ohio St. 249, 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 378.

Duplicity can not be successfully charged against an indictment or information alleging a continuing offense, as that accused kept a disorderly house from July 1 to November 1, of a named year; the objection that such an indictment charged one hundred and twenty distinct and separate offenses—there being that number of days intervening between the two dates set out—was held to be untenable, the court saying that but one offense was charged and but one conviction could be had thereon.<sup>11</sup> Likewise it has been held that an indictment charging, in one count, that accused “kept and maintained a disorderly house,” and “a house where lewd, dissolute and drunken persons assembled,” alleges but one offense and was not demurrable on the ground of duplicity;<sup>12</sup> specifying the kind of disorder in keeping the house does not constitute duplicity.<sup>13</sup>

Where offense continuous one, a conviction bars all further or other prosecutions up to the time of conviction, unless the indictment sets out the time of the commission of the offense and the evidence, as well as the pleading, is confined to the time so set out.—Hoffman v. State, 23 Tex. Cr. Rep. 491; Fleming v. State, 28 Tex. App. 234, 12 S. W. 605; Novy v. State, 62 Tex. Cr. Rep. 492, 138 S. W. 139.

Continuance in same house essential. True, the gist of the offense is the keeping of the house; and, although the crime may have continuance by repetition of the conduct that gives character to the house, yet that continuity may be broken, so that separate and distinct offenses will be committed; and it is thus broken when the business is given up at one place and resumed at another and a different place, for then the keeping of the former house is completed and ended, and, as the keeping is the gist of the crime, the crime itself is equally completed and ended, and the resumption of the business at the other place is a separate and distinct keeping, and so a separate and distinct crime, and there are as many crimes as there are separate and distinct keepings of separate and distinct houses.—State v. Plant, 67 Vt. 454, 48 Am. St. Rep. 821, 10 Am. Cr. Rep. 272, 32 Atl. 237.

§ 569. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS. An indictment or information alleging that accused was guilty of keeping a disorderly house charges a misdemeanor and, under the general rule of law that all are principals in misdemeanors, all persons aiding directly or indirectly in the commission of the offense may be joined in the indictment.<sup>1</sup> This doctrine is thought to include husband and wife in a charge of keeping a bawdy-house, where the wife owns the property and runs the business, the husband living in the house and exercising acts of control over it;<sup>2</sup> but it does not include official action or sanction, such as the passage of an ordinance sanctioning the license of a bawdy-house, because by such official action the councilman does not become a participant or aider or abettor in the conduct of the business.<sup>3</sup>

§ 570. IN GENERAL. That it is an indictable offense at common law to disturb a public meeting, has been discussed elsewhere,<sup>1</sup> and the same is true under statute.<sup>2</sup> Where the statute defines and punishes the offense, even though it be by a different punishment, that does not take away the common-law remedy by indictment.<sup>3</sup> This applies to any lawful assembly,<sup>4</sup> as a business meeting<sup>5</sup> of school directors,<sup>6</sup> and the like; religious meetings,<sup>7</sup> sing-

§ 571. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT or information at common law, by formal parts, must charge that accused, in a place, by means or in a manner fully set forth, disturb a public meeting, describing it, and sufficient on its face to show (1) that the accused was indictable, and (2) that the meeting was a disturbance of which is punishable at common law.

Statutory offense charged, it must be sufficient in its tenor to establish the identity of the offense. It is usually sufficient for the indictment or information to follow the language,<sup>2</sup> or substantially the language of the statute, in all cases in which the language of the statute so particularly individuates the offense as to call upon the accused what particular and precise offense he is called upon to defend against,<sup>4</sup> otherwise it is insufficient.<sup>5</sup>

A disturbance of members of a congregation is disturbance of religious worship.—State v. Wright, 41 Ark. 410, 48 Am. Rep. 43.

Actually engaged in religious worship not necessary.—Lancaster v. State, 53 Ala. 398, 25 Am. Rep. 625; State v. Ramsay, 78 N. C. 448, 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 133.

— Form prescribed in statute not followed, the indictment or information must set out every material constituent of the offense charged, whether contained in the statute or not.<sup>6</sup>

Time when offense charged was committed should be specifically set out,<sup>7</sup> and in some jurisdictions the further averment must be made that the meeting alleged to have been disturbed was in session,<sup>8</sup> but it is not necessary that meeting be actually engaged in divine worship.<sup>9</sup>

Conclusion against the form of the statute, the indictment may still be good where the facts charged amount to an offense at common law, although not within the purview of the statute.<sup>10</sup>

§ 572. EXISTENCE AND NATURE AND KIND OF MEETING. The indictment or information must allege the existence of the meeting asserted to have been disturbed,<sup>1</sup> set forth facts sufficient to show that it was a meeting against which the offense charged could be committed, either at common law or under the statute,<sup>2</sup> must allege that it was held for a lawful purpose,<sup>3</sup> but need not be for a specific purpose,<sup>4</sup> and, in some jurisdictions it is held that the meeting was conducted in a lawful manner when disturbed,<sup>5</sup> while in other jurisdictions it is held that it must be alleged that the disturbed congregation consisted of individuals in the state;<sup>6</sup> but these latter requirements are subject to the peculiarities of local statutes. It must be alleged that the persons disturbed were met "in public" as an official body—as school directors called meeting,<sup>8</sup> or that the school was in session at the time the meeting was divine or religious worship,<sup>7</sup> but need not set out the name of the religion disturbed,<sup>10</sup> but it is the better practice to

§ 573. THE DISTURBANCE—IN GENERAL. Disturbance being the gist of the offense, the indictment or information must allege that a designated meeting, protected by the common law or by statute, was in fact disturbed by the accused,<sup>1</sup> and set out the manner in which the disturbance was created.<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary to allege that certain persons named in the meeting or congregation were disturbed,<sup>3</sup> but if any members of the meeting or congregation are disturbed, the meeting or congregation is disturbed.<sup>4</sup>

Charging in language of statute designating the various ways in which designated public meetings may be disturbed, without further specifying the means of disturbance, has been held to be sufficient;<sup>16</sup> but where an indictment or information thus charging fails to state how the disturbance was effected, it is thought that it will be insufficient,<sup>17</sup> although there are cases to the contrary.<sup>18</sup> turbance depends upon the wording of the statute under which drawn. Where the statute mentions the places wherein the act must have been committed to make it offend against the statute, it must be alleged that the act was committed in one of the places specified;<sup>1</sup> but where the wording is simply "at or near," it need not be alleged that the act of disturbance was at or near the meeting disturbed or place of worship.<sup>2</sup>

§ 576. — OF MEETING. It being an indictable offense to disturb a religious congregation engaged in public worship, although it be not assembled in a chapel, church or meeting-house especially set apart for that purpose,<sup>1</sup> an indictment or information charging the disturbance of a religious meeting need not allege that the congregation were assembled in, and the services were being held in, a place set apart for religious worship,<sup>2</sup> or name the church, particular parish, and the like,<sup>3</sup> in the absence of statutory provisions so requiring. Where the statute prohibits a congregation from being disturbed at designated places, indictment must allege meeting was at one of those places.<sup>4</sup>

§ 577. INTENT, WILFULNESS AND MALICE. The intent to disturb a public meeting is usually a constituent part of the offense, and must be alleged; thus, loud singing by one who is honestly participating in the service of divine worship, intending no disrespect, while it may annoy other worshipers, is not an indictable offense.<sup>1</sup> Where the statute does not make the offense of disturbing a public meeting or religious worship depend upon intent, and does not use the word "malicious" or "wilful," there need not be an allegation of malice or wilfulness;<sup>2</sup> the rule is otherwise where the statute makes intent an element, or uses the word "malicious" or "wilful."<sup>3</sup>

In Kentucky it must be charged to have been wilfully or maliciously done.—Com. v. Phillips, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 370.

In Missouri it must be alleged to have been "wilfully, maliciously, or contemptuously" done.—State v. Bankhead, 25 Mo. 558; State v. Hopper, 27 Mo. 599.

But it is sufficient to allege that it was "unlawfully and wilfully done."—State v. Karnes, 51 Mo. App. 293.

Other words of the same import may be used.—State v. Stuth, 11 Wash. 423, 39 Pac. 665.

"Wilfully" and "unlawfully" are not synonymous, and it must be alleged to have been wilfully done.—State v. Tounsell, 50 Tenn. (3 Helsk.) 6.

Language of statute making it unlawful to give or accept a challenge to fight a duel with swords, pistols, or other deadly weapons, may be followed in an indictment or information charging that offense,<sup>7</sup> but it is not necessary that the language of the statute shall be followed,<sup>8</sup> where the offense is otherwise sufficiently charged.

sender of the challenge was a citizen or resident of the state at the time of the carrying of the said challenge.<sup>17</sup>

Sending a challenge to fight a duel being charged, the indictment or information need not set out a copy of the challenge,<sup>18</sup> whether written<sup>19</sup> or verbal,<sup>20</sup> but it may do so;<sup>21</sup> and it is thought to be the better practice, at least in cases of doubt, the challenge not explicitly setting forth a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, especially where the instrument contains a provision as to seconds.<sup>22</sup>

§ 582. THE VENUE. An indictment or information charging a challenge to fight a duel may be returned into court or filed in the jurisdiction where the challenge was given,<sup>1</sup> although the place of encounter was to be in another state or country.<sup>2</sup> The venue must be properly laid<sup>3</sup> by averring the state and county where the challenge was given,<sup>4</sup> whether the encounter is to take place in that state or another.<sup>5</sup>

FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT—IN GENERAL.<sup>1</sup> The offense of embezzlement, having been unknown to the common law,<sup>2</sup> being purely a creation of the statute, there is no common law form.<sup>3</sup> The indictment or information charging embezzlement must properly set out the special conditions of the statute under which drawn; that is, must embody the statutory characteristics of the offense sought to be charged.<sup>4</sup> Thus, the stat-may be understood by the jury, and with that degree of certainty that the court may know how to render judgment thereon and pronounce sentence according to the right in the case;<sup>3</sup> and must be such that a conviction or acquittal may be pleaded as a bar to another prosecution for the same offense.<sup>4</sup> The distinguishing feature between larceny and embezzlement, that is, the fiduciary capacity, must be clearly alleged.<sup>5</sup>

Statute relating to embezzlement consisting of several sections, each describing a separate and different phase of the crime, the indictment must be framed under the appropriate section to fit the facts in the case; or at least the separate counts in the indictment charging the various phases to meet the facts as developed by the evidence, must be drawn under appropriate sections of the statute or statutes.<sup>6</sup> But it is not necessary to designate under which statute, or which section of a statute, the indictment or information is drawn;<sup>7</sup> and when there are two or more statutes, or two or more sections of a statute, under which the indictment might be drawn, the trial court will not require the prosecutor to elect under which as that upon which the indictment is founded;<sup>4</sup> and so that the accused may be enabled to plead an acquittal or a conviction in bar of a subsequent indictment for the embezzlement of the same property.<sup>5</sup> The standard of certainty in the description required of the property is the accuracy required in an indictment charging larceny,<sup>6</sup> no greater particularity than that being required.<sup>7</sup> Where it is impossible or impracticable to give a definite description of the property embezzled, the best description possible should be set out, and the reason why a better description is not given should be stated.<sup>8</sup> Thus, an allegation that the property is in possession of the accused will excuse the lack of a minute description;<sup>9</sup> and it has been said that where, necessarily, the "knowledge of the character, kind, amount and value . . . rests solely in the accused, there is no reason, beyond that furnished by authority, for applying the rule."<sup>10</sup>

Officer embezzling public property or money, it seems that the rule requiring the indictment to set out a description of the property does not apply, for manifest reasons. No one but the person in possession knows, or can know, the details regarding such property or money.<sup>11</sup>

as collected or received by him;<sup>7</sup> but it must be alleged that the money charged to have been embezzled came into the possession of, or under the control of, the accused by virtue of his position and in his official capacity.<sup>8</sup>

Reason for the rule has been well stated to be because no one but the person in possession and control of such moneys knows, or can know, the details regarding the same;<sup>9</sup> and also the further fact that it would be wholly impracticable to trace or identify the particular pieces of money, currency or bank-bills, or to determine whether the sum or sums of money embezzled was or were coin or paper, or both; and because it would be equally impracticable to show that any particular sum embezzled was the same money or funds received from any specified source or person, because, even though the amounts corresponded, this would by no means establish their identity. And even if the kind of funds or money received in a particular transaction, or from a specified person, whether credited upon the books or not, could be identified as having been received by the accused from that particular source, the fact that it was not found in the public treasury at a subsequent time would not prove that the particular money had been embezzled, because it might have been honestly paid out by the accused to public creditors, and an equal amount embezzled from moneys coming from another source or sources, person or persons.<sup>10</sup> ulently appropriated it to another purpose;<sup>10</sup> the particular use or purpose need not be alleged.<sup>11</sup>

Ownership must be laid in the real owner or one having a special property or interest therein, and as the particular statute under which the prosecution is had requires and as the facts in the case warrant. association, where the indorsee redelivers to him possession and control of the note for purposes of collecting interest upon it for the indorsee's benefit, or to otherwise control the note, this will constitute such "ownership" of the note in the indorser as to sustain an indictment for embezzlement against one deputed by such indorser to collect such note laying ownership in such indorser. — *People v. This is the old rule of criminal pleading in charging embezzlement; but this old rule requiring great particularity in the description of persons, under which it is or was necessary to allege the incorporation of the company in order to show right to own property, has been relaxed in many jurisdictions, in which latter jurisdictions it is held that where the name of the company itself imports an association or a corporation, there need be no specific allegation that it is such.<sup>25</sup> This is a modern principle in criminal pleading which is thought to be abundantly supported by the decided cases laying down the rule as to the sufficiency of the pleading of ownership of property in other branches of criminal law.<sup>26</sup> Thus, it has

§ 597. DUPPLICITY AND MISJOINDER. We have already seen<sup>1</sup> that two distinct offenses can not be charged in the same indictment, but that the same offense, that is to say the same species or family of the offense, may be charged in different ways in several counts, to meet the evidence.<sup>2</sup> Thus it has been said that an indictment or information charging the secreting of money with the fraudulent intent to appropriate it to the use of the accused and the fraudulent appropriation is not duplicitous;<sup>3</sup> and an in-the use of the company's houses, and remit the collections monthly, collected $8.75 monthly, as rent of a certain house, for eighteen months, and each month reported it to be vacant, and did not remit the money thus collected. The court held that the offense of embezzlement was complete each month, and defendant being charged with the embezzlement of the gross sum for the eighteen months in one count, could not be convicted of eighteen distinct embezzlements, treated as one offense.—*Edelhoff v. ment, according to one line of cases,<sup>9</sup> or, according to another line of cases, the accused may be separately indicted and convicted of the embezzlement of each.<sup>10</sup> Where an agent or servant, authorized to collect money, receives from various persons different sums of money, all of which he retains and converts to his own use at one and the same time, he commits but one embezzlement, and must be so charged;<sup>11</sup> but where such servant or agent converts and embezzles the various sums as they are received, each conversion is a separate embezzlement, and must be charged in a separate count.<sup>12</sup>

§ 598. — CONTINUING EMBEZZLEMENTS. In those cases where the circumstances are such that, unless the prosecution is allowed to aggregate a continued systematic peculation on the part of an agent or employee, it might be impossible to secure a conviction, because the separate and distinct acts of conversion may not be susceptible of direct proof, the conversions may be charged in a lump sum without being duplicitous, and proof of such continued taking made.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if one commits an em-

Under the rule permitting the pleader to state the same offense, or offenses of the same species or family of offenses, in several different ways to meet the varying phases of the evidence,<sup>1</sup> it has been held that a count charging embezzlement may be joined with a count charging obtaining money by false pretenses<sup>2</sup> or a count charging larceny or grand larceny,<sup>3</sup> because they are of the same general nature and are triable in the same mode,<sup>4</sup> and the nature of the punishment is also the same, although with different degrees of severity.<sup>5</sup> But there are cases

§ 603. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.—An indictment or information charging escape is defective if it does not set out every essential element of the offense with clear and reasonable certainty.<sup>2</sup> Inasmuch as lawful imprisonment is an essential element in an escape to render the escapee liable criminally,<sup>3</sup> the indictment or information

Departure from an imprisonment or custody without escape within the meaning of the law; mere confinement within the walls of a prison, in violation of the law of the state, is not imprisonment for the purpose of crime to escape.—People v. Ah Teung, 92 Cal. 421, 15 L. R. A. 190, 28 Pac. 570.

Finding of court void where a Chinaman had unlawfully entered the United States from Mexico, is not the same as an order or direction of the commissioner or by a district that the Chin-out such facts as show the imprisonment to have been lawful,<sup>4</sup> but it need not be alleged that the accused had been convicted of or was guilty of any crime;<sup>5</sup> due and regular commitment is all that is required.<sup>6</sup> A general be removed from the district and held in custody elsewhere for the purpose of returning him to the country from whence he came; and in the absence of such an order the marshal has no authority to imprison him.—People v. Ah Teung, 92 Cal. 421, 15 L. R. A. 190, 28 Pac. 577.

<sup>5</sup> See Gunyon v. State, 68 Ind. 79; State v. Lewis, 19 Kan. 260, 27 Am. Rep. 113; Ex parte Ah Bau, 10 Nev. 264; State v. Daly, 41 Ore. 515, 70 Pac. 706; Com. v. Miller, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 61; Com. v. Ramsey, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 422.

Guilt of crime committed, or conviction on accusation, are neither necessary to a lawful imprisonment in the county jail; under many circumstances innocent persons may be lawfully imprisoned by legal process; and one thus imprisoned, though innocent, is criminally liable for an escape, and so are all persons aiding in such escape.—Ex parte Ah Bau, 10 Nev. 264. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 185 et seq.; 1 Hale P. C. 610; 1 Russ. on Cr. 428.

<sup>6</sup> State v. Murray, 15 Me. 100; Com. v. Morihan, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 586; Com. v. Miller, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 61.

Absence of commitment for prisoner convicted and sentenced and in hands of sheriff, does not render the imprisonment unlawful, for the reason that the conviction and sentence are the original authority, for which the certified copy in the commitment is merely the evidence. See Ex parte Gibson, 31 Cal. 619, 91 Am. Dec. 546; Sennott's Case, 146 Mass. 489, 4 Am. St. Rep. 344, 16 N. E. 448; People ex rel. Trainor v. Baker, 89 N. Y. 460; People ex rel. Johnson v. Nevins, 1 Hill (N. Contra: State v. Hollon, 22 Kan. 580.

Absence of evidence or oath to support charge on which accused is committed, where the magistrate has jurisdiction and power to commit without such evidence, will not justify an escape or a prison breach.—R. v. Waters, 12 Cox C. C. 300.

"Difference must necessarily exist between an imprisonment without any process, and wholly without authority of law, and an imprisonment under a process which is simply irregular in form; and this distinction is clearly recognized."—People v. Ah Teung, 92 Cal. 421, 15 L. R. A. 190, 28 Pac. 577. See Dunford v. Weaver, 84 N. Y. 445, affirming 21 Hun

averment, in the language of the statute, that it was in the lawful custody of an officer<sup>7</sup> is sufficient to satisfy all the requirements,<sup>8</sup> and on an allegation that the prisoner was imprisoned under an order of a court, the jurisdiction of which is fixed by process, it is not necessary to further allege that the court had jurisdiction to make the order.<sup>9</sup>

Intent being an element, under the particular statute, in an attempt to escape<sup>10</sup> or in an escape,<sup>11</sup> is an essential ingredient which must be alleged in the indictment and proved at the trial beyond a reasonable doubt;<sup>12</sup> but this intent is sufficiently alleged if the facts are set out showing an attempt to effect an actual escape, because the charge of an attempt Informality or irregularity in the commitment or proceedings does not justify an escape.—State v. Nauwerth, 62 Kan. 869, 64 Pac. 69; State v. Murray, 15 Me. 103; Com. v. Morihan, 86 Mass. (4 Allen) 586.

Lawfulness of commitment does not depend upon the actual guilt or innocence of a prisoner; even though innocent it is his duty to remain until discharged by authority of law.—State v. Lewis, 19 Kan. 260, 27 Am. Rep. 113.

Thus a committing magistrate before whom one accused of crime is taken may remand him for three days or more for his examination, and if he escapes before the date fixed for the hearing he is liable for such escape, even though he duly appears for the hearing on the day fixed.—R. v. Waters, 12 Cox C. C. 390.

the commitment was made, to guard the prisoner during his transfer to jail, the lawfulness of the commitment is sufficient to maintain the writ of habeas corpus.—State v. Houghton, 43 Kan. 125.

actual escape, necessarily includes and is equivalent to a charge of an intent.<sup>13</sup> But where the act is forbidden by statute, which is silent concerning the intent with which the act is done, a person doing the unlawful act forbidden is guilty of the crime charged, even though he had no wrongful intent beyond that which is involved in the doing of the act prohibited,<sup>14</sup> and intent, not being an element in such case, need not be charged in the indictment.

Language of the statute,<sup>15</sup> or the substantial language of the statute,<sup>16</sup> being followed in the indictment or information, it will usually be sufficient, where the statute contains all the essential elements of the offense sought to be charged, without adding the details comprised within the statutory definition,<sup>17</sup> and without setting forth the cause for which the accused was imprisoned or under guard<sup>18</sup> at the time when he made his attempt to escape or did escape;<sup>19</sup> but it is otherwise in those cases in which the statute does not set forth all the essential elements of the offense sought to be charged, in which case the acts of the accused bringing him within the purview of the statute must be set out.<sup>20</sup>

"Feloniously and unlawfully" being a provision in the statute, these words must be used in the indictment or information,<sup>21</sup> otherwise they are not essential to a valid indictment.<sup>22</sup>

§ 604. THE ESCAPE. We have already seen that before there can be a criminal escape there must be a lawful custody,<sup>1</sup> and for this reason the indictment or information should set forth facts from which the court can see that the accused was, at the time of the acts complained of, in lawful custody;<sup>2</sup> because if he be not in lawful custody, as 20 See King v. State, 42 Fla. 260, 28 So. 206; State v. Lawrence, 43 Kan. 125, 23 Pac. 157; Com. v. Filburn, 119 Mass. 297; State v. Hilton, 26 Mo. 199; Vaughan v. State, 9 Tex. App. 563.

21 "Feloniously," in an indictment for an escape, in any of its phases, means that the act complained of was done with the intent to commit the crime and with a design on the part of the perpetrator to commit the offense with which he is charged.—State v. Clark, 32 Nev. 145, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 754, 104 Pac. 503.

Under a statute denouncing and where he is confined in a jail or other prison under a void warrant, he may liberate himself from such prison without being guilty of the crime of escaping from prison.<sup>3</sup> An indictment or information charging that the accused was in lawful custody sufficiently alleges the lawfulness of the arrest from which he escaped.<sup>4</sup> Charging that accused did unlawfully break away and escape from a deputy sheriff, while being committed lawfully to jail, is sufficient;<sup>5</sup> and charging accused with breaking away from the custody of a constable, the latter having, upon a warrant issued by a justice of the peace, arrested accused for a

King*, 114 Iowa 413, 89 Am. St. Rep. 371, 87 N. attempt to escape necessarily includes and is equivalent to a charge of an intent to accomplish what was intended'' and need not specifically allege the intent.<sup>10</sup>

§ 606. AIDING AND ABETTING ESCAPE OR ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE. We have already seen that criminal liability for escape depends upon the legality of the imprisonment,<sup>1</sup> and this rule of law applies also in the case where one is charged with aiding and assisting a prisoner to escape, or in his attempt to escape.<sup>2</sup> We have already seen that where a person is unlawfully imprisoned or restrained of his liberty under a void warrant, he may liberate or attempt to liberate himself therefrom, using such force as may be necessary to accomplish that purpose, without rendering himself criminally liable;<sup>3</sup> and another may lawfully assist therein; but the fact that the prisoner is innocent of any crime<sup>4</sup> will not justify him in escaping or any one in aiding and assisting him in an attempt to escape,<sup>5</sup> except in those cases where the officer making the arrest, and from whom the escape is aided, was not acting in the line of his duty at the time of making the arrest.<sup>6</sup> A mere irreg-

Charging in the language of the statute aiding and assisting a prisoner in escaping, or in an attempt to escape, or charging in the substance of the language of the statute, within the rule above set out,<sup>16</sup> has been held to be sufficient,<sup>17</sup> although there is authority to the contrary,<sup>18</sup> where accompanied by a statement of the facts out of which the offense arose;<sup>19</sup> and some of the cases hold there need be no allegation that the accused knew of the arrest and that the prisoner was in custody, or that accused intended to aid in his escape<sup>20</sup>—but this is not the general rule, as we show in the next paragraph.

Reason for the ruling is that a person may do many things which would aid a prisoner in an escape without any criminal intent or liability. Thus if he should receive and entertain one for a night, in ignorance that his hospitality was extended to a fugitive criminal, or if he should overtake him on a highway and innocently give him a ride, he might thus materially aid the prisoner to escape, but certainly he would not be guilty of wrong, nor punishable under the statute. A well-meant hospitality, or an innocent charity, should not subject a person to criminal prosecution and punishment; and for that reason, before the act can be held to be criminal, it must be done with a criminal intent. — State v. § 607. NEGLIGENT ESCAPE. The statutes in some of the states, as in North Carolina,<sup>1</sup> and Texas,<sup>2</sup> and perhaps elsewhere, draw a distinction in the action of an officer in negligently permitting a prisoner to escape and voluntarily allowing him to go at large, making them separate and distinct offenses. In all the states negligent and voluntary escapes are recognized, but the general rule is that a voluntary escape always embraces an element of negligence and therefore includes a negligent escape, on the ground that the greater crime includes the lesser, so that under an indictment for a voluntary escape, an officer may be convicted of a negligent escape.<sup>3</sup> Under the statutes making the two classes of escapes separate and distinct offenses, the procedure is not uniform, some of the cases holding that an indictment charging that the Intent is a quality of the mind, which implies a purpose only, while an attempt implies an effort to carry that purpose into execution; but there can be no attempt until there has been an intent."—*State v. accused "unlawfully and negligently" permitted a prisoner to escape is good,<sup>4</sup> while other cases hold that such an allegation charges two distinct offenses, and is for that reason bad for duplicity.<sup>5</sup> A de facto officer, equally with a legally qualified officer, is liable criminally for suffering a negligent escape.<sup>6</sup> The form and the sufficiency of a criminal pleading charging suffering either a negligent or a voluntary escape are substantially the same, and are treated in the following section.

<sup>2</sup> Doctrine of voluntary escape, which prohibits the party being retaken and continued in imprisonment, applicable in civil cases, as in imprisonment for debt, in which the creditor, and not the people, is interested in the prisoner's detention, does not apply in criminal cases, in which the people of the whole state have an interest in the due and proper detention and punishment of the violators of the criminal law; the public interest can not be made subservient to the illegal acts of those officers having charge of persons convicted of crime, and whose duty it is to execute the sentence of the court in accordance with its final process.—People v. otherwise in those states in which a voluntary escape and a negligent escape are made separate and distinct offenses.<sup>6</sup>

Facts showing that accused had the legal custody of the prisoner named should be set forth in an indictment charging either a negligent or a voluntary escape,<sup>7</sup> but it is not necessary to allege the particulars regarding the prisoner's crime, arrest, trial, or sentence;<sup>8</sup> that accused received the prisoner as such, the commitment, his office and the custody, necessarily including the reception;<sup>9</sup> or to allege or prove that the accused, as the keeper of a common jail, had knowledge of the guilt of the prisoner committed to his charge.<sup>10</sup> Thus, an indictment or information charging that the accused, as sheriff and common jailer, permitted the escape of one in his lawful custody under a warrant issued by a coroner charging the crime of murder, sufficiently charges that the escaped prisoner was in the lawful custody of the accused.<sup>11</sup> It must be distinctly averred that the designated prisoner went at large.<sup>12</sup>

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Extortion.

- § 608. Form and sufficiency of indictment.
- § 609. Description of the offense.
- § 610. Allegation as to the service.
- § 611. Allegation as to the office.
- § 612. Allegation as to person and ownership of the money.
- § 613. Allegation as to fees.
- § 614. Allegation as to knowledge.
- § 615. Allegation as to intent.
- § 616. Attempt to commit extortion.
- § 617. Joinder of causes.
- § 618. Joinder of defendants.

<sup>2</sup> Position and public service, equally with public office, seems to have been included at common law, for we have a case in which a ferryman was indicted on the charge of extorting divers sums, exceeding the ancient rate, for ferrying men and cattle over a river—which indictment was held bad on the ground that it was taken;<sup>5</sup> and an allegation that the accused "unlawfully, corruptly, deceitfully, extorsively, and by color of his office" took money as fees he was not entitled to by law, was held to be sufficient without the word "wilfully," after verdict.<sup>6</sup> The indictment or information must be certain in every material allegation.<sup>7</sup> While it is necessary to allege that a sum of money or thing of value was received by the accused, it is not necessary to prove the exact sum of money or the exact value of the thing received as laid in the indictment. Thus, if a person be indicted for taking extorsively twenty dollars, and the proof shows such taking was of one dollar only, it will be sufficient.<sup>8</sup> An indictment for conspiracy to extort need not state that the payment was made voluntarily.<sup>9</sup>

Charging in the language of the statute, or substantially in the language of the statute, the crime of extortion, is sufficient where the statute defining the offense contains all the essential elements of the crime sought to be charged,<sup>10</sup> subject to the qualification that the crime sought to be charged must be set forth with such certainty as will apprise the accused of the offense imputed to him.<sup>11</sup> This is the general rule in all the states; but in the Schmitz case,<sup>12</sup> the supreme court of California held that the offense of extortion can not be charged in the language of the statute, notwithstanding the fact that the California statute sets forth all the essential elements of the crime, stating that an indictment under a statute making it extortion to do an unlawful injury to the person or property of the individual threatened, must allege how it was proposed to accomplish the injury, and that where the accused were public officers [although the statute does not distinguish between a private individual and a public officer], there must be an allegation as to what was the official capacity of the accused, and also that he had the power to execute the threat.<sup>13</sup>

§ 609. DESCRIPTION OF THE OFFENSE. An indictment or information charging extortion must conform to the general rules governing indictments and informations requiring that the charge of the commission of the crime alleged shall be of such a character and in such language that the defendant will be fully informed of the exact accusation against which he must defend; and will be sufficient where the offense is clearly and distinctly set forth in ordinary and concise language so as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended, and to enable the court to pronounce judgment upon conviction.<sup>1</sup> That is to say, the indictment or information must be certain in every material allegation or charge; must contain a definite description of the offense and the facts constituting it;<sup>2</sup> must state the office held by

Under a statute making it a criminal offense "wilfully and knowingly to charge, take, or receive any fee or compensation, other than that authorized or permitted by law, for any official service or duty performed" by an officer, an indictment or information charging the offense should show for what service or duty the charge was made or the money taken,<sup>1</sup> and failing so to show will be insufficient, because under such a statute a simple allegation that

§ 614. ALLEGATION AS TO KNOWLEDGE. At common law it was unnecessary to aver that the offense was committed knowingly by the accused, and this is the general rule in this country, in the absence of special statutory provisions.<sup>1</sup> Where knowledge is made a statutory ingredient of the offense, the indictment or information must allege that the crime charged was committed knowingly by the accused.<sup>2</sup> Thus, under the federal statute<sup>3</sup> making it an offense for an officer to knowingly<sup>4</sup> demand other or greater sums than are authorized by law, or to receive any fee, compensation, or reward, except as by law prescribed, for the performance of any duty, the indictment must charge that the accused knowingly did the act; to charge that he "wilfully and corruptly," under color of his office, did demand, take and receive, is insufficient.<sup>5</sup>

§ 615. ALLEGATION AS TO INTENT. At common law an evil or corrupt intent on the part of the official, charged with taking illegal fees, was necessary to constitute the act of extortion,<sup>1</sup> and the general rule is that it is also an essential element under statute,<sup>2</sup> for which reason an

§ 616. ATTEMPT TO COMMIT EXTORTION. In those cases in which the charge is an attempt to commit the crime of extortion, the indictment or information should set out all the allegations requisite to charge the offense as required for the completed crime;<sup>1</sup> and in charging the attempt, the essentials are (1) an accusation in plain language alleging the crime charged, and (2) a plain and concise statement setting forth how, or in what manner, the accused is charged to have committed such offense.<sup>2</sup> Under the rule heretofore given<sup>3</sup> the crime of an attempt to commit extortion may be charged in the language of the statute.<sup>4</sup>

§ 617. JOINDER OF CAUSES. In an indictment or information charging extortion, a count ought to charge a single offense only, because every act of extortion from any particular person, or from different persons, whether at the same time or at a different time, is a separate and distinct offense, and each of such offenses requires a separate and distinct punishment; consequently, charging the accused, in one count, with extorting divers sums from divers persons in excess of the legal rate, is bad.<sup>1</sup> Where there are several offenses against the same person they should each be particularly and separate counts;<sup>2</sup> and where a series of limitations is charged, and these are persons, it seems that the various extortions joined in the same indictment, being separate counts.<sup>3</sup>

An indictment is not duplicitous, it has but one offense, although there are several counts, each of which counts is drawn under the provision of a single section of the statute.<sup>4</sup>

§ 618. JOINDER OF DEFENDANTS. Two persons may be jointly indicted on a charge of extortion. It has been said that two persons may be indicted for extortion where no fee was due, if they are principals, there being no accessories. The fact that one is assisting being as guilty as the other, and an indictment against three persons, each of whom, colore officiorum suorum, took a share of the money, is good, for they might take so much that afterward divide it amongst them, of which the injured party would have no notice.<sup>5</sup>

§ 619. Form and sufficiency of indictment.

§ 619. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> At common law<sup>2</sup> and under the statute,<sup>3</sup> alike, an indictment or information charging false imprisonment must allege that the act was without legality or authority of law, and the failure to so allege is not cured by the conclusion stating it to be "contrary to the form of the statute in such cases made and provided."<sup>4</sup> The statute under which the indictment or information is drawn should be followed in every essential detail.<sup>5</sup> An information

An information charging that the defendants "with force and arms did make an assault in and upon one A, then and there unlawfully and injuriously and against the will of her, the said A, and without any legal warrant, authority, or reasonable or justifiable cause whatever, did imprison, and detain so imprisoned, her, the said A, there for the space of one hour next following," etc., sufficiently charges the offense of false imprisonment at common law. — Davis v. State, 72 Wis. 54, 38 N. W. 722.

<sup>5</sup> Ross v. State, 15 Fla. 55, in which it was said that a charge that one was forcibly imprisoned without lawful authority and against his will, does not state an offense under a statute (Fla. Act, Aug. 6, 1868, ch. 2, § 43) requiring the acts charged to have been committed "with intent to cause him to be secretly confined or imprisoned," etc.

An indictment or information charging falsely representing himself to A to be through such false representation as to obtaining money or property from A, without relationship existing between A and B upon what ground B had a right to demand money or property from A, and unless such relationship is made to appear as will confer an indictment or information will be insufficient if it seems that a consummation of the fraudulent injury to the party defrauded, is complete the offense.<sup>2</sup>

C. providing for the punishment of any one who, with intent to defraud, falsely assumes to be an officer and acting under the authority of the United States department or office in connection with the same.

§ 622. ALLEGATIONS AS TO PROPERTY. In those cases in which the statute makes it larceny for one person to obtain property from another by falsely personating a third person, the indictment or information charging the crime must describe the property obtained by means of such false personation with the same certainty and particularity required in an indictment charging larceny,<sup>1</sup> and must allege that the property thus fraudulently obtained to be delivered to the accused was intended by the party defrauded to be delivered to the party falsely personated;<sup>2</sup> and should further allege that the property was received by the accused with intent to convert it to his own use.<sup>3</sup>

Ownership of the property obtained by means of false personation should be laid in the indictment or information as in the person who is entitled to maintain a civil action of trespass therefor;<sup>4</sup> but in some states it is held that an erroneous allegation as to the ownership of the property is immaterial.<sup>5</sup>

Value of property obtained by false personation need not be alleged, in the absence of statutory provisions requiring the value to be given.<sup>6</sup>

ment should be negatived<sup>1</sup> in such an indictment. It is not necessary to allege the residence or whereabouts of the person falsely impersonated.<sup>2</sup>

Where the statute provides that any person who shall personate another in any legal proceeding, and shall in his assumed character do any act whereby the interest of the party personated is affected, shall be guilty of a criminal offense, an indictment or information charging the offense of falsely personating another in a legal proceeding whereby the latter's rights or interests are affected, is sufficient when it alleges the fact of the false personation in a pending suit in a court of competent jurisdiction, and the facts connected therewith, without stating how the rights and interests of the person falsely personated might be thereby affected.<sup>3</sup>

§ 624. IMPERSONATING AN OFFICER. Under a statute making it an offense to falsely assume to be and to act as an officer, an indictment or information charging accused with the commission of that offense must state that accused took it upon himself to act as such officer, it not being sufficient to simply allege that he assumed to be such an officer;<sup>1</sup> but the indictment or information must clearly aver that the accused was not the officer he represented himself to be, and that he did not possess the authority of that office.<sup>2</sup> The name of the officer impersonated need not be stated;<sup>3</sup> and the fact that an indictment or information alleges a false personation of an officer or employee, which officer and employee has no

Reason for the rule: Mr. Justice Pitney, in delivering the opinion in the above case, said: "One who falsely assumes or pretends to hold an office that has a de jure existence is admittedly within the meaning of the section (Federal Criminal Code, § 32, 3 Kerr's Whart. Crim. Law, p. 2437); that is, where the assumption or pretense is false in part but contains a modicum of truth, the statute is violated. Why should it be deemed less an offense where the assumption or pretense is entirely false, as where the very office or employment to which the accused pretends title has no legal or actual existence? . . . Therefore, it seems to us the statute is to be interpreted according to its plain language as prohibiting any false assumption or pretense of office or employment under the authority of the United States, or any department or office of the government, if done with an intent to defraud, and accompanied with any of the specified acts done in the pretended character."

An information charging the accused with drawing a check, when he had no funds, with intent to defraud "Lesser Bros. Co., a corporation," the check being payable to Lesser Bros. Consent to entry of judgment by city in favor of accused and against it in an action then pending charged to have been procured by false and fraudulent representations, and alleging the payment thereafter of a sum of money by the city in satisfaction of said judgment, there being no allegation that, after the judgment was rendered, any false pretenses were used to obtain the money due upon it, does not state an indictable offense under the statute, because no indictment will lie against one

§ 628. — SURPLUSAGE. Where in an indictment or information, in addition to the essential facts required to be stated, other and unessential facts are alleged which are wholly redundant and useless, the latter may be disregarded as surplusage, under the general rule of pleading as to surplusage.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the accused, being a merchandise broker, is charged with falsely representing himself to be the agent and broker of certain undisclosed persons residing in another city, e. g., New York, and with thereby obtaining certain goods, the indictment nowhere charging that he was a broker or agent, or authorized to act for the undisclosed persons, it is surplusage to allege that the offense was committed by him "in his capacity as a merchandise broker"; as would also be the further averment of an actual sale to the parties in such foreign city, effected by the accused as their broker, and a de-

An averment that the one whose name is signed to the letter "never tiving must be by distinct and special averment,<sup>3</sup> it not did write or send, or cause to be written or sent, any such letter," is a sufficient averment of falsity. — Tyler v. State, 21 Tenn. (2 Humph.) 37, 36 Am. Dec. 298.

Alleging want of authority on the part of accused to collect money for injury sustained by a named person in an accident, and that no such accident as described by accused occurred, held not to be a sufficient denial of accused's representations.—People v. Behee, 90 Mich. 353, 51 N. W. 515.

"Did falsely and designedly pretend," etc., by means of which money or credit was obtained, held to be a sufficient negating of the truth of the representations in Com. v. Rosenberg, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 273, 3 Lanc. Law Rev. 75.

Falsity of the representations is sufficiently laid where the indictment alleged that liens to the amount of $6000 existed against the property at the date of the representations that the property was free from liens, whereas in fact the notices of the liens were not filed until after the representations were made and the money procured.—People v. Moxley, 17 Cal. App. 466, 120 Pac. 43.

Full truth of false representations must be negated; thus, where accused is charged with having falsely represented that he was the owner of several parcels of land, an indictment alleging that accused "was not then and there the owner of all of said real estate" is an insufficient negating of the truth of the representations.—State v. Trisler, 49 Ohio St. 583, 31 N. E. 881.

Horse represented as "sound and all right," indictment or information specifically denying that representation need not set out in what particular the horse was diseased.—Waterman v. State, 114 Ga. 262, 40 S. E. 262.

Obtaining money for charity under false pretenses being charged, the words "whereas, in truth and in fact . . . was not at any time, nor at any other time, authorized by . . . to collect any money, . . ." avers the falsity in fact of accused's pretenses sufficiently.—People v. Fitzgerald, 92 Mich. 328, 52 N. W. 726.

Representations or false pretenses must be relative to matter inducing to reliance upon same and parting with money or property; consequently, an indictment charging obtaining money under false pretenses, showing the pretenses to be a false representation that a building and loan association with which accused did not appear to be connected had a genuine existence, was held insufficient, in Roper v. State, 58 N. J. L. 420, 33 Atl. 969.

Substantial truth and not merely the literal truth of representations by means of which accused obtained money, property or credit, must be negated.—Redmond v. State, 35 Ohio St. 81.

Truth of the pretense not negated, the indictment does not charge an offense.—Pattee v. State, 109 Ind. 545, 10 N. E. 421.

"Common sense indictment" of Texas, dispensing with an averment of guilty knowledge of accused, is said not to require an allegation of knowledge on the part of the accused in an indictment or information charging false pretenses (Arnold v. State, 11 Tex. App. 472), but this doctrine seems to have been denied in Mathena v. State, 15 Tex. App. 473, in which it was held that an allegation of knowledge was necessary.

"Did designedly, falsely represent and pretend" that he had received a designated subscription from a named person with payment in full thereof, held to sufficiently negative accused's ignorance of falsity of the pretense.—People v. Lennox, 106 Mich. 625, 64 N. W. 488.

"The defendant designedly and unlawfully did falsely pretend," omitting the word "knowingly," was held to sufficiently charge knowledge on the part of the accused of the falsity of the pretenses.—Com. v. Hulbert, 53 Mass. (12 Metc.) 446.

Indorsement on note procured by falsely representing to the indorser that accused had specified property, and on trial accused stating he never had said property, an indictment need not allege the falsity of the representation, because the accused, from his own statement, must have known the falsity.—Com. v. Shedd, 61 Mass. (7 Cush.) 514.

Procuring goods from store by falsely pretending accused had been sent by A to procure the goods and representing that A would pay for them, indictment alleging said statements to be false, held to be sufficiently definite to enable accused to know the nature of the charge against him.—*Com. v. it not being sufficient to allege that the pretenses were made for the purpose of obtaining the money or property, and that by means of them accused did obtain the money or property with intent to cheat and defraud.<sup>2</sup> The general rule is that the averment must be affirmatively made and not merely by way of inference or argument,<sup>3</sup> although there are cases which hold that there need be no express averment of intent.<sup>4</sup> Where the statute allows Compare: Stringer v. State, 13 Tex. App. 520.

—In Vermont, under the statute, intent need not be alleged.—State v. Bacon, 7 Vt. 222; State v. Switzer, 63 Vt. 604, 25 Am. St. Rep. 789, 22 Atl. 724.

Signature to written instrument charged to have been obtained by false pretenses, the indictment or information must state that the signature was obtained with intent to defraud, otherwise it will be fatally defective.—State v. Daniels, 90 Iowa 491, 58 N. W. 891; State v. Switzer, 63 Vt. 604, 25 Am. St. Rep. 789, 22 Atl. 724.

"Then and there asked and requested" the person defrauded to whom certain false pretenses had been made, "in consideration thereof, to pay and deliver" to the accused the money alleged to have been secured, sufficiently sets forth an intent to defraud.—Com. v. Howe, 132 Mass. 250.

"With intent to cheat and defraud, to the great damage" of a person named, sufficiently charged the intent in false pretenses.—State v. Burke, 108 N. C. 750, 12 S. E. 1000.

"With intent to defraud" need not be used in an indictment or information for statutory larceny under the statute where it is alleged that accused unlawfully, knowingly, etc., with an intent to deprive the true owner of his property, by means, color and aid of certain false writings and representations, then and there known to the accused to be false, because the allegation amounts to an averment of an intent to defraud.—State v. Southall, 77 Minn. 296, 79 N. W. 1077.

An allegation that the defen-

the intent to be alleged in the alternative, "to injure or defraud," an indictment charging "an intent to defraud," is sufficient.<sup>5</sup>

Particular person intended to be defrauded by the accused need not be alleged, under some statutes.<sup>6</sup>

Design to defraud being an essential element of the statute under which prosecution is had, an indictment or information which fails to allege that the act was "designedly" done, will be insufficient.<sup>7</sup>

§ 631. — "FELONIOUSLY." An indictment or information charging false pretense in the words of the statute, setting forth the pretenses and alleging their falsity, is sufficient, without an allegation that the pretenses were "feloniously" made,<sup>1</sup> in the absence of statutory requirement to that effect; and where the absence of any intent to defraud would not avail as a defense, it is unnecessary to allege a fraudulent or a felonious intent.<sup>2</sup> But where by statute the crime of obtaining money or property by false pretenses, or by means of false tokens, dant unlawfully, knowingly, etc., with intent to deprive the owner of his property by means of certain false writings and representations known by him to be false, is equivalent to an allegation of an intent to defraud.—State v. Southall, 77 Minn. 296, 79 N. W. 1007.

An averment that the representations were fraudulently made is sufficient.—Isaacs v. State, 7 Ga. App. 799, 68 S. E. 338.

It is enough to allege that the pretenses were made for the purpose of obtaining the property; and that by means thereof he did obtain the property with intent to cheat and defraud.—State v. Smallwood, 68 Mo. 192, 3 Am. Cr. Rep. 98.

is made a felony, or where the statute defining the crime uses the word "feloniously," an indictment or information charging the crime must allege a "felonious" intent;<sup>3</sup> and it has been said that it is not sufficient to allege that the accused, with intent to defraud, did "feloniously" make the false pretenses complained of,<sup>4</sup> although there are authorities to the contrary, holding that an allegation that the accused "did feloniously make certain false pretenses" does not make the instrument vulnerable to the objection that it is insufficient by reason of its failure to specifically allege that the accused "feloniously" intended.<sup>5</sup>

§ 632. — PARTIES—BY WHOM MADE. An indictment or information charging obtaining money or other property by false pretenses, we have already seen,<sup>1</sup> must specifically allege that the false pretenses or statements were made or authorized by the accused.<sup>2</sup> Where two or more persons are acting in concert in obtaining money or other property by false pretenses, and the false pretenses are made by one of them only, the indictment or information must allege by which one of the accused such false pretenses were made;<sup>3</sup> but it seems that an allegation that the defendants made the false pretenses,

Capacity in which accused acted in making such false pretenses or representations, e. g., in his capacity as a merchandise broker, is immaterial, and the maxim, "utile per inutile non vitiatur," is applicable to it, because the offense which the statute aims to prevent is the obtaining of property by false pretenses with an intent to defraud the owner thereof, and a possession so obtained is criminal by whomsoever it is accomplished, and in whatever capacity he acts.<sup>5</sup>

Bunko steering game being charged, an indictment or information alleging the offense in the language of the statute providing for the punishment of bunko steering, averring that a person named was enticed to a certain place, and then and there "by duress or fraud" was compelled to part with money upon a foot race, or upon any other occasion, is insufficient, the facts constituting the nature of the fraud and duress not being set out,<sup>3</sup> because the nature of the offense designated simply as "bunko steering" defines and describes the crime in generic terms, and when the crime is thus generically described and defined, the pleader must descend to the particulars.<sup>4</sup>

Bank-check charged as the means used in an attempt to defraud, accused representing he then and there had in his possession, for the payment of money drawn by him in favor of the party attempted to be defrauded, by means of which he intended to pay certain bills due from the said party to other persons, without further allegations, is insufficient, as it fails to allege that accused

If the counterfeit coin charged as the means of the fraud is false, the indictment or information is sufficient, although it does not aver that the spurious coin was made to represent the coin it represented, the word "counterfeit" being a sufficient allegation of that fact;<sup>9</sup> and it is held that the fraud was accomplished by passing a false certificate of stock charged as the means of the fraud, alleged to be false and forged, but which was accused to be good, valid and a genuine certificate of stock, an indictment or information set out the certificate in hæc verba is good, notwithstanding

An indictment or information charging obtaining money, goods, or other property by means of false representations as to present financial condition and ability to pay, must show that the false representations were made for the purpose, and with the intention, to induce the party defrauded to part with his money, goods, or other property,<sup>1</sup> or to induce him to indorse or sign commercial paper for the benefit of accused, that the representations were relied upon;<sup>2</sup> that the accused thereby, and by reason of such false representations obtained the money, goods, or other property, or secured the desired signature to commercial or other paper.<sup>3</sup> It must also appear that the person defrauded was not in fault in relying upon such false representations, and that he exercised due business care and acted prudently.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where the

"It may be difficult to draw a line which would exclude cases where common prudence would be a sufficient protection, still I do not think the statute should be so interpreted as to include cases where the representation was absurd or irrational, or where the party alleged to be defrauded had the means of detection at hand. The object of the statute, it is true, was to protect the weak and credulous against the wiles and accused obtained credit on a note he owed upon the false and fraudulent pretense and representation that a large quantity of tobacco, which the party defrauded had then purchased from the accused, would average in quality with a sample which accused then and there exhibited, the indictment was dismissed, the court saying that a common caution on the part of the person defrauded would have protected him from the injury;<sup>5</sup> and where accused fraudulently represented that he was the owner of certain realty, and that it was free from encumbrance, when as a matter of fact there was on record a mortgage executed by the accused, the court held that the indictment showed on its face that the party defrauded had the means of detection of fraud in his hands which he failed, as an ordinarily prudent man, to exercise.<sup>6</sup>

§ 639. — RELATION TO PAST EVENTS OR EXISTING STATE OF FACTS. False representations, to be indictable, must relate to past events,<sup>1</sup> or be as to an existing and not as to a stratagems of the artful and cunning. But this may be accomplished under an interpretation which should require the representation to be an artfully-contrived story which would naturally have an effect upon the mind of the person addressed—one which would be equal to a false token or a false writing—an ingenious contrivance of unusual artifice, against which common sagacity and the exercise of ordinary caution, would not be sufficient to guard" (obiter).—*People v. § 640. — RELIANCE ON PRETENSES. An indictment or information charging obtaining money or other property by means of false pretenses, if otherwise adequate, has been said to be sufficient if it alleges that the money or other property was obtained by the accused by means of the false pretenses, and with the fraudulent intent particularly stated, without other averment that the owner relied upon and was induced thereby to part with his property,<sup>1</sup> for the reason that it must necessarily be im-

<sup>2</sup> Thus where accused was charged with falsely representing that A was to give to him a stated amount, and that B was going to allow a third person a stated amount of money weekly, for the benefit of his health, the indictment was held to be insufficient because it failed to state a case as to an existing state of facts.—*R. v. An averment charging that the firm "relied on such false representations" is a sufficient allega-plied from such allegations that he was induced to part with his money or other property by such false representations.<sup>2</sup> However, there is a line of cases which seem to hold—and it would probably be the better practice to so plead—that there must be some sort of an allegation that the person defrauded relied on the false pretenses as true;<sup>3</sup> that he was deceived thereby;<sup>4</sup> that by means of such false pretenses he was induced to part with the pos-tion that they believed them to be true.—State v. Williams, 103 Ind. 235, 6 Am. Cr. Rep. 256.

Rep. 85, Gilmore, J., in discussing the objection that the indictment was insufficient because it did not allege that the party defrauded relied upon the false pretenses and representations, and was induced by means thereof to part with his property, said: "We have been referred to quite a number of authorities supposed to support this objection, which, on examination, are found not to do so. Two questions are discussed in them. First, as to whether the offenses charged are within the statute, of which no notice need be taken; and second, whether the indictment in the case then under consideration was good. And in not a single case examined is it found that an indictment, otherwise good, was held bad for a want of the averments in question,"—citing and analyzing, and showing to be in harmony with his decision, the cases of *State v. § 641. — REPRESENTATIONS AS INDUCING CAUSE. An indictment or information charging obtaining money or other property by false pretenses must show,<sup>1</sup> and should directly aver,<sup>2</sup> that the injured party was induced to part with his money or property because of the false pretenses on the part of the accused.<sup>3</sup> It seems that where the facts recited in the indictment or information show upon their face that they are capable of defrauding, and it is charged that the accused did in fact, intentionally and wickedly defraud, then it is unnecessary to aver that the pretenses were capable of defrauding,<sup>4</sup> and that the indictment or information need not show that the person defrauded acted as a prudent man,<sup>5</sup> although there are authorities to the contrary.<sup>6</sup>

Inducement and reliance required to attach criminal liability to the accused making the false representations

1 Not necessary to allege in express terms, according to some authorities, that the party defrauded relied upon the false representations made, but there must be an allegation that he was induced by such representations to part with his property.—People v. Jacobs, 35 Mich. 36, 2 Am. Cr. Rep. 102.

2 "Relied on such false representations," is a sufficient showing that the party defrauded believed such representations, and that they were the inducing cause. See State v. Williams, 103 Ind. 235, 6 Am. Cr. Rep. 256, 2 N. E. 585.

complained of, is not a constant quantity; some of the decisions, under the peculiarities of local statutes, hold that the false pretenses set out in the indictment or information must be such as "had a tendency" to induce the party defrauded to part with his money or property;<sup>7</sup> others hold that the false pretenses must be the sole inducing cause.<sup>8</sup> The better doctrine is thought to be the middle course of decision, which holds that the indictment or information will be sufficient when it appears therefrom that the false pretenses or representations made by the accused were the decisive cause, either in and of themselves, or in co-operation with other matters, in influencing the party defrauded to part with his money or other property,<sup>9</sup> and that this fact may be inferred from False representation or false token not within the statute unless calculated to deceive is true in a limited sense, only, "for the statute was not designed to protect only the ordinarily wary and prudent, who, in spite of their vigilance, might be overreached by the clever rogue, but must have been aimed at all scoundrelism who, by false statements or false tokens, succeeded in hoodwinking the unwary, or even the foolish, into parting with their property."—*Com. v. There must be alleged some natural connection between the false pretenses and the delivery of the money or property, and a failure to so allege is a defect that is not cured by verdict.—People v. White, 7 Cal. App. 99, 93 Pac. 683.

It may, however, be sufficient to aver such facts from which the connection between the pretense part with his money or property,<sup>12</sup> it being insufficient merely to allege that the representations induced the defrauded party to part with his money or property,<sup>13</sup> although there are well-reasoned cases holding it to be sufficient simply to aver the obtaining of the property by means of the false pretenses.<sup>14</sup>

§ 642. — DAMAGE TO OR LOSS BY PROSECUTOR. to part with and did part with his ownership.<sup>2</sup> It is held in some jurisdictions that the indictment or information need not charge an actual pecuniary loss or damage to the person to whom the false pretenses were presented,<sup>3</sup> for the reason that one may be actually defrauded without having suffered a pecuniary loss when he received something substantially different from that which he would have received had the representations in relation thereto been true.<sup>4</sup> However, there are other cases which hold that the indictment or information must show that the deceitful means caused pecuniary loss to the prosecutor.<sup>5</sup> The better doctrine is thought to be that the indictment or information will be insufficient which fails to show that the prosecutor suffered some legal injury, as that term is understood in the law of false pretense.<sup>6</sup> However, it is not essential that legal injury be alleged in specific terms; if the allegations are such as to warrant the inference of injury, it will be sufficient.<sup>7</sup> Thus, an averment that by means of false pretenses charged, accused secured the signature of the prosecutor to a deed of grant the accused to make his defense, and the court and jury to determine whether the property disclosed in the evidence is the property set out in the indictment.<sup>2</sup> Some of the cases hold that the description must be made with the same particularity that would be required in an indictment for a larceny of such property;<sup>3</sup> other cases are to the effect that the indictment or information may describe the property in the language used by the accused in making the false pretenses.<sup>4</sup> However, the description of the property should be reasonably certain,<sup>5</sup> and as particular as the case will admit of.<sup>6</sup> This de-

§ 644. — MONEY, BANK-BILLS, ETC. Where the property charged in an indictment or information to have been obtained by false pretenses, consists of money, either coin or bank-bills, there is a line of cases holding that the money must be described with the certainty and particularity required in an indictment or information charging the larceny of such money;<sup>1</sup> but the weight of decision, and the better doctrine, is to the effect that it is sufficient to describe the money as a certain amount of lawful money,<sup>2</sup> without setting out the character, denomi-

"A package of money containing the sum of sixty dollars in bank-bills," held to be a sufficient description, bank-bills which are current as a medium of exchange being money.—State v. Kube, 20 Wis. 217, 91 Am. Dec. 390.

It is sufficient to describe the money as of a certain sum, alleging it to be of a kind and description unknown to the grand jury.—People v. Dimick, 107 N. Y. 13, 14 N. E. 178.

By statute in Virginia it is sufficient to describe the money as "United States currency," or its equivalent, "national currency of the United States." This statute was passed in order to get around the decision of the supreme court in the case of Leftwich v. Com., 61 Va. (20 Gratt.) 716; Dull v. Com., 66 Va. (25 Gratt.) 965.

"Divers United States treasury notes and national bank-notes, and fractional currency notes, amounting in the whole to one hundred fifty-eight dollars," etc., held to be good.—State v. Hurst, 11 W. Va. 54, 3 Am. Cr. Rep. 100.

See Com. v. Swinney, 3 Va. (1 Va. Cas.) 146, 5 Am. Dec. 512, in which it was held that a descripnation, or kind of money obtained,<sup>3</sup> but it must be described as money and not as "goods."<sup>4</sup> There are also cases holding that the indictment or information must state whether the money was delivered to the accused as a loan, a gift, or otherwise,<sup>5</sup> but it is thought that the better doctrine is that the nature of the possession need not be stated.<sup>6</sup>

§ 645. — WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS. We have already discussed the methods of describing in an indictment or information, charging the procuring of money or property by false pretenses, a written instrument which is the basis of the false pretenses and of the fraud complained of.<sup>1</sup> Where the obtaining of a signature to a written instrument is the injury complained of, the same as in those cases in which the thing obtained is a written instrument, the instrument need not be set out in hæc verba,<sup>2</sup> it being sufficient to indicate the nature, chartion of "one hundred dollars in a note of the Bank of Virginia," was not good on the ground, it would seem, that the bank-note was not money in the sense in which that word is used in statutes relating to false pretenses.

A statement in the indictment that the number of coins or bank-notes stolen were to the grand jurors unknown would dispense with the statement of their number and render the indictment good.—State v. Hurst, 11 W. Va. 54, 3 Am. Cr. Rep. 100.

Thus in Haskins v. People, 16 N. Y. 344, the description of the property stolen in the indictment was, "bank-bills of banks, to the jurors unknown, and of a number and denomination to the jurors unknown, of the value of six hundred dollars; silver coin, current money of the state of New York, of a denomination to the jurors unknown, of the value of fifty dollars; gold coin, current money of the state of New York, of a denomination to the jurors unknown, of the value of fifty dollars,"—and this was held by the court to be sufficient description.

acter and contents thereof;<sup>3</sup> and when the substance of the instrument can not be set out, an excuse or reason therefor must be alleged.<sup>4</sup> That the indictment may be good, however, there must be a description of sufficient definiteness and certainty to identify the instrument when it is introduced in evidence.<sup>5</sup> Where the indictment charges the obtaining of a "bill of sale or mortgage of personal property," it must give the purport thereof, or set it out, in order that there can be no mistake as to the identification of the instrument with that produced in evidence;<sup>6</sup> but where a check given was only a step in the transaction, or an incident of the offense, a particular description of the check is not indispensable.<sup>7</sup>

§ 646. — OWNERSHIP OF MONEY OR PROPERTY. An indictment or information charging obtaining money or other property by means of false pretenses, must correctly state the ownership, in some person, of such money

The instrument ought not to be described by name alone. Its substance or tenor should be shown.—Langford v. State, 45 Ala. 26.

Where the offense was committed by means of fraudulent bills of costs the indictment is not defective for failing to set out such bills of cost.—State v. Morgan, 109 Tenn. 157, 69 S. W. 970.

A description of the check as that of a named person "upon the Commercial Bank of Cincinnati for the sum of thirty-four dollars and fifty-one cents, which check was then and there of the value of thirty-four dollars and fifty-one cents," does not sufficiently describe the check.—Bonnell v. State, 64 Ind. 498.

Thus, an indictment or information charging that accused, with intent to defraud another, and, to induce him to purchase specified property, made certain false pretenses as to the ownership of such property, and did thereby obtain from him ten dollars, the ownership of the money not being averred, and it not being averred that the sale was consummated, will be insufficient.—State v. Miller, 153 Ind. 229, 15 Am. Cr. Rep. 231, 54 N. E. 808. See State v. Williams, 103 Ind. 235, 6 Am. Cr. Rep. 256, 2 N. E. 585; Com. v. Strain, 51 Mass. (10 Metc.) 521.

An allegation that defendant "did unlawfully, fraudulently, falsely, and feloniously obtain from Ed Haglin fifty-three dollars and fifty-four cents gold, silver and paper money of the value of fifty-three dollars and fifty-four cents," etc., sufficiently alleges ownership and description of the money.—Silvie v. State, 177 Ark. 108, 173 S. W. 857.

An erroneous allegation as to ownership is immaterial.—Hennesy v. Com., 88 Ky. 301, 11 S. W. 13.

Where the ownership is not alleged there must be an allegation of a legal excuse for the omission.—Terr. v. Hubbell, 13 N. M. 579, 13 Ann. Cas. 848, 86 Pac. 747.

Where the ownership is not alpresent a sufficient excuse for not so doing;<sup>2</sup> and a failure to so allege will be fatal.<sup>3</sup> There is authority to the effect that the indictment or information will be sufficient in those cases where a statement of ownership can be gathered from the whole instrument, without a specific allegation as to such ownership;<sup>4</sup> but other cases hold that this will not be sufficient, because the ownership is a material fact and should be directly averred.<sup>5</sup> The ownership should be laid in some person who could maintain a civil action for the possession of the property.<sup>6</sup> It has been said that the ownership may be laid in a person having authority to sell the property;<sup>7</sup> or in a person who was in possession of the property at the time;<sup>8</sup> or in a mortgagee of the property;<sup>9</sup> or in any one of the partners of a copartnership;<sup>10</sup> or in a named company, and when the ownership is laid in a company, it is not necessary to allege whether that company is a corporation leged there must be averred an excuse for not alleging it.—State v. Lathrop, 15 Vt. 279.

The offense of falsely personating an officer has already been discussed under the specific crime of "False Personation,"<sup>1</sup> and it remains but to add in this place that an indictment or information charging the receiving of money or property by accused through falsely pretending and representing himself to be an officer, must describe the money or other property with the same particularity as is required in an indictment or information charging the larceny of such money or property;<sup>2</sup> must allege that the accused falsely assumed and pretended to be, and represented himself to be, an officer;<sup>3</sup> that the party defrauded relied upon such false pretenses and representations, and believed accused to be an officer;<sup>4</sup> that the party defrauded intended that the money or property be delivered to the accused for the party or person whom the accused falsely pretended to represent;<sup>5</sup> and that the accused intended<sup>6</sup> to convert the money or property to his own use.<sup>7</sup> money or other property from another person, the false pretenses or representations made by one are chargeable against all, and they may all be jointly indicted.<sup>2</sup>

§ 651. JOINDER OF OFFENSES. We have already seen that offenses of the same character and having the same mode of trial and punishment may be joined in the same indictment,<sup>1</sup> even where the punishment, though of the same class, is of different degrees of severity;<sup>2</sup> hence, an indictment or information charging obtaining money or property by false pretenses may be joined with counts for conspiracy so to obtain money or property, and especially so in those jurisdictions in which the two offenses are of the same grade;<sup>3</sup> so also may obtaining money by false pretenses and larceny from the person be joined in different counts in the same indictment;<sup>4</sup> and a count for obtaining money by false pretenses and another for embezzlement, they both belonging to the same family of crimes.<sup>5</sup> The same is true of a charge of forgery and a charge of attempt to obtain money by false pretenses, both being based on the same transaction.<sup>6</sup>

§ 652. JOINDER OF COUNTS. We have already seen that the cautious pleader will insert as many counts as will be necessary to provide for every possible contingency in the evidence, and that this the law permits.<sup>1</sup> An indictment or information charging the crime of securing money or other property, or attempting to secure money or other property, by false pretenses, should have as many counts as the facts and circumstances seem to require. Thus, where the accused obtained money by means of false pretenses on two different days, the false pretense of each day should be set forth in a separate count, and the two counts will cover but one transaction;<sup>2</sup> where the charge is of procuring money from a building and loan association, one count may charge the obtaining of the money from the association, and a second count may charge the accused with having obtained the money from the treasurer of such association by making the same fraudulent representations to him;<sup>3</sup> and an indictment charging accused with obtaining property under false pretenses in one count, and in another count charging him with obtaining the signature to a note by false pretenses, both acts having reference to the same transaction, charges but one offense.<sup>4</sup>

Duplicity can not be charged against an indictment setting forth conjunctively the acts necessary to constitute the offense, stated disjunctively in the statute.<sup>5</sup> An information charging in one count that accused conspired together to defraud a corporation, and by fraudulent representations, which are fully set forth, obtained from it a bank-check, by means whereof they obtained a certain sum of money and thereby defrauded the corporation, charges but one offense.<sup>6</sup> Where the offenses of larceny, false pretense, or embezzlement all relate to the same transaction, they may be charged together, in different counts; in fact, should be so charged where there is any doubt which offense the evidence will disclose.<sup>7</sup>

Where an indictment charges the offense of swindling in due form, it will not be rendered duplicitous, because the facts may also have constituted the crime of theft,<sup>8</sup> and by the same act the accused may have committed both offenses, and the state could have prosecuted him for either, at its election.<sup>9</sup>

INDICTMENT—SPECIFIC CRIMES.

Fellatio and Cunnilingus.

§ 653. Form and sufficiency of indictment.

§ 653. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT. The California legislature of 1915<sup>1</sup> sought to provide new punishment and to give new names to old offenses by calling them "fellatio" and "cunnilingus," which are not terms of art or "technical terms" known either to the law, or in medical or chirurgical science. Inasmuch as these terms are not defined by the act,<sup>2</sup> and as they constitute the principal part of the section, the legislation has been attacked as plainly unconstitutional, because it is in violation of the fundamental provision of the state constitution<sup>3</sup> requiring all laws to be printed in the English language.<sup>4</sup> Whether the legislation is constitutional or unconstitutional, is for the courts, and until this matter is passed upon, an indictment or information drawn under that section must contain a full statement of the acts constituting the offense charged in ordinary and concise language,<sup>5</sup> and in a manner to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended,<sup>6</sup> otherwise, the indictment or information will not state a public offense, in the absence of any definition in the statute of the terms "fellatio" and "cunnilingus," or of any statement of the particular acts constituting the alleged offense.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Mr. Justice Chipman, of the Third District Courts of Appeal, has well said of this section that it is "to a man of common understanding (indeed, we think, also, to one of uncommon understanding), as cabalistic as if written in Egyptian or Mexican hieroglyphics, or in Japanese or Chinese characters."—People v. Carrell, 31 Cal. App. 793, 795, 161 Pac. 995.

§ 654. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT<sup>1</sup>—IN GENERAL. An indictment at common law charging forgery in any of its phases was an extremely technical instrument, verbose and filled with essential "terms of art," or specific technical words, the omission of which was fatal, and contained minute descriptions of matters of fact.<sup>2</sup> The common law technicality and formality have been entirely done away with by statutes in most, if not all, the states in the Union, under which statutes an indictment or information in plain and concise language, setting out all the elements of the offense sought to be charged as the same are laid down in the particular statute, will be sufficient,<sup>3</sup> however unartfully drawn,<sup>4</sup> and the omission of such special words as "falsely,"<sup>5</sup> "feloniously,"<sup>6</sup> "knowingly,"<sup>7</sup> and the like, will not vitiate the indictment.

Certainty in the indictment or information is necessary in charging the offense in ordinary language in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended to be charged,<sup>8</sup> and be informed of the particular acts relied upon as constituting his guilt;<sup>9</sup> to enable the jury to readily understand the nature of the offense;<sup>10</sup> to enable the court to pronounce

The indictment must show whose name was forged.—State v. Chinn, 142 Mo. 507, 44 S. W. 245.

Where the information after setting forth a copy of the instrument alleged to have been forged and stating that the instrument was false and fictitious, then states that "whereas in truth and in fact there was no such individual as H. C. W. then or there in existence," these latter words are not indefinite, and the information is sufficient to enable the defendant to know what was intended, and the court is enabled to pronounce judgment on conviction.—*People v. the proper judgment in case of conviction,<sup>11</sup> and to enable the accused to plead such judgment in bar of another indictment and prosecution for the same offense.<sup>12</sup> Failure in these respects is good ground for quashing an indictment or information;<sup>13</sup> but a mere clerical error will not vitiate the instrument.<sup>14</sup> Where the charging part of an indictment or information is defective and insufficient when taken separately, it gains no additional strength when joined with the other parts and considered as a whole.<sup>15</sup>

Conclusion should be "contrary to the form of the statute" where the statute expressly creates or prohibits the crime charged, but it is otherwise where the statute merely inflicts a punishment on what was before an offense;<sup>16</sup> and where there is nothing on the face of the indictment or information to show that it was drawn under any statute, the conclusion "against the form of the statute," or other similar conclusion, may be disregarded as surplusage.<sup>17</sup>

the time;<sup>2</sup> the reason for this rule being to show that the offense charged was committed within the period of limitation of statute. It is to be observed that while the offenses of forgery and of uttering forged instruments are separate and distinct offenses,<sup>3</sup> and should be so pleaded,<sup>4</sup> yet as regards the running of the statute of limitations they are considered as one offense.<sup>5</sup>

§ 660. ——— NAME OF DEFENDANT. An indictment or information charging forgery of an instrument prohibited by statute should be certain as to the name of the accused,<sup>1</sup> the general rule being that the given or Christian name should be set out in full,<sup>2</sup> although the surname may be laid as an alias;<sup>3</sup> but it has been held that an indictment charging the forgery of an instrument purporting to be the act of Lorenz Brown, the name being set out in the indictment as L. Brown, will not be void or objectionable for uncertainty.<sup>4</sup>

§ 661. ——— NAME OF PERSON TO BE DEFRAUDED.<sup>1</sup> An indictment or information charging forgery should set out the name of the person intended to be defrauded; and in a case in which the name of a deceased person is forged to a promissory note, or other instrument for the payment of money, the indictment or information may

§ 664. ——— MANNER AND MEANS OF FORGERY. It is not necessary to set out the particular acts in which the forgery consisted,<sup>1</sup> the reason being that such facts are not essential ingredients of the offense.<sup>2</sup> That is to say, how and in what manner the party was to be defrauded being no ingredient of the crime, but a mere matter of evidence, need not be set out in the indictment.<sup>3</sup> But an indictment or information can not charge a specific offense by the use of general terms, without setting out all the facts and circumstances;<sup>4</sup> hence, it is insufficient to charge that the defendant committed the crime of altering a genuine instrument,<sup>5</sup> or of uttering a false and altered instrument without alleging how he had committed it.<sup>6</sup>

alleged that the instrument was made or altered without the knowledge of the person sought to be made liable.<sup>2</sup> However, it has been said that an indictment or information charging that accused "did unlawfully, etc., forge a certain deed" necessarily imports that the act was done without authority;<sup>3</sup> and it has also been said that where the indictment is not predicated upon a statute, or that portion of the statute, defining forgery not qualified by the phrase "knowing that he had no authority so to do," need not allege that the accused had no authority to execute or utter the instrument.<sup>4</sup>

§ 666. ——— GUILTY KNOWLEDGE OF ACCUSED. Whether an indictment or information charging forgery should also charge guilty knowledge on the part of the accused, we have already seen,<sup>1</sup> depends upon the particular wording of the statute under which the prosecution is had. Where the guilty knowledge is a part of the definition of forgery, guilty knowledge must, of course, be averred in the indictment or information;<sup>2</sup> in all other cases, it seems that the allegation of guilty knowledge is confined to the charge of uttering or passing forged instruments,<sup>3</sup> in which latter case it is insufficient to tain note, without alleging that it was done "without authority," is insufficient.—Com. v. Bowman, 96 Ky. 40, 27 S. W. 816.

allege merely that the passing or uttering was done "feloniously and falsely."<sup>4</sup> It has been said that where, under the statute, an averment of guilty knowledge is required to the validity of the indictment or information, an allegation that the act was "knowingly" done, or done "well knowing," and the like, will be sufficient to take the place of, and dispense with a positive averment of guilty knowledge.<sup>5</sup> It has been said that an indictment or information charging the uttering and publishing a forged promissory note which alleges that accused knew the note "to be false and forged," need not specifically allege that accused knew at the time he uttered and passed the instrument that it was forged;<sup>6</sup> that charging the forging of a false order for the payment of money, with intent to defraud, and passing it as true, after judgment, sufficiently charges knowledge on the part of the accused;<sup>7</sup> and that an unlawful, false and fraudulent uttering and passing a written instrument, with intent to defraud, being charged, the want of a specific allegation of knowledge does not deprive the accused of any substantial legal right.<sup>8</sup>

the false writing with the evil intent that the instrument forged shall be used as good.<sup>7</sup>

Failure to allege intent, on the part of the accused to defraud in the charging part, is fatal even though the indictment subsequently charges that the accused did "unlawfully, feloniously, and fraudulently make and forge," and that he did "falsely, fraudulently, knowingly, feloniously, and with intent to defraud, prejudice and damage" a named person, "utter, publish and pass the same."<sup>8</sup> The criminal intent has been said to be sufficiently charged by the use of the words "wilfully and feloniously";<sup>9</sup> charging that accused did feloniously utter and publish as true a named forged instrument, with intent to defraud, knowing the same to be forged, has been said to be a sufficient allegation of intent;<sup>10</sup> and charging accused with "unlawfully and feloniously" causing an instrument to be forged, "with intent to defraud," has been said to be sufficient, without expressly averring that it was done "with a felonious intent."<sup>11</sup> Alteration of a public record, with intent to defraud, being charged, an indictment or information setting out the record as it existed before the alleged alteration, without a repetition of the charge of an intent to defraud in that portion of the instrument charging the alteration, has been said to be sufficient.<sup>12</sup>

§ 672. UNNECESSARY AVERMENTS—IN GENERAL. An instrument, to be the subject of forgery, must be one within the statute, and which, if genuine, would have some legal effect,<sup>1</sup> but it is not necessary that it should be shown to

<sup>1</sup> Instrument a nullity on its face set out in the indictment or information, it will be insufficient without an added comment that it can be made to act injuriously or fraudulently by reason of matter aliunde.—People v. Tomlinson, 35 Cal. 503; Com. v. Hinds, 101 Mass. 211.

An indictment charging the forging of a married woman's deed, it being void without acknowledgment under the laws of the state where executed, held not to charge an offense because the instrument was void on its face.—Roode v. State, 5 Neb. 174, 25 Am. Rep. 475.

"The false making of an instrument merely frivolous, or one which upon its face is clearly void, is not forgery, because from its character it could not have operated to defraud, or been intended for that purpose; but if the instrument is one made with intent to defraud, although before it can have that effect other steps must be taken, or other proceedings had upon the basis of it, then the false making is forgery, notwithstanding such steps may be a perfect instrument,<sup>2</sup> and it is unnecessary for the indictment or information to allege how the instrument would create, increase, diminish, or defeat a pecuniary obligation, or how it would transfer or affect the title to property.<sup>3</sup> Thus, a receipted bill for goods charged to have been forged, being set out, and purporting on its face to be an instrument which may be forged under the statute, the indictment or information need not contain further allegations to show that it was such an instrument, or to show how it could be used as an instrument of fraud, or that it was so used, in fact.<sup>4</sup> It is not necessary to allege the existence of the debt, the discharge of which the instrument alleged to be forged was intended to represent, except under unusual circumstances;<sup>5</sup> or that accused was indebted to the person intended to be defrauded by such receipt;<sup>6</sup> or that accused sought to obtain money upon the alleged forged instrument,<sup>7</sup> or that he did obtain anything of value;<sup>8</sup> or that the person or company, whose name was forged to an order for goods,

§ 673. — FACTS ASSUMED IN FORGED INSTRUMENT. The instrument charged to have been forged, being an instrument within the statute and valid upon its face, the indictment or information need not expressly aver the existence of all the facts assumed by the forged instrument.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the forging of an order in the name of the trustees of a school district, upon the county superintendent of schools, for a requisition upon the county auditor for a warrant against the county school-fund, being charged, the indictment or information need not aver the existence of the school district, or the fact that the trustees whose names were alleged to be signed to the order were the trustees of the district.<sup>2</sup> It need not be averred that the alleged false instrument was genuine,<sup>3</sup> or that the person whose name was signed to an order for goods had the disposing power over them.<sup>4</sup> An acquittance alleged to have been forged, it need not be averred to have been delivered to, or presented to, any one as a true and genuine acquittance or discharge.<sup>5</sup> Bank-check charged to have been forged, indictment or information need not aver that the proper revenue stamps had been affixed thereto,<sup>6</sup> or give the name of the ment or information under such a statute, charging the forgery by accused of a bill of exchange, without alleging the amount thereof, is sufficient;<sup>2</sup> or of forging or altering a chattel mortgage without averring the value of the property.<sup>3</sup> But where the statute denounces the making of designated instruments in writing "or writing of value," the indictment or information must aver that the writing in question was a "writing of value." Thus under such a statute, an indictment or information charging the forgery of an application for an insurance policy must allege that the insurance policy was a thing of value;<sup>4</sup> and where the statute prohibits the selling of a forged instrument "for any consideration," an indictment or information which omits to charge that the instrument was sold, passed or uttered "for a consideration," will be insufficient.<sup>5</sup>

There is a conflict of decision as to whether the name of the person, firm, corporation, or company to, or upon whom, an alleged forged instrument was uttered or passed, should be set out in the indictment or information.<sup>1</sup> This conflict of decision is due largely, if not entirely, to the difference in the wording and provisions of the statutes in the various states.<sup>2</sup> The weight of decision seems to be to the effect that the name of the person, firm, corporation, or company to whom the forged instrument was uttered or upon whom passed

Charging forgery by alteration of an order, which is substantially described in the indictment or information, and the names of the parties set out, with an allegation that the order was for the payment of four dollars and twenty cents, one-half payable in money and one-half in trade, and alleging the four dollars and twenty cents written in figures, "to-wit, 4.22," charging the alteration of the figures, and then alleging that the order "is in the following words and figures," setting out a copy of the altered order, sufficiently shows that the order was a written instrument.—*Hawkins v. Instruments incapable of working legal injury.—An instrument alleged to have been forged which directed the drawee to "let the bearer have one of your smallest, with load, to charge to" the drawer, was held by the court not, per se, an order for the delivery of a pistol or other goods of any kind, and consequently that an indictment which charged accused with the forgery of such an instrument, without proper innuendos to give it a character and meaning not apparent on its face, was not sufficient to sustain a conviction.—Carberry v. —An order for the payment of money, of the following tenor: "M. C. & Co., pay Binam $5.75. J. L. C.," an indictment unaided by innuendo or the statements of extrinsic facts, was held to be insufficient, because the writing, unaided, did not import an order for the payment of money (Bynam v. State, 17 Ohio St. 142), the court saying: "No definite meaning can be ascribed to the letters 'M. C. & Co.' and 'J. L. C.' They are of themselves arbitrary. The writing of itself does not purport to be by any person, natural or artificial," the actual point in the case decided being that the indictment was bad because it con-

ment alleged to have been forged is one having some legal effect,<sup>11</sup> although it is not necessary that it should be shown to be a perfect instrument;<sup>12</sup> but an instrument which bears resemblance to a genuine document which it is intended to represent, and such as is calculated to deceive, may form the basis for a charge of forgery.<sup>13</sup> Where the instrument is set out in the indictment or information, and purports on its face to be one of the things prohibited to be forged, there need be no further allegation to show that it was that thing, or how it could be used to defraud, or that it was so used.<sup>14</sup> tained no averment to show what the letters "M. C. & Co." and "J. L. C." meant.

—Bank-check charged to have been forged, the indictment or information alleging that accused did "make and forge the following check for money, to-wit: 'No. 26. Marietta, Ga., July 17th, 1894. The First National Bank: Pay to the order of Mrs. Anna Lyons, twenty-five dollars 00/100, $25 00/100, E. C. Henderson,'—meaning C. E. Henderson of the firm of Henderson and Austin," was held to be insufficient.—Hickin v. State, 96 Ga. 759, 22 S. E. 297.

—Bond charged forged, indictment or information failing to show that there was both an obligee and an obligor, is insufficient.—State v. Briggs, 34 Vt. 501.

—Pension check drawn by an authorized officer on an assistant treasurer of the United States, directing the payment of money, charged to have been altered and forged by falsely and fraudulently placing the name of the payee thereon as his indorsement, held not to sufficiently describe any falsely made or altered writing for the purpose of securing money upon the United States, within the meaning of Rev. Stats., § 5421 (2 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., p. 303), or of defrauding the United States within the meaning of Rev. Stats., § 5418 (2 Fed. Stats. Ann., 1st ed., p. 300).—United States v. Albert, 45 Fed. 552.

Within the rules above laid down, an application for an insurance policy, being charged to have been forged, under a statute making it a crime to counterfeit any warrant, order, or request for the payment of money, or for the delivery of any property, or of any writing of value, the indictment or information must allege, in the language of the statute, that the insurance policy was or is a "writing of value."<sup>15</sup> Bank-check may be described as an order for money, or as a bill of exchange,<sup>16</sup> but the indictment or information must set out the name of the payee thereof, or it will be insufficient.<sup>17</sup> Bill charged to have been forged under a fictitious name,<sup>18</sup> subsequent indorsements need not be set out;<sup>19</sup> and where a bill of acceptance drawn by accused is alleged to have been forged, an allegation that the acceptance was indorsed on the face of the instrument, is sufficient.<sup>20</sup> Deed charged to have been forged, the indictment or information need not set out the title of the person intended to be defrauded, nor in what the forgery consisted;<sup>21</sup> nor need it allege that the instrument, if genuine, would have conveyed the land, it being sufficient to say that it purported to convey the land;<sup>22</sup> the execution or acknowledgment of the deed need not be charged,<sup>23</sup> or be alleged that the instrument was sealed,<sup>24</sup> because the word "deed," in and of itself, imports a completed instrument.<sup>25</sup> An acknowledgment to a deed charged to have been forged, an indictment or information which sets forth the certificate of acknowledgment without venue, and without averring that the commissioner of deeds, whose name is alleged to have been forged, had authority to take acknowledgments, is fatally defective.<sup>26</sup> Mortgage charged to have been forged, covers an instrument partly in writing describes the instrument as "a certain instrument in writing commonly called a mortgage, for payment of money," imports the forgery of a sealed instrument.<sup>27</sup> An instrument alleged to have been forged, in the following terms: "Akron, May 2, 1874, Mr. Schroeder: Please let Mr. Borswick have his clothes, and I will hold his pay till next Tuesday. "Tenor" binds pleader to strict recital.—Com. v. Stevens, 1 Mass. 203.

Technical words not necessary to a sufficient description, if otherwise good. "Tenor," etc., need not be used to express the fact that the instrument is set forth with literal accuracy; "of the purport and effect following," said to be sufficient, at least where followed by a correct copy of the instrument.—State v. Johnson, 26 Iowa 407, 96 Am. Dec. 158; State v. Duffield, 49 W. Va. 274, 39 S. E. 577.

Compare: Davis v. State, 2 Ohio St. 91.

<sup>7</sup> Material parts only of instrument alleged to have been forged need be set out.—Haupt v. State, 108 Ga. 53, 75 Am. St. Rep. 19, 34 S. E. 313.

Draft subject of forgery, it is not necessary to set out figures cut therein. See, infra, § 687.

Indorsements subsequently made need not be set out. See, infra, § 686.

Marginal devices, figures, etc., need not be set out. See, infra, § 687.

Revenue stamp on check need not be set out. See, infra, § 687.

ment thus set forth must be shown in the proof with the same accuracy;<sup>8</sup> hence, an indictment or information charging forgery of an instrument which "is in the tenor substantially as follows," is insufficient, because the terms are contradictory.<sup>9</sup>

Affidavit required by statute to accompany the instrument charged to have been forged in order to validate it, the indictment or information must set out the affidavit and allege that it accompanied the instrument.<sup>10</sup>

Facsimile of the instrument alleged to have been forged may be substituted for a copy thereof in those cases where there is doubt or difficulty as to particular words.<sup>11</sup>

Under statutory provisions in some jurisdictions, the purport of the instrument may be set out without setting out the tenor thereof;<sup>12</sup> while in other jurisdictions it is provided by statute that the indictment need contain only a statement of the offense in ordinary and concise language, with such a description of the forged instrument as is necessary to enable the accused to understand what is intended, and to know what may be proved against him;<sup>13</sup> while in still other jurisdictions the statutes provide that the instrument may be described either by its purport or by the name under which it is generally known.<sup>14</sup> is not necessary that an indictment or information charging forgery shall contain a purport clause,<sup>2</sup> it being sufficient to set out the instrument according to its tenor.<sup>3</sup> In fact, an indictment or information should never set out the instrument both according to "purport" and "tenor,"<sup>4</sup> because where the instrument is set out the purport thereof necessarily appears;<sup>5</sup> and where the instrument is described both by its purport and its tenor, should there be any repugnancy between the two descriptions, it will be fatal.<sup>6</sup>

"Purport" of an instrument means the substance thereof as it appears on the face of the instrument to one who reads it.<sup>7</sup> Setting forth by "purport and effect" does not mean an exact copy,<sup>8</sup> but the substance of the instrument only,<sup>9</sup> and in this respect differs from

ting forth by purport a check alleged to have been forged, it is not necessary to allege the name of the bank on which the instrument was drawn.<sup>15</sup> Describing an instrument alleged to have been forged as "a certain instrument in writing commonly called a 'deed,' purporting to be the act of one A, by which the interest in certain real property purported to be transferred and conveyed by A to the said B," held to be insufficient;<sup>16</sup> and an allegation that accused unlawfully, and feloniously made and forged a deed purporting to be the act of a fictitious person, is not sufficient; the indictment or information must allege that a fictitious name or pretended signature of a person not in existence was affixed to the instrument;<sup>17</sup> "purporting to be the act of A, a fictitious person" merely charges that A is a fictitious person, not that the instrument purported to be the act of a fictitious person, and is therefore bad.<sup>18</sup> Setting out according to purport a promissory note alleged to have been forged, it is not necessary to allege or show a revenue stamp, required by law, was affixed to it,<sup>19</sup> nor allege the date of making or the maturity of the note;<sup>20</sup> and where an indorsement on such note is charged to have been forged, it is not necessary to state the name of the maker of the note, or where it was payable.<sup>21</sup>

§ 679. — EFFECT OF VIDELICET CLAUSE. An indictment or information describing by setting out an instrument alleged to have been forged, should not only set out the instrument but should profess to do so.<sup>1</sup> This is usually accomplished by the videlicet clause, that is, by

§ 680. — AMBIGUITY AND REPUGNANCY—IN GENERAL. We have already seen<sup>1</sup> that an indictment or information charging the making of a false instrument, or the altering of a genuine instrument, must be certain both in charging as to the matter alleged and as to the person accused,<sup>2</sup> and that a failure in this respect is ground for quashing;<sup>3</sup> likewise any repugnancy in the allegations<sup>4</sup> between the purport clause and the tenor clause as to the instrument, where both clauses are used, will render the indictment or information bad,<sup>5</sup> except in those jurisdic-an allegation in the purport clause that the act was done by the accused as an agent,<sup>12</sup> or as a partner,<sup>13</sup> and the copy of the instrument set out fails to designate the capacity in which the act was done, the repugnancy will not be fatal.

§ 682. ——— IN NAMES OF CORPORATIONS. The rules laid down in the preceding section relative to repugnancy in the names of persons, applies also in the case of repugnancy in the names of corporations. Thus, it has been said that an indictment or information charging the forgery of a check, and in the purport clause naming the bank upon which the check was drawn as the "City Bank of Dallas," but in the tenor clause setting out a check on the "City Bank," was fatally defective because of repugnance.<sup>1</sup> Where, in the purport clause, the indictment or information sets forth that the instrument alleged to have been forged purported to be the act of a corporation, and in the tenor clause, sets out an instrument purporting to be signed by the officers of the corporation, the repugnance is fatal.<sup>2</sup> Likewise in an indictment charging the forgery of a railroad ticket, in the purport clause alleging that the forgery purported to be the act of A, as agent of a named railroad company, and in the tenor clause the instrument is set out, showing that it was signed by B, the name of A nowhere appearing in the instrument, the repugnance between the purport and the tenor clause is fatal.<sup>3</sup> But the addition of words showing that the company was an incorporated concern will not constitute repugnance. Thus, where an indictment charged accused with forging a policy of inof forging instrument in name of B and instrument set out purported to be executed by B and A, the accused, held not to constitute a repugnance.

insurance of the "Traveler's Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut," with intent to defraud the "Traveler's Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, which was then and there a corporation duly organized," does not constitute repugnance.<sup>4</sup>

§ 683. — DESIGNATING INSTRUMENT BY NAME. In the absence of statutory provision it is not necessary, even if permissible, to describe the instrument alleged to have been forged by the name under which it is usually known,<sup>1</sup> and some of the cases hold that when the name is set out in the indictment or information, this allegation must be proved as laid,<sup>2</sup> although the weight of authority, and the better doctrine is thought to be, that a mistake of the pleader in designating the name of the instrument alleged to have been forged or altered, and which is set forth, will not vitiate an indictment or information otherwise good.<sup>3</sup> The careful pleader will charge the instrument alleged to have been forged as a certain paper writing purporting to be an instrument designated in the statute,<sup>4</sup> or set out the instrument in full without naming it, even in those jurisdictions in which, by statute, the instrument may be described by the name under which it is usually known, for the reason that the legal name of any particular instrument is purely a question of law for the court.<sup>5</sup> Thus, it has been said that where an instrument as set out in the indictment or information is an evidence of debt, it does not matter whether such instrument is designated as a "certificate of deposit," a "deposit slip," or as a "deposit ticket."<sup>6</sup>

Under statute in many, if not in the majority of the states, it is sufficient to describe the instrument alleged to have been forged by the name under which it is usually known, without setting it out by tenor,<sup>7</sup> because under such a statute minuteness of description is dispensed with, so long as the indictment or information meets the requirement<sup>8</sup> that it shall notify the accused of the charge against him.<sup>9</sup> However, under such a statute an indictment or information which sets out in full the instrument alleged to have been forged, but fails to designate it in the purport clause by the name under which it is gener-

Thus, under a statute providing "that in any indictment for forging any instrument, it shall be sufficient to describe such instrument by any name or designation by which the same shall be usually known, without setting out a copy or facsimile thereof, or otherwise describing the same," an allegation that the accused forged "a certain promissory note, purporting to be the act of one Robert F. Springer, by which a pecuniary demand and obligation for the payment of" a sum named "by the said Robert F. § 688. FACTS EXTRINSIC TO INSTRUMENT—IN GENERAL. We have already seen that the indictment or information must show on its face (1) that the writing charged to have been forged is one of the instruments enumerated in the statute, and (2) that it is a writing apparently valid, and if valid, obligatory.<sup>1</sup> In all other instances the general rule applies that if the instrument is void on its face, it is not the subject of forgery, except in those cases where an instrument, of no apparent validity, is capable of working injury by reason of extrinsic facts, and an indictment or information setting out such extrinsic facts will be supported.<sup>2</sup> Where the instrument is so imperfect and incomplete, in and of itself, that its real meaning and terms are not intelligible from its words and figures, but are to be derived from extrinsic facts, and its capacity to injure is dependent upon extrinsic facts, such extrinsic facts may be averred in the indictment or information, and the instrument, its meaning and purport, made clear and intelligible to the court thereby; and where the averment of such extrinsic facts makes it to appear judicially with as much certainty as if the extrinsic facts were set out in the face of the instrument, and the instrument itself pleaded in hæc verba, the indictment or information will be sufficient.<sup>3</sup> But where the

§ 689. — WHEN TO BE ALLEGED AND SUFFICIENCY OF AVERMENTS. We have already seen that at common law an indictment charging forgery was extremely technical,<sup>1</sup> and that the instrument alleged to have been forged was required to be set out in hæc verba,<sup>2</sup> and this is also required under statute in many of the states.<sup>3</sup> Where the instrument set out is such that the court may judicially see that it might be made the vehicle of fraud and prejudice, averments of extrinsic circumstances are not necessary;<sup>4</sup> neither are such averments necessary where the

778. The courts say: "It is scarcely necessary to observe that the instrument set out in this indictment is not a promissory note, within the statute of Anne; and it is agreed that the writing does not come within any of the statutes of forgery, it being payable neither in money nor goods, but labor.

. . . Another defect renders it utterly void, of itself, as a common law contract. It expresses no value received, nor any consideration whatever; and no action could be maintained upon it, if genuine, as a special agreement to perform labor, without averring and proving a consideration dehors the instrument."

"Bozeman, December 25, '94. Schumacher, Esq.: Please pay to the order of W. L. Evans, the amt. of twenty dollars ($20.00) and charge to him at my office. Johnson & McCarthy."—State v. Evans, 15 Mont. 539, 39 Pac. 850. The courts held the above instrument, if genuine, could not possibly damage, even if accepted; that Johnson & McCarthy were not made responsible, and Evans could accomplish as much without the instrument as with it. Johnson & McCarthy did not ask to have the amount charged to them but to Evans; that the order, as it appeared on its face, would not accomplish the advance of the money by Schumacher to Evans on the credit of Johnson & McCarthy; that Schumacher would as readily have advanced the money without the order as with it.

formation must allege that advances had been made, thereby showing that liens existed, because if there were no liens, the landlord could not be injured by the false instrument.<sup>15</sup>

§ 690. ——— EXPLANATION OF INSTRUMENT. In those cases in which an explanation of the instrument alleged to have been forged is required in order to show that it was such an instrument, as may be forged under the statute, or to show that it may affect property interests, all the extrinsic matters and facts necessary thereto must be set out in the indictment or information, otherwise it will be insufficient. For example, an indictment charging accused with forging a written instrument of the following tenor: "April 28th, 1885. Dear Sir: I have nothing to do with Venie Dixon patch cotton they are welcome to it and to do as they please with it. W. W. Roberts. & all so Mary Ann the same. W. W. Roberts." meaning thereby that the Roberts named was the landlord and waived his lien on the patch cotton of one Venie Dixon, was insufficient because it failed to set out extrinsic facts showing that W. W. Roberts was the landlord, and that as such he had a lien on the "patch cotton."<sup>1</sup> Where accused was charged with having forged an instrument in the following form: "Due 8.25, Askew Brothers," the indictment alleging that thereby the accused meant that eight dollars, and twenty-five cents were due from Askew Brothers, who were partners, was sufficient;<sup>2</sup> but where the instrument alleged to have been forged was of the following tenor: "Boston, Aug. 6, 1868, St. James Hotel. indictment did not set out extrinsic matter to show how the instrument might defraud, it was held bad.<sup>3</sup>

§ 691. ——— EXPLANATION OF DEFECTIVE EXPRESSIONS. In those cases in which an explanation of defective expressions in an instrument alleged to have been forged is necessary to make the instrument alleged to have been forged intelligible or effective, the extrinsic matter necessary to afford such explanation should be set out. Thus, where an order alleged to have been forged by the accused is not addressed to any person, and has an incomplete date, the indictment or information must set out facts explanatory of each omission;<sup>1</sup> and an order for the payment of money in the following form: "M. C. & Co.: Pay Binam $5.75. J. L. C.," being alleged to have been forged, with the intent to defraud Millen, Connable & Co., the indictment or information must further set forth extrinsic facts showing the instrument to have been a money order by an averment of the meaning of the initials used in the instrument.<sup>2</sup> But in those instances in which the defect is not such as to obscure the meaning, or affect the validity of the instrument, extrinsic facts need not be alleged. Thus, where the defect consists in the signing of a promissory note, in the English language, in German or Gothic characters, the letters used being the same whether the name was written in English or in German, it is not necessary to allege the identity of the name or give an English translation;<sup>3</sup> and it has been held that where the indictment charges the forgery of an instrument in the name of Hannah McCormick and the instrument set out purported to be signed in the name of "Hannah McGormick," it will be sufficient without further allegation as to identity.<sup>4</sup> The Louisiana court has

§ 692. JOINDER—OF DEFENDANT. Under the general rule regarding criminal pleading,<sup>1</sup> all the persons interested in perpetrating and carrying out a forgery in any of its phases, may be properly joined as defendants in the same indictment.<sup>2</sup>

§ 693. — OF OFFENSES—DISTINCT CRIMES. The question whether the making of a forged instrument, the having in possession of a forged instrument, with the intent to pass the same, and the uttering or passing of such instrument, constitute but one offense, or are separate and distinct offenses, seems to be purely a matter of statutory provision and statutory construction. Under some statutes it is held that the forging, having in possession, uttering and passing, are each distinct and separate offenses, and for that reason may not be joined in one indictment.<sup>1</sup> In those jurisdictions in which this rule pre-that the instrument alleged to have been passed was forged by the accused, and for that reason was not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the forgery.<sup>5</sup> And in a case where there were several drafts on the same sheet of paper, which were uttered and passed at the same time by the same person, it was said that, while the uttering was but a single offense,<sup>6</sup> the forging of each draft was a separate offense.<sup>7</sup>

§ 694. — — — ACTS OR STEPS IN THE OFFENSE. Upon general principles, a single offense can not be split into separate parts, and the accused prosecuted for each of such separate parts, although each part may, in and of itself, constitute a separate offense; if the accused be prosecuted for one part, that ends the prosecution for that offense, provided such part of itself constitutes an offense for which a conviction can be had.<sup>1</sup> Consequently, where the several offenses charged, though distinct in point of law, yet all springing out of substantially the same transaction, or are so connected in their facts as to make substantial parts of the same transaction, or a connected series of facts, the accused can not be prejudiced in his defense by their joinder, and the court will not quash the indictment or information, or compel an election.<sup>2</sup> In harmony with these principles, in many of the jurisdictions, a charge of forging and a charge of uttering may be joined, on the ground that where a statute declares an act unlawful when perpetrated in any one or all of several ways, the indictment may charge the

ferent dates, for different sums, purporting to be signed by different persons; in the second count there being a charge of uttering one acquittance and receipt; in the third count there being a charge of forging and counterfeiting the same acquittance and receipt, the indictment was held to be good, on the ground that the receipts were charged to have been uttered at one and the same time and might constitute a single offense—the uttering of many forged receipts.<sup>13</sup>

Where the statute permits to be joined a count for forging, with a count for uttering a forged instrument, the joinder permitted applies only where the two offenses relate to the same instrument.<sup>14</sup>

Conviction can not be had on both counts where two or more counts are joined in the same indictment, one for the forgery and one for the uttering or passing, as that would be equivalent to a conviction for two separate and distinct offenses.<sup>15</sup>

§ 696. — DUPLICITY. The question of duplicity in an indictment or information charging forgery, is governed by the statutory provisions and constructions already discussed, under which the acts of forging and uttering are regarded as two distinct offenses,<sup>1</sup> or as steps only, in the perpetration of the same offense.<sup>2</sup> Where the latter doctrine prevails, an indictment or information charging, in one count, the forgery and uttering or passing of the forged instrument, is not bad for duplicity,<sup>3</sup> although there is authority to the effect that charging, in one count, the uttering of a check, knowing it to have been forged, and the forging of the indorsement thereon and then uttering the same, is bad for duplicity.<sup>4</sup> Under such statutes, duplicity can not be charged against an indictment or information alleging forging of an instrument, in one

Thomas*, 76 Mass. (10 Gray) 483.

An allegation in an indictment for forgery, in a single count, of all of a series of acts named in the statute, either of which would constitute the crime of forgery, is not an allegation of two offenses, because all constitute but the single crime of forgery under § 470 Cal. An indictment for forgery which charges the accused, in the same count, with having forged an indorsement on a draft and also with having uttered and passed the draft knowing the forged indorsement to have been written thereon, does not charge two offenses. — People v. Frank, 28 Cal. 507.

count, and the uttering of it in another count.<sup>5</sup> Forging and uttering being distinct offenses, an indictment or information charging both in the same count, is bad for duplicity,<sup>6</sup> although there is authority to the contrary.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where an indictment charging forgery sets forth, in one count, two distinct offenses requiring different punishment—e. g., forgery of a mortgage, and forgery of a receipt indorsed thereon—the indictment will be bad for duplicity.<sup>8</sup>

The forging, procuring, or causing to be forged and aiding in forging are not only the same offense under the statute, but in legal contemplation the same act, so that an indictment so charging is not duplicitous.—State v. Morton, 27 Vt. 310, 65 Am. Dec. 201.

Generally speaking, an indictment or information charging forgery, which sets out two acts constituting the same offense, is not open to charge of duplicity.<sup>9</sup> Thus, charging in the same count the forging of a "check or bill of exchange," is not open to the objection of duplicity, the terms being synonymous;<sup>10</sup> and charging the various acts enumerated in the statute, any one or all of which may constitute forgery, these acts being set out in the disjunctive in the statute, an indictment charging in the language of the statute, except that they are pleaded in the conjunctive, will not render the instrument open to the objection of duplicity.<sup>11</sup>

§ 698. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT.<sup>1</sup> Inasmuch as the crime of fornication is purely a statutory offense,<sup>2</sup> it is sufficient for an indictment or information to charge the alleged offense in the language of the statute denouncing it,<sup>3</sup> or substantially in that language,<sup>4</sup> where the statute contains all the elements of the offense.<sup>5</sup> The crime

<sup>2</sup> Fornication was not indictable at common law, although the offense was contra bonus moris, unless committed so openly as to be a public nuisance, in which case it was indictable as a nuisance, not as fornication.—Carotti v. State, 42 Miss. 334, 97 Am. Dec. 465; Anderson v. Com., 26 Va. (5 Rand.) 627, 16 Am. Dec. 776; Com. v. Isaacs, 26 Va. (5 Rand.) 634; State v. Foster, 21 W. Va. 767.

need not be designated by the statutory name where the criminal acts are set out.<sup>6</sup> It has been said that the offense is sufficiently described by charging an unlawful "bedding and cohabiting" together;<sup>7</sup> but this is an obiter holding, only, in the case, and it is thought that something further must be alleged under most, if not all, the present statutes.<sup>8</sup> It is held in some cases that the act constituting the offense need not be stated.<sup>9</sup> The allegations must in all cases be sufficiently full and precise to cover every element under the terms of the statute under which the indictment or information is drawn; that is to say, the particular requirements of the statute under which drawn, must be fully complied with. Thus, the statute prohibiting a man and woman, being unmarried to each other, from living together as husband and wife, an indictment or information simply charging that a named woman accused "did bed to, and live with" a named man, is insufficient;<sup>10</sup> and where the statute requires that both parties shall be, at the time of the act complained of, single or unmarried, the indictment must state that both parties, at the time of the illicit intercourse, were unmar-

Charge that the defendants, a man and woman, "did live together in fornication" is sufficient.—Lawson v. State, 20 Ala. 65, 56 Am. Dec. 182.

ried to each other, and the prosecution must prove this allegation to be a fact,<sup>11</sup> although there are cases to the contrary.<sup>12</sup> The statute defining "fornication" as "the living together and carnal intercourse with each other, or habitual carnal intercourse without living together, of a man and woman both being unmarried," an indictment or information which fails to follow the language of the statute, but merely charges habitual carnal intercourse, is insufficient.<sup>13</sup>

Surplusage, under the general rule of criminal pleading in this as in other crimes, will be disregarded. Thus, where the indictment or information charges the commission of the alleged offense on a designated date "and on divers other days and times, before and after that day," these added words may be rejected as surplusage.<sup>14</sup> And the same is true of other like unnecessary allegations.<sup>15</sup>

§ 699. PARTICULAR ALLEGATIONS—AS TO MARRIAGE. There is an irreconcilable conflict in the adjudicated cases as to whether an indictment or information charging fornication shall contain allegations as to marriage of the parties to another, or to each other. This conflict is due to two causes: (1) The diversity in the statutory provisions relating to and punishing the offense, and (2) the diversity of definition and opinion as to the true meaning of the word "fornication." The safer and better course on the part of the pleader is thought to be to allege facts negating the marriage of the parties to each other,<sup>1</sup> and where the offense, under the statute, is punishable only when committed by an unmarried woman, the fact that she was unmarried should be alleged;<sup>2</sup> although there are well reasoned cases to the effect that this allegation is unnecessary, as being a matter of defense,<sup>3</sup> the contention being that the charge of fornication raises the necessary presumption that the woman was unmarried, and that, consequently, the prosecution is not required either to allege or prove that fact.<sup>4</sup> habitually engaging in unlawful sexual intercourse by the parties charged. If the prosecution must show guilt beyond the intent to do the act, the parties not being married to each other, those who live in habitual sexual intercourse believing it to be lawful, as Mormons, free-lovers, and the like, would be free from prosecution for this violation of the penal statutes.<sup>2</sup> Fornication, like adultery, is a joint physical act, but there need not be a joint criminal intent; the bodies must concur in the act, but not necessarily the minds. While the criminal intent may exist in the mind of one of the parties to the physical act, there may be no such intent in the mind of the other party; that is to say, one may be guilty and the other innocent by reason of insanity, fraud, mistake, and the like; but the innocence of one party will not relieve the party with the guilty intent.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>15</sup> "The crime of fornication" being charged in the indictment, there being no such crime provided for or designated in the statute prohibiting and punishing fornication and adultery between persons within a specified degree of consanguinity, does not vitiate the indictment or information, where it is otherwise sufficient to charge the offense under the statute, under the rule that unnecessary allegations will be disregarded. — Territory v. Corbett, 3 Mont. 50.

§ 702. — LIVING TOGETHER—COHABITATION. Where, in the statutory definition of fornication, living together and cohabitation is an essential element, it is manifestly somewhat difficult to state the composite facts constituting the offense, and for this reason it has been said to be sufficient simply to charge living together in fornication.<sup>1</sup> We have already seen that the obiter holding, maintaining that the simple allegation of an unlawful "bedding and cohabiting together" is a sufficient description of the offense, does not seem to meet the requirements, and for that reason is insufficient,<sup>2</sup> because the weight of authority is to the effect that to constitute cohabitation, in the sense in which it is used in the statute, a man and a woman, not being married to each other, must live or dwell acts, not indicating a consecutive or prearranged continuation of the illicit intercourse, does not constitute living together within the statute.—Bodiford v. State, 86 Ala. 67, 11 Am. St. Rep. 20, 5 So. 559, citing State v. Crowley, 13 Ala. 172; Collins v. State, 14 Ala. 608; Quartemas v. State, 48 Ala. 269; Hall v. State, 53 Ala. 463.

The commission of such acts must have been under such circumstances as to show an abiding and cohabiting together in a relationship like that of husband and wife.—State v. Cassida, 67 Kan. 171, 72 Pac. 522.

They must have lived together in the same habitation as husband and wife.—State v. Chandler, 132 Mo. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 483, 53 S. W. 797.

There must be a living together as if the conjugal relation existed, and the illicit intercourse must be habitual, but it is not necessary that the acts be open and notorious, or that the parties hold themselves out to the public as husband and wife.—State v. Poyner, 57 Wash. 489, 107 Pac. 181.

Clandestine acts of sexual intercourse, however often repeated, do not constitute unlawful cohabitation, unless the parties openly and notoriously live together as paramour and concubine.—Kinard v. State, 57 Miss. 134. See Wright v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 358, 35 Am. Dec. 126; State v. Gartrell, 14 Ind. 280; Gaylor v. McHenry, 15 Ind. 383.

Clandestine sexual intercourse between a man and woman, not married to each other, though tutes the act of fornication.<sup>6</sup> Where, under the statute, habitual carnal intercourse, without living together, constitutes fornication, an indictment or information alleging habitual intercourse, but omitting the statutory words "without living together," will be sufficient,<sup>7</sup> because those words do not enter into the definition of the offense, being merely descriptive of the parties.<sup>8</sup>

§ 703. DESCRIPTION OF PARTIES. An indictment or information charging fornication must so describe the parties as to bring them within the provisions of the particular statute under which the instrument is drawn. Thus, where under the statute the crime can be committed by a married man with an unmarried woman only, these facts must be distinctly alleged.<sup>1</sup> An indictment or information charging fornication which describes one of the persons accused as an unmarried male, and the other as an unmarried female, is not open to the objection that it does not allege that one of the parties is a man and the other a woman;<sup>2</sup> and a like charge that two named persons did married to others, is not sufficient.—State v. Chandler, 132 Mo. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 483, 33 S. W. 797.

Illicit intercourse between teacher and pupil on a few occasions, in school room, after school hours, does not constitute the offense denounced by statute.—Granberry v. State, 61 Miss. 400.

Habitual sexual intercourse is the gist of the offense.—Newman v. State, 69 Miss. 393, 10 So. 580.

Occasional secret acts of illicit sexual intercourse are not sufficient.—Thomas v. State, 39 Fla. 437, 22 So. 725; State v. Miller, 42 W. Va. 215, 24 S. E. 882.

“unlawfully cohabit together, and have sexual intercourse with each other,” they “not being married to each other,” is not open to the objection that it does not allege them to be a man and a woman, for this presumption necessarily follows.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the indictment or information described the woman as a “spinster” whereas the evidence shows her to have been married, is not ground for an arrest of judgment;<sup>4</sup> charging that Sam Means had sexual intercourse with Frances Slayton, and that Sam Means was a man “and the Slayton an unmarried woman,” the words “the Slayton” were held to obviously refer to the above mentioned Frances Slayton.<sup>5</sup> Where an indictment charging a man with fornication alleged that the name of the woman was unknown, this will not render the instrument insufficient.<sup>6</sup> Under the Texas statute, it seems that an indictment charging fornication which fails to allege that both parties to the offense were unmarried, is fatally defective.<sup>7</sup>

§ 704. JOINDER OF OFFENSES. It has been said that as fornication is an essential fact constituting crimes arising out of illicit carnal connection, and is included within them,<sup>1</sup> consequently, that in an indictment charging seduction accused may be convicted of fornication,<sup>2</sup> upon the well recognized principle that there may be a conviction for a lesser under an indictment for a greater offense,<sup>3</sup> although there are authorities to the contrary.<sup>4</sup> On a like reasoning it is held, in some jurisdictions, to be a well-settled rule of criminal procedure that on an indictment for adultery, with proper allegations, a conviction can be had, under appropriate evidence, for fornication. The question is said not to be whether one offense includes the other, but simply one of allegation, and that if all the necessary elements to constitute fornication are charged in the indictment or information, a conviction of that crime may be had,<sup>5</sup> although there are cases to the contrary.<sup>6</sup>

§ 705. JOINDER OF PARTIES. The question whether an indictment or information charging fornication shall join both the accused as defendants in one indictment, or whether they shall be proceeded against in separate indictments, is in some jurisdictions a matter of statutory regulation. Under some statutes the accused are required to be indicted severally.<sup>1</sup> Where there are no statutory regulations or requirements, the accused may be indicted separately,<sup>2</sup> or jointly,<sup>3</sup> at the election of the prosecution; and it has been said that where they are jointly indicted under a charge of an unlawful "bedding and cohabiting together" the offense is sufficiently described, and the charge sustained by showing a habitual surrender of the person of one for the gratification of the other,<sup>4</sup> but this holding is purely obiter,<sup>5</sup> and not thought to be sound.<sup>6</sup>

§ 706. JOINDER OF COUNTS. It is a well-settled principle of criminal pleading that where two or more crimes arising out of the same act or transaction are of a kindred nature and liable to punishment of the same general character, they may all be joined, in several counts, in the same indictment,<sup>1</sup> although the doctrine does not prevail in some jurisdictions,<sup>2</sup> and the contrary practice is required by statute in still other jurisdictions.<sup>3</sup> On the principle that crimes of a kindred nature arising out of the same act or transaction may be united in the same indictment, an indictment or information charging fornication has been held to properly charge counts of fornication in connection with counts for abduction,<sup>4</sup>

Joinder of offenses.—"Illicit carnal connection is called by different names, according to the circumstances which attend it. Unaccompanied with any facts which tend to aggravate it, it is simple fornication. When it causes the birth of an illegitimate child, it is fornication and bastardy. When the man who commits it is married, it is adultery. When the parties by whom it is done are related to one another within certain degrees of consanguinity or affinity, it becomes incest. Where it is preceded by fraudulent acts (including a promise of marriage) to gain the consent of the female, who is under twenty-one years of age and of good repute, it assumes another name, and by the statute is called seduction. But the body of all these offenses is the illicit connection. In each case the essential fact which constitutes the crime is fornication."—Dinkey v. Com., 17 Pa. St. 126, 55 Am. Dec. 542.

adultery,<sup>5</sup> bastardy,<sup>6</sup> seduction,<sup>7</sup> and rape,<sup>8</sup> these all being crimes of a kindred nature which may arise out of the same transaction.

§ 707. — DUPPLICITY AND ELECTION. The joinder of different offenses in different counts, in the same indictment or information charging fornication, is subject to the general rules regarding duplicity. Under some statutes there may be a joinder, in one count, charging different kindred offenses of varying degrees—e. g., fornication and bastardy,<sup>1</sup> without being open to the objection of duplicity. An indictment charging fornication on a specified day and on “divers other days,” will not render it void for duplicity.<sup>2</sup> Where several counts are joined embracing a statement of the crime in different forms, or crimes of kindred nature and varying degrees of the same offense, the prosecution can not be compelled to elect upon which of the counts the trial will be had.<sup>3</sup>
